Reaction In Germany Awaited After Americans Speak Out

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(AP).—Diplomatic circles here openly speculated to-day on possibilities of a complete rupture of German-American relations, but State Department officials termed such discussion premature.

No effort was made in Government quarters, however, to minimize the critical stage reached with the United States' barbed rejection of a German protest against a recent attack by Harold Ickes, Secretary for the Interior, on Nazi policies.

Word went out from the State Department that the United States would take no further step unless forced to by Germany.

Hopes were expressed privately the German Government would heed the blunt statement of Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, that Ickes' views were those of the overwhelming majority of Americans.

Coinciding with Welles' plain-speaking to Dr. Hans Thomsen, the German Charge d'Affaires, was a personal condemnation of Germany, Japan and all forms of dictatorial government by Chairman Pittman (Dem., Nevada) of the United States Senate Foreign Relations committee.

Shortly afterward Senator King (Dem., Utah) asked the State Department to try to prevent Germany from obtaining American oil seized by the Mexican government.

King said he had seen published reports "that the Mexican Government has signed an agreement by which $17,000,000 worth of petroleum properties will be bartered for German merchandise, machinery and products during 1939.

Seized U.S. Mail

"Another report that I have seen," he wrote the department, "states in effect that arrangements have been completed by which the German navy will be supplied largely with oil that belong to American Nationals, but which the Mexican government has seized.

"It seems to me that if the Mexican government is pursuing the course indicated, our government should use all reasonable means to protect the interests of American Nationals."

King, a vigorous critic of the Nazi government, told reporters:

"The only way to deal with Germany, if she continues her barbaric

Kirby Warns On Care Of T.B. Indigents

TORONTO, Dec. 23 (CP)—Warning was issued today by Hon. Harold Kirby, Minister of Health, and Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Public Welfare, that municipalities are responsible for adequate "after care" of the indigent tuberculosis patients discharged from sanatoria where they have been maintained at the expense of the province.

Since the Ontario government has assumed the $1,500,000 annual cost of treatment of tuberculosis sufferers, the two departments are insisting that the municipalities should provide post sanitoria treatment and care.

"All medical officers of health and boards of health in the province are being advised today of the insistence of the two departments upon proper care being given those discharged from sanatoria. The new plan calls for the secretary of a local board of health to be notified when a patient from that municipality is ready for discharge from a sanatorium, so that proper provision can be made for the adequate after care of patients, including board, lodging and clothing for those unable to provide these necessities for themselves," said a joint statement from Mr. Kirby and Mr. Cross.

"Failure to make these arrangements within 30 days of such notice will result in the patient remaining in the sanatorium at the expense of the municipality. Municipalities are asked to make annual appropriations in their budgets to be used specifically for the after care of ex sanatorium patients.

C.C.F. Club Announces Plans For Boycott Of German, Italian And Japanese Goods

Democracy must be protected, was the slogan of the Peterborough C.C.F. club last night, when members passed unanimously a resolution notifying local retailers that in another month they will boycott German, Italian and Japanese goods.

The measure was passed "in defence of democracy" and carries notification to storekeepers that they have 30 days in which to fill their shelves with French or British goods in place of those shipped from totalitarian states, if they want C.C.F. custom.

Acclaimed James Hamilton, veteran of many a municipal fight, was returned for a second term by acclamation as Mayor of Peterborough. It is the second acclamation for Mayor Hamilton as he won the Mayor's chair last year without opposition.

German Press Ridicules Roosevelt While Waiting Hitler's Cue On Reaction To Apology Refusal

BERLIN, Dec. 23 — (AP).—Nazi-controlled newspapers ridiculed president Roosevelt today as Germany's officialdom and press awaited word from Chancellor Hitler as to the next move in the Reich-United States tension arising from interior secretary Ickes' anti-dictatorship speech.

The press apparently had instructions to mark time on the Ickes affair until the government had time to formulate its stand following the firm rebuff of Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, of its request for an official apology for the secretary of the interior's remarks.

As a result bitter attacks on Ickes gave way to expressions of scorn for the president because he had received a medal awarded by the American Hebrew magazine.

Keeping It Mum

Late today the press still had published nothing of the German protest to Washington or Mr. Welles' reply.

Nachtausgabe in an editorial drew attention to the Jewish award to President Roosevelt and turned its cartoonist loose on Mr. Ickes.

Under the title, "Paradise of Gangsters, or Interior Minister Ickes Was Busy Outside," the cartoonist showed the secretary firing a snowball labelled "Germany" while behind him a figure labelled "Musica" (Philip Musica-Coster) slips from a house representing the United States with $40,000,000 booty over his shoulder.

Concerning the president, Nachtausgabe said: "The question remains open whether Roosevelt really feels honored by the Hebrew medal and how the American public, which in no way is to be identified with Jewish machinations in the States, will receive this newest demonstration of Jewry, for in the end the American suffers considerably under circumstances manufactured by Jewish gangsterdom, which repeatedly deals the reputation of the United States the heaviest blows."

She Got Her Letter

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 23 (AP).—An excited young woman called the post office and asked for the return of a letter she had mailed to a charitable organization.

She explained she had meant to place a $1 bill in the letter as a Christmas contribution, but had thoughtlessly put in her entire month's salary.

Postal officials told her there had been approximately 3,000,000 pieces of mail collected in the previous 24 hours but they went to work. They found the letter just as it was to be sent through a mail cancellation machine.

Mild And White Yuletide For Ontario

TORONTO, Dec. 23 — (CP). — A "partially white" Christmas was the best the Weatherman could promise Canada to-day in the way of weather for the coming week-end. Eastern sections of the Dominion will see snow upon the ground—if it isn't melted by the higher temperatures in sight—but a green Yuletide is in prospect for the West.

As a fairly heavy snowfall left most of Ontario covered to a depth of from two to four inches, Forecaster Frank O'Donnell of the Dominion Meteorological Bureau said in Toronto: "There's not much indication of a really cold Christmas. No extreme cold is in sight and the weather generally will be milder."

Fair weather and moderate temperatures were forecast for Western Canada which, in common with other sections of the country, so far has enjoyed the mildest pre-Christmas weather in years. Snow and rain is in prospect for the east to-night with rising temperatures.

Of all the provinces, Ontario had the best chance of enjoying a white Christmas. Heavy falls of snow were reported from Eastern, Central and Western sections of the province. Temperatures hovered around the freezing mark, 32 degrees above zero, and the forecast was that they would go higher.

A near blizzard left Peterborough streets covered to a depth of several inches of snow. The heaviest fall of the winter was reported from Kingston, but the fall did not extend as far east as Ottawa, where snow that fell in recent days had all but disappeared from city streets.

Snow fell intermittently in Toronto and other Central Ontario centres while the fall was general throughout Western Ontario. Two inches fell at Woodstock and at Galt sleigh bells were heard for the first time this winter after an all-night fall. Snow shovels were necessary in Galt. Chatham, Kitchener, St. Thomas and other points reported one to four-inch falls.

Leopards Kill Children

LUCKNOW, India, Dec. 23 (CP-Havas)—Three little girls and a boy have been killed during the past few days by Leopards terrorizing villages on the side of Mount Garhwal. The animals have been driven by hunger from the snow-covered mountain heights and bounties have been offered for their destruction.

Year's Battle Over $370 Through 6 Courts Leaves Tiny Reward

Flint, Mich., Dec. 23 (CP) A YEAR-LONG court battle over $370 found in a pile of old wood was ended here today with division of the money between Kenneth Proper, who found the money, and William Griffith, his landlord who owned the wood where the money was found. The action went through six courts and legal costs will absorb all but a few dollars of the money found.

Hungary Shapes Measure To Oust Jews

BUDAPEST, Dec. 23 — (AP). — Europe faced another Jewish problem today as the Hungarian parliament prepared to consider anti-semitic measures proposed by Premier Bela Imredi's government.

Up to now a haven of comparative security for Jews, Hungary seemed definitely headed for restrictive legislation barring thousands of Jews from certain businesses, professions and state employment.

Foreign consulates were expecting a storm of applications for visas from many of Hungary's estimated 600,000 "full" Jews and 200,000 described as "fractional" Jews, in a total population of 9,000,000.

The Hungarian Jewish community, expecting the proposed legislation would be severe, nevertheless was appalled by the sweeping regulations limiting the right to franchise and restricting participation in provisioned businesses to from six to 12 per cent of the total number of persons occupied in the various callings.

The government's attitude, however, was that the proposed Hungarian law was moderate in comparison with some statutes in Germany and Italy, because there was a provision for its gradual enforcement. It was not to go into full effect for five years.

As presented last night to the government party of national unity, the projected legislation would also provide that Jews vote separately, 30 days after non-Jews, although the purpose of such postponement was not clarified; the government would be empowered to regulate Jewish emigration; Jews would be limited to six per cent of the total engaged in journalism, engineering, law medicine and state employment, and in businesses up to 12 per cent; employers would report at intervals of six months on progress they were making in complying; no Jew could be elected to the upper house of parliament; the interior ministry would be authorized to invalidate citizenship acquired fraudulently; no Jews would be permitted in leading positions in threatres and motion pictures.

Prompt party approval was anticipated for the proposal, which parliament was due to receive today and vote upon after the Christmas recess.

The reaction of Hungarian Nazis, who had been clamoring for anti-Jewish legislation, was not immediately clarified. Their first expression was one of curiously-voiced dissatisfaction. They accused Imredi of "stealing their program."

Canada Sending Cod To Spanish Kiddies

OTTAWA, Dec. 23 (CP).—A contribution of $10,000 worth of codfish, purchased in New Brunswick and the Magdalen Islands, has been made by the Dominion Government to the international commission for the assistance of child refugees in Spain, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced today.

Decision to make this contribution was reached last October and the fish have now been purchased and shipped to Spain. The commission operates impartially in both government and insurgent territory.

The Prime Minister issued the following statement:

Some time ago the government of Canada received an appeal for aid from the international commission for the assistance of child refugees in Spain. This commission has its head office in Geneva, and is operating impartially in both government and insurgent territory. Its work is being financed, in large part, by contributions from governments. The United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Ireland have made substantial contributions, and the United States Government have also made available a considerable quantity of wheat.

Matches have to be damp-proof in the Panama Canal Zone. A special brand from Sweden is used there.

Utilities Commissioner, Board Of Education Also Given Acclamation

G. Wilson Craw Elected To School Board In Place Of Charles Shaw Retired All Other Retiring Members Returned

Municipal nominations at the City Hall this morning resulted in a broad sweep of acclamations for the candidates for the civic trusts of the Mayoralty, Utilities Commission and Board of Education.

Mayor Hamilton was elected for the second successive year without opposition; E. R. Shirley returns for another period of three years to the Utilities Commission; and for the Board of Education, three of the retiring members, Dr. A. Moir, W. A. Richardson and Dr. C. M. Scott, were re-elected, with one new trustee, G. Wilson Craw, city editor of the Examiner, who replaces Charles Shaw. These four members of the Board were elected by acclamation for two years.

Nominations for five aldermanic positions for two-year terms will be received tonight, beginning at 7.30 o'clock.

Today's Nominees.

The nominations filed with City Clerk Armstrong this morning from 10 to 11 o'clock were as follows:

FOR MAYOR—
James Hamilton, proposed by R. M. Glover and by Roland Denne.

FOR UTILITIES COMMISSIONER—
E. R. Shirley, proposed by G. R. Langley and F. M. Somerville.

FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION—
William A. Richardson, proposed by H. G. Walker and Alderman Herbert I. Bradburn.

Dr. Charles M. Scott, proposed by Alderman H. J. McCannan and Alderman H. I. Bradburn.

Dr. A. Moir, proposed by W. R. Morris and H. G. Walker.

G. Wilson Craw, proposed by Roland Denne and Alderman Glover.

Mayoral Address

Only a little group of citizens was present when the clocks struck 11, and City Clerk Armstrong announced the election of Mayor Hamilton. He first declared Mayor Hamilton re-elected, and then proceeded down the list in the accustomed order. Mr. Armstrong said it was usual for the candidates to address the assembly of citizens, and although there was only a small attendance the occasion invited any remarks that might be offered.

Mayor Hamilton said it afforded him a great deal of satisfaction and happiness in receiving again the confidence of the citizens of Peterborough in his election by acclamation as the Chief Magistrate of the city.

"I fully appreciate that trust, and will do all I can to merit during the year 1939," His Worship said. "We had published a few days ago a resume of the council's affairs this year as a matter of information to the people. I would call your attention to the fact that our overdraft at the bank is reduced about 50 per cent, $125,000 as compared with $260,000 at the same time a year ago. The monies that made it possible to bring about that reduction were largely taxes in arrears that were paid off this year. Our debenture debt has been reduced about $190,000, but that will not affect our tax rate.

"When I began my term as Mayor I had hopes of adding to the city's industries, but although a lot of work was done by Alderman Glover's committee, myself and the council as a whole we were not successful. In fact we lost one of our larger industries. In this coming year I feel we should strive to get at least one new industry to take its place."

Mayor Hamilton briefly touched on some of the accomplishments of the Board of Works, and said he hoped it would be able next year to extend the type of permanent road building that had already proved its merit. The retread surface of oil and asphalt was much cheaper than the asphalt top on a concrete base, and was standing up under city traffic.

"I am not good at making promises at election time because I have found that it is often hard to carry out such promises. I can only say that I shall do all I can to help solve the city's problem and to help develop its possibilities. Our relief costs are fifty per

NEW YORK, Dec. 23 — (A.P.)— After two summer seasons of "survey" flying, it begins to look as though John Citizen will be able to buy an airline ticket to Europe next spring.

Great Britain has advised the United States that six flying boats are ready for scheduled service between the old and new worlds. At least one of a crop of six big "clippers," able to accommodate 40 persons on a trans-atlantic hop, will be ready in the United States.

Germany, France, and Italy have applied for permission to institute service by air to the United States, but Great Britain is the only country with which the United States has a workable reciprocal agreement.

The civil aeronautics authority said yesterday that certain technical aspects of the service which Britain will render through Imperial Airways remained to be worked out. But both Imperial and Pan-American Airways, the United States Trans-Oceanic Air Transport Company are going ahead with plans to inaugurate regular shuttle services between the two continents in 1939.

Flight to Mediterranean.

Another United States company, American Export Airlines, proposes to conduct survey flights between New York and Mediterranean ports in the spring.

The necessity for government permisison to use harbor facilities here and abroad stems from the Warsaw convention signed after the Great War by which it was recognized that each nation "owned" the air above its borders. Though the United States did not subscribe to the Warsaw convention, it did sign a similar instrument at Havana applying to the Americas.

What additional countries will be permitted to use American harbors for their airliners is problematical. Up to now the principle of matching flight for flight—one by an American company for every trip by a foreign airline—has been applied in planning transatlantic traffic.

The C.A.A., however, is understood to be working out a system whereby a foreign airline will be permitted flights in proportion to the percentage of boat travel which its flag originates.

Detroit, Dec. 23 (CP) MRS. SHEILA WELSH, 31, who usually is a mild-mannered person, becomes 125 pounds of feminine dynamite when confronted by bandits.

Two bandits came into her husband's store the other day. The hold-up was proceeding calmly when one swore. "I guess that's what made me so mad," Mrs. Welsh explained. She grabbed one bandit's gun, scratching and kicking him. The bandits fled, dropping a cash box containing $380.

Scared Deputies Line Up With Daladier

PARIS, Dec. 23.—(AP).—Premier Edouard Daladier won a smashing victory to-day when the Chamber of Deputies, which almost overthrew him yesterday, approved his 1939 ordinary budget by an overwhelming majority.

In an early morning vote, the deputies passed the 66,128,402,780 franc ($1,735,537,440) budget, including the government's financial decree laws, by a count of 366 to 229.

This was Daladier's third test of strength since yesterday morning. First, he escaped overthrow by a margin of seven votes. On the second vote his majority rose to the comparative security of 57 votes and in the final test he won a majority of 137 by his determined stand.

Apparently by the simple method of letting the deputies frighten themselves by almost throwing his government out, the Premier stood out stronger to-day than at any time since he issued the decree laws which had raised so much protest among the Opposition.

Fear Overthrow.

Many of the Right Wing and Centre deputies, who had been wavering, swung into line after the government's narrow escape, admitting they were afraid to run the risk of overthrowing the government by refraining from voting or by voting against the Premier.

After his victory in the Chamber, Daladier turned immediately to meet Italy's denunciation yesterday of the 1935 Laval-Mussolini agreement regarding Tunisia.

French observers interpreted the denunciation as an indication that Mussolini finally was ready to follow up the "unofficial" anti-French demonstrations with an official notice that Italy was not pleased with the Mediterranean situation.

Daladier's friends declared the Premier was prepared to meet Mussolini's demands with a flat refusal to go beyond the 1935 agreement in territorial concessions.

Montreal Wants Snow

MONTREAL, Dec. 23 (CP)—Even the older inhabitants don't recall when Montreal was so bare of snow at Christmas time and residents are as unanimous in wanting a heavy snowfall as wheat farmers have been for rain in times of drought. The date doesn't matter—it still isn't Christmas in Montreal unless there's at least a foot of snow on the streets.

Mount Royal, the city's famed scenic mountain around which it is built, still wears it sautumn dress while thousands of skiers of all ages wait impatiently for the opportunity to glide swiftly down its snow-covered slopes. Even the Laurentian Mountain districts north of the city lack sufficient snow for safe skiing.

Norwegian Freighter Springs Leak 600 Miles Out

NEW YORK, Dec. 23 — (AP). — Twenty persons, including two women, were rescued from the disabled Norwegian freighter Smaragd in the gale-swept Atlantic 600 miles southeast of New York to-day by the American freighter Schodack.

Wireless reports to Radio Marine Corporation said the rescue was completed at 10.48 a.m. EST, following a night of anxiety during which the Schodack stood by waiting for a lull in the weather.

A message from Captain Clifton Smith of the Schodack said: "All hands, including skipper of Smaragd, safely taken from disabled vessel."

The Smaragd, out of Norfolk for Fort William, Scotland, laden with oil in cases, sprang a leak and called for help. The Schodack, carrying general cargo between North Atlantic ports and France, immediately went to her aid.

After standing by during the night Captain Smith reported at 6.33 a.m.: "Now preparing to get to S.S. Smaragd with boat. Smaragd still afloat as daylight is breaking. Smaragd has two women aboard."

The next news received was at 9.50 a.m., when Skipper Smith reported that seven persons had been safely transferred from the Smaragd to the Schodack and that preparations were under way for removal of the others.

The Smaragd was leaking badly forward and listing, he said. Northwest gales were blowing, making rescue attempts difficult.

The Smaragd, a vessel of 1,181 gross tons, was built in 1911. She is 225 feet long and once was named the Elizabeth Cuneo.

The Schodack has a crew of 40.

Duchess' Defeat Surprises Press

LONDON, Dec. 23 — (CP Cable). —Newspapers from the provinces and other parts of the United Kingdom to-day joined in widespread expressions of astonishment over the failure of the Duchess of Atholl in the Kinross and West Perth by-election.

The Manchester Guardian (Liberal), deploring the defeat of the Duchess by W. McNair Snadden, Conservative, said that if the weather had been better she would have been victorious.

"Although he won the official Conservative candidate's poll dropped badly," The Guardian observed. "The total poll fell by 11 per cent, and the Government poll fell by 22 per cent. It was not such a glorious victory for Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy after all."

The Yorkshire Post (Conservative) said there will be no disposition to question the rightness of the Duchess' decision to challenge the Prime Minister's foreign policy although she was defeated. It added:

"Whatever natural satisfaction may be felt in Germany and Italy at defeat of a parliamentary candidate standing for more active opposition to aggression, a costly mistake will be made if in either country there is drawn from West Perth the erroneous inference that British public opinion of the British Government is indifferent to the fate of Spain or the consequences of an enlargement of the scale of foreign intervention."

The Liverpool Post (Liberal) said it "will require some hardihood to claim it is not a victory for Mr Chamberlain's policy."

Moscow, Russia, reports its new subway line cost 3.6 per cent. less than the estimates.

Hollywood War Last Word In Army Comfort, Fight On Sunny Days, Make Love If Rainy

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 23—(CP). —When Hollywood movie-makers stage a war, the armies always get out of the trenches by Christmas.

Paramount has just finished redoing a section of the Galician campaign in 1916 for "Hotel Imperial." It's been a model war—good pay, few bullets, almost no hardships.

Battles were reserved for nice, sunshiny days. When it rained, everybody moved inside, and hero Ray Milland made love to heroine Isa Miranda.

The ordinary private, where there was fighting to do, had his gun politely handed to him in the morning, cleaned and ready for service. He didn't even have to load it.

At night, he relinquished it to a property man and went home for a peaceful sleep in his own soft bed.

If the private's beard needed trimming, a makeup man attended to it. If his pants got torn going through a barbed wire entanglement, a wardrobe expert did the patching.

Convenience was the watchword of the director. In one scene, some Austrians were hurling hand grenades against 'Russian troops,' but because of a barricade, couldn't quite find the mark with right-handed throws.

The director eased the situation. He sent in 20 left-handed grenade throwers.

Canada Gives Recognition To King Of Italy As Emperor Of Ethiopia

Cabinet Appoints Five-Man Commission To Study Proposed 2,500-Mile $20,000,000 Road Through B.C. To Alaska

OTTAWA, Dec. 23 (CP).—After officially recognizing the Italian conquest of Ethiopia and appointing a five-man commission to consider the proposal to construct a highway through British Columbia from the international border to Alaska, Federal Cabinet Ministers prepared today for the Christmas holidays. Many of them will leave Ottawa for several days.

Following the third and last Cabinet Council of the week, Prime Minister Mackenzie King told a press conference that the Canadian government has requested the British Ambassador in Rome to notify the Italian government that Canada recognizes the King of Italy as Emperor of Ethiopia.

Canada thus followed the action of the United Kingdom and several other countries in recognizing the conquest. The League of Nations Council left it up to the member countries to make their own decisions.

Members of the commission which will study the proposed 2,500-mile, $20,000,000 Alaskan highway are: Hon. Charles Stewart, chairman of the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission; Brig.-Gen. T. L. Tremblay of Quebec City; J. M. Wardle of the Department of Mines and Resources here; Arthur Dixon of Victoria, an official of the Public Works Department; and J. W. Spencer of Victoria.

The official announcement said: "It is expedient that the Canadian government should have before it a full report on all aspects of the proposed construction before any decision with regard thereto is taken.

A Full Inquiry

"The government accordingly decided that a commission of five persons be appointed to inquire into the engineering, economic, financial, and other aspects of the proposal to construct the said highway to Alaska and to meet for the purpose of discussion and exchange of information with the United States commission appointed for that purpose, and subsequently to submit to his excellency the governor in council a report setting forth the evidence received and the conclusions drawn therefrom."

The U.S. congress already has appointed a five-man commission to co-operate with the Canadian commission regarding the scheme. Chief Canadian champion of the project is Premier Pattullo of British Columbia who last spring made several trips to Ottawa and Washington to confer with government officials on the matter.

The highway is regarded as of strategic military importance as well as an aid to the tourist business on the west coast.

The prime minister also informed the parliamentary writers that Canada will be represented at the meeting of the wheat advisory committee in London next Jan. 10. There has been no delegate chosen yet.

Bonus Dividends Declared By 37 Companies

MONTREAL, Dec. 23.—(CP). — Gifts for the investing public, the flow of "extra" and "bonus" dividends from Canadian corporations continues its annual acceleration during the Yuletide season.

A survey disclosed to-day 37 companies listed on the stock exchange and curb market had declared special dividends in 1938, most of them payable this month. And six additional extras, declared late last year, were paid out last January.

Lining the pockets of investors with hundreds of thousands of dollars, the disbursements range from one cent a share to as much as $5. A glance over the records reveals numerous industries paying extra profits; coal and gold mining; oil production; manufacturing; foodstuffs; distillers; millers; smelting companies and theatrical enterprises.

Firms paying $1 to $5 each included Asbestos Corporation Limited, Canada and Dominion Sugar Company, Consolidated Mining and Smelting, Goodyear Tire Company, Limited, Intercolonial Coal Company, Limited, Laura Secord Candy Shops, Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Supertest Petroleum Corporation, Limited and Steel Company of Canada.

Hotel Case Brings Charges Of Pull

CORNWALL, Ont., Dec. 23—(CP)—With more than 50 witnesses to be heard, Mr. Justice Urquhart today adjourned until February the Supreme Court trial of an action for unstated damages brought by J. Nazaire Gosselin against Alfred Lefebvre, proprietor of the Royal Hotel, Cornwall's largest hotel.

Gosselin claims damages on the grounds of devaluation of his property and nuisance as a result of alleged irregularities in conducting the hotel. The plaintiff, who was on the stand four hours yesterday, went into the box for completion of cross-examination this morning, when it was announced the parties had failed to reach a settlement out of court.

Re-examined by his counsel, Walter Schroeder, Ottawa, Gosselin was asked why he did not complain to police about noise and other nuisances.

"I knew they wouldn't do anything about it," witness replied.

"Why wouldn't they do anything about it?" asked Mr. Schroeder.

"What pull has Mr. Lefebvre got?"

"Well, he's gots lots," Gosselin answered. "He is president of the Stormont Liberal Associations, organizer for the county."

Gosselin told the court: "Lefebvre has lots to say about patronage."

"Did he ever get you a job?" asked Justice Urquhart.

Gosselin replied in the negative.

Duncan Qualifies In Toronto Fight

TORONTO, Dec. 23—(CP).—Toronto citizens, Ralph C. Day a strong favorite for re-election as mayor and the oft-recurring issue of December voting disposed of, for a while at least, aren't taking much interest in the current municipal election campaign which winds up with balloting New Year's Day.

No important issues are before the electorate this year, a contrast to 1937 when a civic housing by-law was rejected decisively and citizens voted to revert to the traditional Toronto election day, Jan. 1. Last year's election was held Dec. 6, the first Monday in December, when the majority of Ontario municipalities elect their officials for the year.

A strong field headed by former mayor William D. Robbins is in the running for the four board of control seats and may result in a shake-up in the personnel of that executive body. But few outstanding candidates are among the 43 contesting the 16 aldermanic seats and with all but two of this year's slate seeking re-election few upsets are expected.

A contest for the mayoralty was assured last night with the qualification of Lewis Duncan, K.C., until shortly before the nine o'clock closing of qualifications uncertain whether he would oppose Mayor Day who is seeking a second term. Had Mr. Duncan not qualified, Mayor Day's acclamation would have been the first since 1932 when William J. Stewart, four times mayor, was re-elected.

Ordered To Trial

MONTREAL, Dec. 23 (CP)—Antonio Godon, 28-year-old kitchen helper, was ordered today by Judge Amedee Monet to be tried at the next criminal assizes on a charge of murdering little Simone Caron eight years ago.

Godon, arrested in Quebec City district several weeks ago, said through his counsel he had no defence to offer immediately against the charge on which the late Brother Dosithee once was convicted and sentenced to death but later acquitted.

Stow, England, Dec. 23.

FIRE TODAY destroyed Notgrove Manor, an imposing Cotswold country house where descendants of Dick Whittington, London's famous 14th century lord mayor, lived for hundreds of years.

Lady Anderson, wife of Sir Alan Anderson, the present owner of the house, escaped from a bedroom by sliding down a rope made of knotted sheets.

One fire engine trying to reach the house had to be dug out of snowdrifts six feet deep. Valuable books, pictures and manuscripts were burned.

Quaker Association Entertains Children

The Quaker Oats Fellowship Association added a pleasant note to the pervading Christmas spirit this morning by giving a theatre party for the children and friends of the members at the Capitol. Nearly one thousand tickets were issued for the affair, and among the guests were the little folks from the Children's Shelter and St. Vincent's Orphanage for whom transportation was provided.

Presents were distributed by Fred G. Ash, president of the association; T. T. Gentles, plant superintendent, assisted by officers and directors. Entertainment included a special run of pictures and tap dancing by Shirley Garner and Kenneth Simmons with piano accompaniment by George Nicholls.

cent higher than a year ago, and if we can only get some more industries that would be the surest way of reducing unemployment."

Mayor Hamilton thanked the two men who had proposed him and expressed a hope for happiness throughout the city at Christmas time, and happy new year for the citizens in 1939.

E. R. Shirley Speaks

Mr. Shirley, member-elect of the Utilities Commission, was the only other speaker. He said he was deeply grateful to the citizens for the renewal of their confidence. Peterborough had a heavy investment in public utilities, "and it has always been my aim as a Commissoiner to keep our utilities in the highest state of efficiency, and to give the people the best possible service in an economical manner." The electric, water and gas utilities were in excellent shape, and were kept up to the highest state of efficiency it was possible to attain.

The transformer capacity at the city's substation was reaching its limit with the increased output from 4,500 k.v.a. to 12,000 k.v.a. largely due to the greater use of electric appliances in the households of Peterborough. That broadening out had taken place during the severe depression, and was confronting the Commission with the prospect of having to consider in the near future the necessity of making new provision for handling the increased load at the transformer station.

Mr. Shirley briefly mentioned the water and gas departments in the same satisfactory progress, and thanked the Commission's staff of employees for their loyal co-operation in maintaining the efficiency of the city's utilities.

One New Member

Among those present at the nominations were Mayor Hamilton, Aldermen McIntyre, Bradburn, McCannan, H. G. Walker, John R. Marshall, Roland Denne, Gordon S. Matthews, Dr. C. M. Scott, G. R. Shirley.

The only new member of the city's administrative bodies emerging from this morning's nominations is G. Wilson Crow, who is a son of the late Rev. George I. Craw and Mrs. Craw who resided at Springville during the incumbency of the Rev. Mr. Craw as minister of the Presbyterian congregation at the church on the Peterborough-Port Hope highway. Mr. Craw has been on the staff of the Examiner for 12 years and during his reportorial experience frequently attended the meetings of the Board of Education with whose methods and affairs he should have a working knowledge at the beginning of his term as a new trustee. Mr. Craw is the present city editor of the Examiner, replacing John R. Heron, who is now news editor of the Toronto Star.

Test For Voters

DETROIT, Dec. 23—(CP). — A literacy test for voters was urged in a report completed today by the city and county election commission for submission to the Michigan Legislature in January, the commission suggested it was necessary amendment to present election laws.

Rector's Dream Takes Form To Aid Jobless

TORONTO, Dec. 23 (CP). — A soft-spoken young clergyman today launched an attack upon a national problem—the rehabilitation of thousands of young transients who wander across the Dominion without work.

Backed by sympathetic friends, Rev. John Frank, rector of Trinity Anglican Church in downtown Toronto, has established a home for 115 unemployed transients. Every province except Prince Edward Island is represented as the birthplace of the men. They are like the transients at Halifax and Vancouver and all the cities in between.

Most of them are under 25; many are under 20. Before Mr. Frank, himself in his early thirties, helped them, they were homeless, hungry, dirty and without hope. No government yet accepts them as a responsibility, lacking proof of domicile.

The 115 will be given comfortable quarters, clothing, food and recreation for the winter. These are expected to restore the young men to physical health—for many are run down and ill—and to restore their lost morale.

Speaking of the scheme as an attack on the larger problem of all Canada's transients—variously estimated to number from 10,000 to 50,000—Mr. Frank said:

"We hope to prove with this group that Canada cannot afford to waste the lives of these fellows. We hope to prove that they are potential citizens and well worth preserving."

If the project is successful, interested parties hope to go to the Dominion and provincial governments, seeking to fix responsibility for the transients. Case histories of the group should indicate what training they might be given, the rea-

Y.P.U. Executive Visits Mt. Pleasant

The regular meeting of the Mt. Pleasant Hustlers' class was held on Friday evening with Bob Spence, resident of the Y.P.U. of the Peterborough Presbytery in charge. The meeting opened with "Silent Night," followed with prayer by Mr. Robert Kitchen. Miss Loretta McDougall read the scripture reading from the second chapter of Luke. Mr. Spence gave a poem, "The Inn-Keeper," after which Mr. Spence introduced the five conveners who came with him. Their names and offices are as follows: Miss Loretta McDougall, recreational convener; Miss Olive Bell, Christian culture convener; Lloyd Richards, dramatic convener; Bob Kitchen, missionary convener and Miss Vera Gardiner, Christian fellowship convener of the Y.P.U. of Lindsay Presbytery. Splendid addresses were given by each of these speakers telling about their work. Mr. Spence dealt mostly on the subject of joining the Young People's Union.

The Mt. Pleasant Y.P will decide this matter at their next meeting. Another Christmas hymn concluded the gathering.

A social time was spent by the young people by singing and playing various games. Mr. Bert Visee moved a vote of thanks to the young people of Peterborough for conducting such a fine meeting.

U.F.O. Executive Honors 2 Members

The new executive of the Peterborough U.F.O. Club has decided to make a personal investment in co-operation by giving what amounts to a little scholarship to Clare Leahy of Douro and Clifford Johnston of North Monaghan in paying their expenses at a short course in co-operation at Guelph from December 27 to January 6.

These two young men are junior farmers who have proved their interest and ability in the special work that has been carried on in the county during recent years. It was thought that one method of extending the co-operation movement in the county would be to have young representatives at the Guelph short course. They would acquire a greater knowledge of the principles and economy of co-operation and doubtless return home equipped to be of assistance in furthering the local effort which the U.F.O is sponsoring.

The Club will pay the expenses of Mr. Leahy and Mr. Johnston during their absense from Peterboro during the holiday season when the student body of the O.A.C. are at home for the holidays. Clarence Mann, the new president of the U.F.O., was chairman of the executive meeting.

Hastings Man Will Be 96 Christmas Day

HASTINGS, Dec. 23—Christmas will be a day of double celebration for William Raycroft, eldest resident of this village. On that day he will have reached the ripe old age of 96 and is still in perfect health. Also remarkable is the fact that he is most active about the house and out doors. Twice each week he walks alone down town to the barber shop for a shave. On his return from the walk nearly four blocks away he climbs a steep hill with ease.

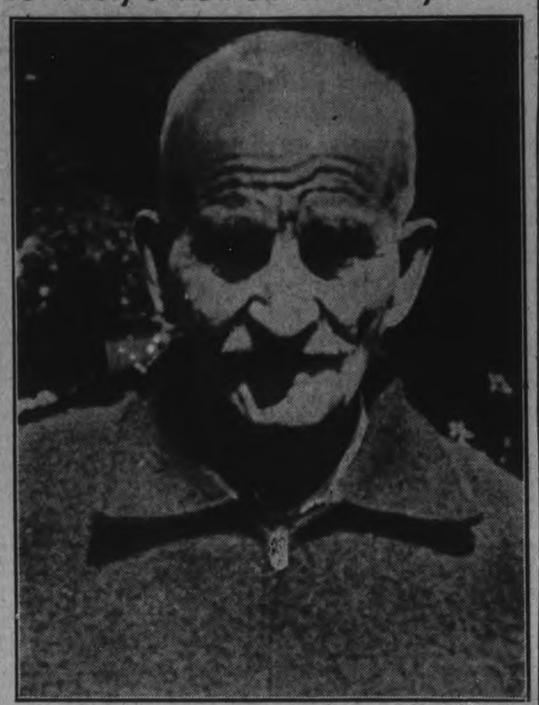
He possesses an unusual sense of humor. This he demonstrated as he joked with a reporter who called to get his picture. "I'll bet you want my picture because I'm so good looking," he remarked.

Newspapers are of little interest to him although he occasionally scans the headlines. He prefers to sit in his favorite rocker and hum tunes which probably carried him back to days of his youth in Cramahe township, when he was considered the best step dancer at dances in the district. He grew up to be a successful farmer and owned a large tract of land when he retired not so many years ago.

His hearing and eyesight are good. "He can see much better than I," his daughter, Mrs. Harry Dodd explained. "Often when walking about the house, he spies pins on the floor and that is more than I can do," she said.

He will spend Christmas at home with the family. The years have not diminished his appetite and he expects to enjoy the Christmas dinner the same as everyone else. Each morning he rises at 8 o'clock and retires the same hour in the evening.

Be Ninety-Six On Christmas Day



William Raycraft, oldest resident of Hastings village, will celebrate his 96th birthday on Christmas Day. Good habits and plain living is his prescription for a long life.

Pupils Delight Emily Audience

OMEMEE, Dec. 23.—One of the most successful Christmas concerts in the history of S.S. No. 5, Emily, was held in the school this week and the entertainment delighted a large audience. T. Rice was chairman and Miss A. Weir the teacher supervised the program.

Recitations were given by Melville Windrem, Bethel Laidley, Earle Bullock, Donald O'Neil, Grant Windrem, Austin Windrem, Ethel Laidley, Vincent O'Neil, Marie Fitch, and Mary Bulbeck. Those giving instrumental numbers were Bernice Fairfield, Frank iFtch, Marie Fitch, Mary Bulbeck and Marie Fitch sang solos, and a pleasing guitar duet with vocal was given by Don Griffin and Kenneth Thurston.

Inspector T. H. Brown New Hamilton Chief

HAMILTON, Ont., Dec. 23—(CP).—Inspector Thomas Albert Brown was named chief of Hamilton police force at a special meeting of the police commission today. Inspector of detectives J. R. Crocker was appointed deputy chief, the appointments to become effective Jan. 1.

Inspector Brown succeeds the late E. K. Goodman. The office of deputy chief had been vacant, no appointment being made several years ago when Chief Goodman assumed the office.

The police commission will hold a conference later to discuss other appointments in the department.

Chief Brown was born in Armagh County, Ireland in 1880 and came to Hamilton as a boy with his parents. He joined the police department in 1904. He was one of the men chosen to go overseas to represent the 13th Regiment at the coronation of King Edward.

Deputy Chief Crocker is a native of Cornwall, England. Born in 1885, he came to Canada in 1910. He joined the police department in 1913. Not long after he became a detective and finally rose to be inspector of detectives.

Tot Suffocates

PORT ALBERT, Ont., Dec. 23.—(CP). — Three-year-old Marion Richardson was suffocated today when fire, believed started when the child played with matches, broke out in the bedroom of her parents' home. William Richardson, father of the child, extinguished the blaze but was too late to save his daughter's life.

SPECTATOR LOSES

HAMILTON, Scotland—(CP). — Michael McClearly, 53, who sued Motherwell Football League club for $934 damages, lost his case. He said he was crushed against a concrete barrier surrounding the playing field at a game last year.

Toronto To Grab All Motorists On Least Whiff Of Liquor

TORONTO, Dec. 23—(CP)—Stop 'em before they start, will be the slogan of Toronto police this Christmas in curbing intoxicated motorists. For the force, from the newest rookie to Chief Constable D. C. Draper, is determined to prevent a repetition of last year's "black Christmas" casualty lists.

As Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario Minister of Highways, appealed for "safe, sober, considerate" motoring, plans were completed today for an intensified police campaign against Christmas Eve traffic violators. It will be directed particularly at those who drive while under the influence of liquor.

Three persons were killed and 65 injured in 123 traffic accidents here last Christmas. More than 140 persons were arrested, 24 of them on reckless and drunken-driving charges. A Christmas Eve snowstorm which made traffic conditions dangerous contributed to the heavy toll.

This year officers will stop motorists suspected of having imbibed and remove them from their motor cars. Chief Draper has announced that the smell of liquor—though the driver may not be sufficiently intoxicated to substantiate a drunk-driving charge — will be enough to warrant removing a motorist from the streets. His name will be filed for "future reference."

73 Cruisers Out.

Seventy-three cruiser cars will patrol the city. All police leaves have been cancelled and special constables will be stationed at strategic points to watch for careless and reckless motorists. From now until after New Year's Eve, any violation of traffic ordinances will be followed by a court summons.

"Threats should be unnecessary at this time of the year," Highways Minister McQuesten said in his appeal. "In the name of Christianity and humanity I appeal for safe, sober, considerate operation of motor vehicles during this period. They will feel the full penalties of the law if their actions bring them into court."

Official figures show that so far this year 72 persons have been killed in 6,644 traffic accidents on Toronto streets. Throughout 1937 there were 68 persons killed. More than 3,335 men, women, and children have been injured, compared to 3,608 for all of last year. Two hundred car drivers have been sentenced to jail against 170 in 1937.

The Ontario Liquor Control Board will do its part in attempting to reduce the accident toll this Christmas Eve. Throughout the province, beverage rooms must be cleared at eight o'clock on Saturday night—four hours earlier than usual.

Some Discord

SHELBURNE, Ont., Dec. 23 (CP).—Even the Christmas spirit of goodwill among men — and carol-singing trios—couldn't prevail last night when No. 3 boy of a trio singing at a Christmas concert in Knox Church gave forth a sour note.

The No. 1 boy "landed one" on the nose of sour-noting No. 3 who retaliated with a stiff uppercut to the chin.

Then the concert chairman stepped in and called off the songfest.

Mutilated Girl Found In Sack

TUNKHANNOCK, Pa., Dec. 23.—(AP)—Fifty state troopers were called into a search of this isolated, snow-covered countryside today for the slayer who strangled attractive, 19-year-old Margaret Martin and attempted to conceal her nude, battered body in a creek.

Investigators expressed belief the slayer either was a sex maniac with a cruel, distorted mind or a round-up man for a white slave ring, who killed the girl when he feared he would be caught.

Slashed and mutilated, the body of the brown-haired business school graduate was found yesterday in a burlap bag, partially submerged in three feet of water under an abandoned bridge.

The discovery ended a search that had been made through all northeastern states since the girl left her home in Kingston, 30 miles away, last Saturday to keep a daylight street corner appointment with a man who had telephoned her an offer of a job.

Coroner Ray Greenwood said Miss Martin "definitely was murdered." An autopsy performed last night disclosed that death resulted from strangulation.

The girl had been slashed across the abdomen and bruised. Her body was bound with a clothesline. Fingerprints were found on her neck, the physicians said.

Approximately 50,000 divorces have been granted in England since the World War.

A Tale Of Christmas In 1938 Tempo Tells Of Men Who Still Cling To Courage

The most heart-rending job in Peterborough this Christmas season is probably that held by Dan Douglas as superintendent of the Employment Service of Canada.

Men with a spark of hope left in their eyes, men who tramp their weary way from one factory to another, call each day at Dan's office on King street on the chance he may have something to offer them. That sort of thing goes on the year round, and Dan Douglas will tell you that despite anything you may hear to the contrary men do still want to work, do still want to avoid relief.

It is at Christmas that his job becomes hardest. At least a hundred men are calling every day in search of any kind of work, even if it lasts for only an hour or two. Some of them call three and four times each day—they open the door, raise their heads in query and troop despondently away when Dan Douglas shakes his head and says "Sorry, old man, nothing just now."

Christmas has brought practically no extra work for these men this year, Mr. Douglas said. Other years it has meant that a good number have secured some form of employment that would bring them enough for Christmas presents for their children, but for some reason or other there has been virtually no such employment this year. He told of one man, who has been fighting for months to keep from relief and who is in desperately straightened circumstances. He was given a job piling wood and earned a dollar. "He was pleased as punch," said Dan. "He told me it would be enough to buy a Christmas present for each of his two children."

They are not completely despondent, these courageous chaps who face humiliation after humiliation in order to preserve their self-respect, in order to become working men again, contributing to the support of their families. "It takes a lot to beat the spirit out of these fellows. They are fine men," was Mr. Douglas' comment.

He is hoping for better things in the coming year, hoping that some of these faces he sees day after day will be seen in factories in 1939. That's his Christmas wish for them. "And incidentally, if you write a story you might mention that the Employment Service will be open all day Tuesday. We are not observing Boxing day because some people may want help cleaning up the house after the Christmas celebration, and these men would like the work," he said. The telephone number is 571, in case you would like to give some unfortunate person a break.

All Well In Colony

PARIS, Dec. 23—(AP)—Messages from a lobster fishing expedition which had been reported in distress because of storms and a coal shortage in the South Indian ocean disclosed today that all was well with the colony of 48 persons at isolated St. Paul Island.

The messages were relayed through Madagascar, 1,700 miles from St. Paul, from Captain Hohn De Boers and showed that he remained in command of the expedition which began when 33 persons set out from St. Malo, France, in the 580-ton trawler L'Isle Bourbon.

Italy Waiting French Concessions

ROME, Dec. 23. — (AP). — Italy waited to-day for France to offer concessions after giving notice that the Fascist Government considers invalid the 1935 Mussolini-Laval convention concerning Tunisia.

The authoritative Fascist editor Virginio Gayda warned the French that Rome would meet "with equal arguments and equal force" France's "insidious fury" if France wanted to fight.

The firm Italian stand considerably impressed diplomatic quarters, where it was felt Premier Mussolini, determined to make the Rome-Berlin axis benefit him, was in great earnest in the matter.

(The convention assures Italians in Tunisia—the French North African protectorate for which Italians started a campaign November 30—their right to Italian citizenship until 1965. It never has been ratified by the French Parliament, but French diplomatic experts consider that it has been in force since it was signed in Rome January 7, 1935).

Diplomats expressed the viewpoint that Premier Mussolini felt his position strengthened after the four-power agreement on the division of Czechoslovakia September 29, and might be considering the use of force to achieve some striking success.

The Cold In England

England has been suffering from the cold, and although the temperature measured by degrees on the thermometer has not been as low as we have been having in this district, the suffering has been intense. The cold there is the sort which chills because there is so much moisture in it.

Their houses are not built as ours are to withstand the cold, nor is the heating system similar. Some of the larger buildings have central heating plants, but the majority of the homes depend on fire places.

In homes where people are poor coal is bought in small quantities. It is a familiar sight in the larger cities to see the coal man making his rounds. He rings a bell to draw attention to his presence and people buy from him a few pounds at a time. For such people laying in a stock of coal is out of the question because they could not do it for lack of money, and in most cases they would have no place to store it.

Coal supplies are short in London and that means that many homes where coal is always bought in small quantities would have none on hand, so the people go to bed and stay there in an effort to keep warm. The coldest weather recorded in England has been 16 degrees, which would be half-way between freezing and the zero mark, a condition which we would not regard as serious in a Canadian winter. But it is serious in England and it is quite correct to say the people will be feeling the cold there.

A Good Story If True

A million Canadian rifles of the Lee-Enfield rifles, made in Canada, are supposed to be held in hiding near New York, ready to be offered for sale to foreign countries. That is the gist of the story which comes from Boston, where it is stated a broker had been informed by a lawyer in New York that he could supply him with all the rifles he could sell.

Now there is a story for you. The only thing wrong with it is that the Lee-Enfield rifle has never been made in Canada. The only rifle we ever produced in this land was made during the war years and it went under the name of the Ross rifle, and it was very much of a failure.

The Lee-Enfield is a British-made weapon and Canadian troops were provided with them. When they returned to this country the rifles were turned in and they are all accounted for and the Department of Defence also knows where all the old Ross rifles are. Why they do not salvage or scrap them we do not know.

Possibly the next time a good story comes out about Canadian-made guns being offered for sale there may be inclusion of the two old cannon which stand guard outside our court house on the hill.

Mr. Hepburn's Health

The St. Thomas Times-Journal is published not far from the home of Premier Hepburn, and probably on that account is in a position to know more about him than the newspapers in Toronto. The St. Thomas paper is not his political supporter but knows him rather as Mitchell Hepburn, farmer. Local papers generally are in that position and that is where their strength and advantage rests. A good deal has been published recently regarding Mr. Hepburn's health, and the St. Thomas paper published some facts on that which were secured by a staff writer who went to visit at the Hepburn home. It was not a telephone conversation, but apparently a visit.

The most important statement made in the story was one telling that Mr. Hepburn's blood pressure was 230. The Examiner inquired of a doctor in the city asking what that meant, and if it were serious enough to lead to the belief that the premier would have to retire. The answer was that such a degree of blood pressure meant the heart was working about 50 per cent. harder than it should under normal conditions; the arteries are not as large and flexible as they formerly were and therefore the heart has to pump harder to force the blood through them. The doctor did not consider public life the proper environment for a man in such condition, and stated if he were being consulted in such a case he would advise Mr. Hepburn to resign.

Slightly Different

Official statements at times contain some intervals of speech which do not stand up well under examination. Sir John Anderson explained in the British House of Commons the plan for making a number of places bomb proof in case of air raids. After telling with considerable detail just how the plan was going to operate we come to this:

"The government will accumulate the necessary stocks for these private shelters and will bear the whole cost of the material."

That sounds attractive. But the British government is very much like our own, and it gets its money in the same way as do our various governments. The British government secures its revenue by taking it from the people in the form of taxes, so when it is stated the government "will bear the whole cost" it means the government will undertake the work and then collect from the people.

Relief On The Way Out

It is interesting to note how relief costs in the village of Havelock have been decreasing. The figures for a few years show expenditure:

1935 (peak year)	$3,002.62
1936	1,432.33
1938 (11 months)	324.74

Those figures show that in 1935 relief costs were not far removed from being ten times what they have been in 1938. We have not before us any detailed explanation as to why such a decrease has been possible in Havelock, but it is apparent that the problem of relief in the village is on a fair way to oblivion.

In a general way a village or a town should—and we believe will — recover more rapidly than the larger centre of population. The reason is that living and working conditions are not liable to be as severly disrupted in the first place, and that most of the homes in these smaller places are better able to defend themselves than the average home in the larger centres.

There is nothing forced or unnatural about the growth or size of a village; people do not go there in numbers seeking to find something which does not exist, and one will find more gardens, fruit trees and chicken houses in a village than in a city. All these things point in their own way to the ability and desire of the people to do something which will make it unnecessary to put their hands in the purse every time it is necessary to have something to eat.

Whatever the explanation, Havelock is making a good showing in its decreased expenditure for relief and we dare say financiers in a number of cities will look at Havelock's record with feelings not far removed from being touched with envy.

What a Change!

There are so many signs about safety today that we pay little attention to them. When we read at the level crossing something about "Stop Look and Listen," the chances are we do nothing of the kind. Just keep on going.

The American Iron and Steel Institute considers safety of such importance that it has issued an attractive booklet about it giving the history of the movement in the steel industry, and admittedly the steel mill was a bad one. It was not so much a case of injury as painful or instant death. Wire mills were particularly bad.

The booklet admits when the campaign for safety was started it was met with ridicule. The men in the mills laughed and jeered and wondered if they were a lot of softies who had to be protected by some busy-body in the office who was going to tell them how to do their work. The men had always accepted the element of risk and rather gloried in it.

The campaign got under way 30 years ago, and in that time the number of accidents for each million man-hours worked has been reduced 90 per cent., and on the safety score board the steel business now stands in fifth place from the top.

Just one illustration will show what is being done. John Lucas is a "buggy boy" in a tin plate mill, and he drives a small indoor truck carrying heavy material. He slipped and the truck passed over his toes, but he was not hurt because he was wearing the special shoe with a steel toe cap. Otherwise he would have been a cripple.

The bright feature is that the men working in the mills are now devising new safety wrinkles themselves. They have moved far away from the "softy" idea, and they have found it is possible to keep on working day after day, a more pleasant experience than being carried out on a stretcher.

Forced Into Action

The struggle between Japan and China is a long way off as miles go, and we may be inclined to regard it as something which has to do with two nations only. It is not as simple as that and recent happenings make it certain that China has been putting her case up rather sharply to United States and Great Britain

China can do one of two things, she can turn for support to Russia or ask Germany to be the mediator to bring about peace with Japan. The second course is that she must receive aid from United States and Britain if she is going to keep up the struggle against Japan.

United States has made arrangements to extend credit to China, and is able to do that because there has been no declaration of war made in this conflict, therefore United States' neutrality law has not become effective. There is a bill before the British parliament to extend $50,000,000 credit to China, and another $2,500,000 has been provided for the purchase of trucks. That means Britain and United States have been committed to the business of financing China's continued participation in the struggle against Japanese encroachment.

War is not a thing of isolation today. In Spain Franco has been financed and aided by troops and equipment from Germany and Italy. In China the same thing is taking place, and finances are coming from two democracies because of the fear that if they do not act China with no other course open will swing toward the anti-democratic nations of either Russia or Germany. So it comes down in the cold fact that London and Washington are ready to make war investments in China with no guarantee that they will ever be able to recover them. They are actually putting up their money to prevent China from falling into the hands of Russia, Germany or Japan.

Havelock Starts It

At the last meeting of the council in Havelock the clerk was instructed to have the piano in the town hall tuned, and one might fervently hope that the habit will spread.

There are pianos all over the province and probably outside of it and many of them are awful—and awful is a word we seldom use because we do not like it. There are pianos in lodge rooms, in hotels, in town halls and in private homes which are so out of tune that it is a hardship on those who play them and those who listen.

There has been quite an investment made in these instruments after which there has been nothing done about it. If tone can be measured by distance then we believe some of the notes are at least an inch off pitch.

There is work for dozens of piano tuners all over the country doing what is going to be done to the piano in the town hall at Havelock.

NOTE AND COMMENT

School costs in Toronto have increased 163 per cent. in 20 years. But it must be admitted they have better rugby teams than they formerly had.

United States Secretary of Commerce Roper predicts business gains in 1939 and the whole continent hopes that he proves to be a good prophet.

Complete unity in Canada can probaby be best secured by having but one government. Then there would be no other governing bodies with which to fight.

The Canadian National Railway plans a $12,600,000 terminal and station in Montreal. The announcement would make the Canadian people more joyful if they failed to remember that they have to pay for the job.

The National Association of Santa Clauses in New York says its members are worried because they have not enough to do. There are amateurs in the same business who find so much to do they fear they cannot finish on time.

Alfred Staples, 69, for some years lived in a cave near Collingwood, but recently got married and moved into town and now he wants to run for mayor. You can scoff it you like but look what marriage did for Alfred.

The report was circulated that a Miss Muriel McDowell of Keighley, Eng., was making money. Taxation officers sent her a blank form to be filled out and then it was found that Muriel was ten years old and was earning three cents a week making tea for the teachers at playtime. The income people believe in catching them when they are young.

¶ I can't help liking Neighbor B, a chap I often go to see, I drop in any time; if I inquire about his health, I know he'll say about himself, that he is feeling fine.

¶ I've seen him when he couldn't walk, when he might hobble down the block, when wind blows from the east; sciatics grip from spine to heel, I know my Neighbor B must feel, just like a ten-horned beast.

¶ But if I call he hides his cane, and he looks every bit the same, he has no words of hate; if I should mention how he walks, why he just up and then he talks, and says he's feeling great.

¶ He backed a friend six months ago, and he got stung quite hard I know, but nothing will he say; and if he mentions him at all, he speaks with such an easy drawl, and in a kindly way.

¶ I know some stock went sour on him, and there he lost a flock of tin, he does not moan or roar; he told me of the thing one day, but all this kindly man would say—it might have been much more.

¶ I can't help liking Neighbor B, he seems so wholesome like to me, and he stays much the same; I've heard him talk of this and that, of things that went alarming flat—but never yet complain.

MUSSOLINI, because of the discomforts and deprivations he endured while in prison cells, is a victim of claustrophobia—that is, fear of small spaces. He insists on living and working in enormous chambers.

Mussolini, the son of a blacksmith, was a school teacher till he ran away from Italy to Switzerland—in order to escape military service! He did not make a heroic name for himself during the World War. Quite the contrary. He was never decorated on a front where many men were decorated for attacking when the order was to attack. He was never wounded in action, but took advantage of minor trench mortar to leave the front early in the war.

Mussolini is under normal stature as was Napoleon—five and a half feet in height. He has the shoulders of a football player.

He is careful of his diet. Coffee and fruit begin his day, broth and fruit compose his lunch, and dinner is strictly a one-course affair—fruit. Occasionally he eats fish. Under no circumstances does he smoke or drink.

According to one of the world's more prominent journalists, "Mussolini is the most accessible of all dictators. He receives you cordially and alone—and talks to you in English."

Mussolini is generally photographed wearing a hat of some sort. It is said no Italian photographer would dare to snap him with his head uncovered, since the Premier is unusually sensitive about his baldness.

Mussolini, one of the bitterest enemies of Communism, was enrolled in the Communist party when he was 24 years old.

PERMANENT WAVING

THE FIRST permanent wave in recorded history is that given to a favored lady of the Roman emperor, Nero's court. She sat patiently in a bath for a period of three weeks—her hair tightly bound on curlers and packed in clay.

The Egyptian women of Cleopatra's time practiced permanent waving. They wound their hair around small bamboo rods and then coated the rods with mud from the river Nile. After the sun had baked the mud it was cracked off and the hair was combed out.

Marcel Grateau died recently at the age of 84. He was known the world over as Marcel, the Parisian hairdresser, inventor of the Marcel wave. Early in life, he formulated the principle, which he stated thus, "Every woman in her heart yearns for wavy hair."

Marcel Grateau charged a franc—about 9¼ cents—for his first single wave. After he attained fame a titled English woman paid him 3,000 francs for a Marcel.

Hair-waving was deemed a vanity, about the middle of the 14th century, and was frowned upon by church dignitaries.

Before the outbreak of the undeclared Japanese-Chinese war, women's associations of Canton asked authorities to ban the permanent wave, claiming that the practice was immodest.

In ancient Rome and Greece everyone of importance had her, or his hair done up in small ringlets all over the head. It was not considered effeminate in men, as warriors and statesmen had their hair dressed in this fashion.

Until some 10 or 12 years ago so-called permanent waves were not waves at all. They were kinks. It remained for artistic hair-dressers to introduce the natural wave and do away with the crimps.

The woman who wanted wavy hair in the early days of permanent waving had to undergo great hardship. She had to sit still practically a whole day while waves were literally baked into her hair. The softening solutions were harsh and sometimes bleached the hair. The process was expensive and when the job was finished the wave wasn't particularly good.

THE CUSTOM OF KISSING

ANN SOTHERN, movie actress, states that screen kisses taste foul. The grease paint gives that kiss you think so thrilling the taste of lard and cabbage, and the studio's heat causes the stuff to melt like butter and become even more disagreeable.

There are anti-kissing leagues in the United States, France, Russia and Austria; members of these leagues are opposed to kissing for hygienic reasons.

Japanese censors recently changed their stand on kissing scenes in American-made moving pictures. It is said that millions of geisha girls now realize for the first time the thrill of a kiss.

Many elderly persons, attending the moving pictures for the first time, are shocked by the "goings-on," presented on the screen. They are frequently amazed to see people kissing one another. One woman, who had lived with her husband for some 60 years and had bourn him 14 children, declared that she had never been kissed herself, and had never seen any other persons perform such an act. She thought the "scandalous demonstration" a motion picture stunt.

The kiss was used among the early Christians as a sign of brotherhood. Later in the Christian era the kiss was used in the ceremonials of the church, but its promiscuous use among the sexes caused so much scandal that ecclesiastics restricted the kiss by edict so that men could kiss only men and women had to be contented with kissing other women.

Because of a recent change in the law it is now legal for a Baltimore resident to kiss his wife on Sunday.

The history of kissing is brief in the annals of man's development. The custom developed with man's loss of the sense of smell which civilization made of secondary importance. Although kissing was introduced into India as early as the Aryan Age, it was only developed from a formal custom to a more personal practice in the 17th century.

Kissing the mouth or the eyes as a form of dignified greeting was practiced among the early Romans.

"Now mock me!"—Humorist.

• Giraffe Can Make No Sound

AMONG the strange freight regulations of several African railways you will find an item reading: "Giraffes measuring more than 13 feet in total height cannot be accepted for transport."

Fairly obvious, of course. More than one captured giraffe, traveling by train for some distant zoo, has lifted its long neck at the wrong moment—in a tunnel or beneath a bridge. Cecil John Rhodes himself lost a giraffe that way—a splendid Rhodesian giraffe that would have looked well in his private zoo at Groote Schuur.

Giraffes are valuable. When Chief Batho sent one as a present to Queen Victoria in 1897, it was valued at £1,000. The price has gone down since then, though a wild animal dealer told me recently that he could always be sure of selling a good specimen for £200, at least.

The first expense was the license fee—£50 in Rhodesia. Then he would have to pay expert native trackers to find a troop of giraffes. The dealer caught his specimen himself. He had been a cattle hand in the Argentine, and he knew how to use the lasso. Galloping after the troop on horseback at highest speed, he would rope his giraffe, draw alongside and fling a bag over the giraffe's head.

"It's easy after that—except the feeding," declared the dealer. "Giraffes like a diet of juicy leaves from the acacia or mimosa. The only substitute is an expensive mixture of bran, crushed mealies, molasses, semolina, pumpkin, and fruit. You must feed them properly. I once tried to insure a giraffe for a short sea voyage," writes Lawrence Green in the Christian Science Monitor, "and the rate quoted was £50. Now I have to take the risk myself, or the profit would vanish."

It will be a long time before Africa says farewell to the giraffe; there are still great troops from the Sahara south to Bechuanaland. I first saw giraffes in the open from a Congo river steamer. These towering creatures, the tallest mammals in the world, "the most fantastic form of deer," as one naturalist called them, these antediluvian animals seem tame. Many a lion attacking a young giraffe, however, has felt the sledge-hammer heel kicks of the mother.

Sometimes the hide of a captured giraffe will bear the scars telling of a battle it has survived—the grim marks of a "lion's ride." But I believe the leopard is the giraffe's most formidable enemy. A leopard will wait in a tree, spring on a giraffe's back.

The giraffe relies on its marvelous eyesight to detect the approach of enemies. Its scent is only moderate, but the eyes, set in a periscope, as it were, are beautiful in appearance and highly developed. The giraffe is completely dumb. Naturalists ridicule the legend that the expiring giraffe utters a weird cry. There is no vocal mechanism. Yet it is clear that giraffes are able to communicate with others in a troop, and I have heard it stated that this is achieved by signaling with the tail.

• This Man Has A Grievance

(Letter in Montreal Star)

IN A RECENT Star I noticed a trenchant letter from the pen of Archdeacon Frederick George Scott of Quebec, bemoaning the fact that at this "All American" Conference being held at Lima, South America, that Canada is not represented at all. Archdeacon Scott is perfectly right in his contention that our government should have given us a lead in this matter and should have had representation at that very important conference. The Dictators of Europe all undoubtedly are watching, and noting with satisfaction, the fact that the largest half of the North American continent is not represented at that conference at all.

But when or where does our present government give a lead on anything? During the Czechoslovakia crisis, twenty-five native states in India, Australia, New Zealand all wired Chamberlain that they would stand by the Empire to the last ditch. Canadian Government not a word. When the persecution of the Jews broke out afresh in Europe, and that people were treated worse than dogs,—robbed, beaten, murdered, despoiled of everything, France and Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Florida, all offered to take a certain quota. But Canada with her millions of acres of splendid land unpopulated — not a word. No lead given whatsoever. When the "All American" congress was called at Lima, so closely watched and so spoken against by the European Dictators, where was Canada? Nowhere. It seems to me we have one of the weakest, most useless, spineless, back-boneless comatose governments at Ottawa that has ever sat in Parliament. It is to be hoped that it may waken up, and take some stand upon these questions, and others at the coming session in the New Year.

AN OLD TIME LIBERAL.

• They Didn't Find Any Bombs

IT BEING NEAR Christmas we suppose we should try to be not ourselves and so say nothing mean about that Liberal meeting up on Parliament Hill. Also, come to think of it, the thing, in most respects, was more funny than tragic. A bit of "Guy Fawkes" melodrama which, no matter how one looks at it, is laughing unreal.

Here it is Christmas, muses the Ottawa Journal, and people are buying Christmas trees and writing Christmas cards, and on the radio they are singing "Jingle Bells" and "Noel", and we have a lot of grown people coming down here from all over Ontario looking for conspirators, and telling one another and the rest of us solemnly that "Mitch" Hepburn should behave.

Mr. Orson Welles, with the Martian invasion of his, had little on these gentlemen. So solemn were they, with their "bell, book and candle" mood, we can almost believe what somebody told us, to wit, that on Sunday Norman Lambert spent his day up on the Hill searching the vaults of the Buildings lest the two modern Guy Fawkes, "Mitch" and "Maurice," had planted bombs in the place. Norman, who was once a police reporter, would be a good hand at that. We'd like to see the story he could write about it.

And now, "Mitch" excommunicated, cast into the outer darkness where no good nor loyal Liberal dwells, the meeting has dispersed without casualties, gone back home. "Mitch", of course, will not go to Limbo; he's going to Australia instead. And meanwhile Mr. King is down at Laurier House fixing up his Christmas tree and sending out his cards. We should like to see what he wrote in his diary last night.

DANGER IN ARMING.

(New York Times)

THERE are three dangers to guard against: First, there is the danger of hysteria, always present in matters of this kind. Unless we watch ourselves, we can easily become involved in a panic over a complete "defencelessness" which does not exist in fact, and be swept along on a high tide of oratory toward wholly unreasonable objectives. Second, there is the danger of over-simplification of the problem: the danger that we shall concentrate our whole attention on one type of armament of a particularly dramatic character—airplanes, for example—when what we need above all else is a better balanced and better rounded force. Third, there is the danger that the whole program will become involved with some new "pump-priming" plan, and that we shall begin building certain armaments not because we need them but because they offer the quickest way of making jobs or of boosting the business index.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

THOU SHALT NOT be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day;

Nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday.

Only with thine eyes shalt thou behold and see the reward of the wicked.

Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the most High, thy habitation;

There shall be no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling.

For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways.—Ps. xci, 5-11.

BECOMES GARBAGE.

ORIGINAL manuscript copies of three of Stephen C. Foster's best known songs, which survived a fire last year in his shop, have been lost to the rubbish collectors, Robert E. Sherwood, New York's unorthodox bookseller, reveals. Mr. Sherwood, now 82, was a clown for twenty years with Barnum.

For thirty years he was a collector of theatre curios, old broadsides, playbills, costume plates and music scores, for which, he said, he several times was offered $75,000. A year ago he was burned out, and insurance companies paid him $46,500 and waived salvage rights.

"We found lots of things still good," Sherwood narrates. "Some of the manuscripts were so old they had no calendaring or coating on the paper, so they didn't stick together. We left them there for months to dry out and a lot of them came out all right."

The three Foster manuscripts, "Old Black Joe," "Swanee River" and "My Old Kentucky Home," were to have been sent to Henry Ford's museum for $1,000 apiece.

"I laid them in a clothes press to dry out," he said, "but about two weeks ago the rubbish collector got them by mistake, and now they are floating out somewhere in the Atlantic. I'm through with collecting."

HOLD-UPS INCREASE.

(Montreal Gazette)

TORONTO POLICE records reveal that the number of crimes, particularly hold-ups, is greater this year than last, and in Winnipeg and Calgary the newspapers are recording an increasing number of crimes of violence. In the Manitoba city the criminals have taken to entering homes, as well as shops, and to attacking householders. Other big Canadian cities are experiencing similar troubles. The crime challenge needs to be taken up by the police in vigorous style. Otherwise the men of violence will get out of hand and their example be followed by others.

Bennet Pope Detained By Nazi Police

The two McGill University graduates detained in Germany for attempting to take pictures of Nazis smashing Jewish shop windows fared much better with the authorities because they were architects, it was disclosed in a letter written by Bennet Pope to his mother, Mrs. H. B. Pope of 422 Metcalfe Avenue, Westmount, widow of the late general superintendent of the Montreal Light, Heat and Power, Cons.

Bennet Pope, who is a nephew of Ross Dobbin, general manager of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, graduated last spring as the gold medallist in the school of architecture. His studies in Europe, as well as those of his companion, Allan Duffus of Halifax, are under the supervision of the Royal Institute of Architects, London, England. They studied six weeks in England and Scotland then toured Norway, Sweden, Finland, Denmark, Holland, Germany and are now in Italy. They will study for some months in France and England before returning home. Their tour is by motorcycle, equipped with sidecar, and is averaging in cost three to four dollars a day. One of their major studies is slum clearance and low-cost housing.

Write From Reich

Writing from Stuttgart, Germany, where the two students were detained, Bennet Pope says:

"Someone in London had given us a lad to look up here, so the next morning we went up to see him and were told where the various buildings were. When we left him we went down town to take a look at a department store by Mendelsohn, a Jewish architect, now working in England. Passing along the main street we saw some crowds of people so stopped to investigate. Every Jewish store had had the windows smashed and what was really interesting was the way people looked at them and grinned. It is amazing the way they hate the Jews here.

"We continued on then and had just got the camera set up when a very cheerful old geezer came along and displayed a large brass badge which he had on his watch chain and as he could talk no English he finally made us understand that we should go somewhere where they did. He was so cheerful that we might have been going to a pub with him, but we finished up at the headquarters of the police.

Taken to Police.

"This was a regular hive of industry. We pushed through a crowded hall past five stern-looking gentlemen who were standing rigidly at attention in a line and were shown into a large office where there was a girl who spoke English. She explained that, due to the disturbances through the night, no photography was allowed that day in the city and that the roll in our camera would have to be developed then. We were aghast at this as there were still seven exposures blank. We talked them out of that finally. Then seven of them went into a huddle and came out with the decision that, in our case, they would not require it.

"Being architects did some good—they said they realized that architects had a right to take photographs. This made us feel like a couple of big shots. Then we asked if it would be all right to take some pictures in the suburbs as we did not want to waste the day. That was O.K. and a bunch of the 'terrible secret police' got around our map and began to advise us where to go. The girl in the office had told us about some houses near a restaurant.

"She said that the restaurant was very good but that the houses were horrible things, all glass and no room. Then one of the others said that they were not by a German but by a French architect named Corbusier, who is one of the most famous architects of the day. Leaving here we made a bee line to see the 'horrible houses.' Hitler, you see, has dictated a reversion to a simplified classic style of building as being 'truly German.' We have seen a bit of it, but do not care for it much.

Vandalism Halted.

"The Government is not much in favor of breaking windows, in fact, any one so doing from now on, pays for the window and gets time in the cooler. They realize that it looks a bit childish and, of course, were not anxious to have any photographs printed in the outside press. I only wish our officials at home were as courteous as the secret police here.

"There is an awful lot of hooey printed at home about the new government. The idea that the people are not behind it and live in constant fear of it is not right, I think. We discussed it with several Germans and from what we have learned by talking and by observation, our conception of National Socialism has been changed. When the government came into power, there were ten million unemployed, almost a quarter of the population. Now there are no unemployed; in fact, they are importing Italian and Dutch workmen to work on the Autobahn (auto roads).

"This Autobahn will be one of the most perfect road systems imaginable. They have set an ideal as high as our present technical knowledge will allow, and have allowed nothing to interfere with its consummation. There must be two or three thousand miles finished, as much under construction and as much again proposed. I have never seen anything like it before. The best roads in the States do not nearly come up to it. We went through tunnels on it, and over immense bridges that span gullies a half mile wide and half as deep. There is no thought of saving expense anywhere. They decide what is the best solution and then do it. At present there are giant factories under construction by the government and next year a 'thousand mark car' goes on the market — a real full-sized car for four hundred dollars. In another two or three years this roads system will be complete—a network over all Germany, complete with cheap cars to run on them.

Musica's Brothers Are Indicted

The three surviving brothers of the notorious Musica family, are pictured here after being arraigned on grand larceny and forgery charges contained in indictment of the New York county grand jury. Previously the three brothers had been held only on the technical federal charge of violating securities and exchange regulations in the McKesson & Robbins 'missing assets' fraud.

Odette Widens Liquor Curfew

TORONTO, Dec. 23—(CP).—The Ontario Liquor Control Board announced in detail last night a "curfew law" for Christmas eve governing the sale of beer, wine and liquor throughout the province.

Issued by commissioner E. G. Odette, the edict, in additio nto closing all beverage rooms, brewers' warehouses and native wine shops at eight p.m. Dec. 24, stipulates that all vehicles used in the delivering of beer and wine must be off the streets by the same hour—eight p.m.

Liquor stores in Toronto come under a special ruling which sets seven o'clock as the closing hour Christmas eve.

All provincial outlets for the sale of beer, wine and liquor, with the exception of licensed hotels, will remain closed Dec. 26 and Jan. 2 under the special ruling, and in municipalities where Dec. 27 has been declared a public holiday, the same rule will apply.

Among Ontario municipalities officially observing boxing day—Dec. 27—are London, Brantford, Stratford, Port Colborne and Sudbury.

Beverage rooms will be closed Jan. 2 in Toronto and in other municipalities holding municipal elections on that day.

MANY PLAYERS SHIFTED IN MAJOR BASEBALL LEAGUE DEALS

Much Deadwood Gets Shifted In League Deals

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP).—Since the world series every major baseball league club except Philadelphia Athletics has figured in the buying, selling or trading of players, yet the result of autumn ivory bartering seems to be the making of a lot of room for the 1939 rookie crop.

About a half dozen deals were important enough to be loudly announced. They may have profited the participants, but main movement has been the shifting of "deadwood"—players past their prime or who hadn't proved especially useful in their old positions—either to new spots or out of the big leagues.

Since October Chick Hafey (Reds) and Wild Bill Hallahan (Phillies), have been handed outright releases. Shipped off to the minors were Joe Cascarella and Dee Moore (Reds), Phil Weintraub (Phillies), Bill Cissell (Giants), Jim Asbel, Tex Carleton and Coaker Triplett (Cubs), Bobby Reis (Bees), Roy Henshaw (Cards), Gilly Campbell (Dodgers), Bill Harris (Red Sox), and Jo Jo White and Tony Piet (Tigers).

White and Piet figures in one of the most important deals, the Tigers' purchase of Young Freddie Hutchinson from Seattle for a large wad of cash and four players, two of them minor leaguers. Yet they had one thing in common with most of the others: they're veterans who no longer were able to hold regular places against the competition.

Other veterans, most prominent among them Zeke Bonura, passed from one league to another by the waiver route or who caught on with a new club after being released by the old one.

Giants Like Bonura

Eight American league clubs couldn't use Bonura, but New York Giants figure he's the man to tend first base and belt homers for them. Brooklyn picked up Luke Sewell, veteran catcher, on waivers from Chicago White Sox. The Dodgers expect him to lend a hand developing some young pitchers as well as relieving Babe Phelps. They also signed Tony Lazzeri after he obtained his release from the Cubs.

The two Boston teams figured most prominently in the bartering of players who still are expected to play major roles in the 1939 season. The Bees got Buddy Hassett, young Jimmy Outlaw and Fred Frankhouse from Brooklyn for Gene Moore, Ira Hutchinson and Joe Stripp; and Al Todd and Johnny Dickshot and cash from Pittsburgh for Ray Mueller.

The Red Sox gave up a couple of prominent players and got a whole flock of new ones, mostly pitchers. They obtained Tom Carey from St. Louis Browns for Footsie Marcum; Elden Auker, Jake Wade and Chet Morgan from Detroit for Pinky Higgins and Archie McKain, and Denny Galehouse, infielder Tommy Irwin from Cleveland for Ben Chapman and Bose Berger, an infielder from the White Sox for Eric McNair.

The only other deal of major importance was the Giants-Cubs trade of Gus Mancuso, Dick Bartell and Hank Leiber for Billy Jurges, Ken O'Dea and Frank Demaree. From all indications, including arguments as to who got the better of the trade, that was a pretty even affair.

Find 6 Fliers, Dead

LONDON, Dec. 23—(AP)—The air ministry announced last night the bodies of six airmen were found in wreckage of a Royal Air Force bomber which crashed after taking off Dec. 10 from Habbaniya, Iraq. The plane fell about 60 miles from Habbaniya.

Take Your Skates

FORT ERIE, Ont., Dec. 23.—(CP)—Canadians going down to skate in Miami's new ice palace this winter had beter take their own skates. Word from Ken Millar, goalie in the newly - formed Tropical Hockey League, says skates are at a premium in Florida with manufacturing companies unable to meet the demand.

Everton-Derby Tilt, Holiday Highlight

LONDON, Dec. 23 — (CP Cable). —Vital leadership battles between Derby County and Everton stand out on the heavy Christmas holiday program in the English Football League. The pair, counted the strongest clubs in England, meet in home and away matches, Monday and Tuesday.

Only two points divides Derby County, pacemaker for many weeks, from its Lancashire rival. Apart from lapses last week, both squads have been unbeaten for several weeks. The County opens the Christmas series on Saturday with an away match at Wolverhampton. Boxing Day the Midlanders visit Everton with the return match at Derby the following day. Everton engages the neighboring Blackpool eleven in its Saturday preliminary.

After several days' intense cold, frozen grounds softened yesterday to the relief of managers who were worried over the possibility of injuries to players on iron-hard pitches. If the weather continues mild, the holiday matches will be played on grounds resembling quagmires rather than football gridirons.

Teams in the four divisions of the league will play three games in four days and for some clubs that means spending Christmas Day on trains and in hotels.

Sheffield Wednesday, noted Second Division team, will line up with Catlin and Fallon. The pair were injured when the car in which they were riding crashed into a telegraph post during a snowstorm.

Soccer players in Scotland fill only the regular weekly list of matches but the forthcoming New Year's holiday find them engaging in as many games as their colleagues are required to play at Christmas.

Hearts and Partick Thistle meet in Edinburgh to determine possession of third place in the First Division table. The team from the Scottish capital has only a one-point margin over its opponent.

Soccer Players Fear Cold Wave

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 23. — (CP Cable.)—English footballers, faced with a heavy holiday program, breathed more freely to-day as a five-day frigid spell was broken. Playing conditions, however, are far from satisfactory.

Managers did not relish the prospect of their highly paid players performing on frozen grounds, and feared a crop of injuries. They welcomed the thaw, and if present temperatures hold over the holiday matches will be played on slushy pitches.

Everton and Arsenal, first division clubs, experimented with underground electric wires and to-day announced the system a success in softening hard turf. It was stated apparatus costs amounted to about £2,500 ($11,500) and current upkeep about £20 ($4) a game. Other clubs are considering the proposition.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

Bill Gaynon of the Niagara Falls Review wonders out loud about the vagaries of baseball scouts. On account of the Leafs' touring big shots—Clyde Engle and Dan Howley (who were here, too, for a couple days last summer)—passed up Schoolboy Mussel. They said that there were at least six better pitching prospects in the province than Mussel, who was imported from the States to twirl the Falls into the Ontario senior semi-finals. Mussel did his stuff here late in September but Joe Jakafby was hotter than a hula gal's heels that day and the Petes rubbed the Cataract crew out of the picture with a 3-0 eraser. Joe curved 'em to death with an all-day hook that bent four and a half inches, allowing but four hits as he fanned nine. The Schoolboy, with a buggy-whip motion and a swell screamer, struck out eight but was nicked for 10 bingles. Boston has him now, and none of the locals have been snatched up by the Leafs.

Ball scouts are a funny species. Tough and unseeing sometimes but very coaxing gentry when they spot something. There is nothing more affable than a butcher slicing off more fat than meat, except maybe a ball scout cuddling up to a live rookie bet. Be that as it may, none of the Petes picked up any offers after the season started—barring the snatch Knotty attempted on McNally—though there were at least four, we think, worthy of Class "D" pro ball. We mean Lefty McNally, Eddie Murphy, Bob Doll and Al Clark. Two had played it, one had an offer but Clark didn't get a chance. Looking back on the team, we still see a championship crew—but the subject is too searing to resurrect again. Grrrr and nuts!

The Bounce-'Em Boys

Southend Intermediate Hockey League has five teams in now and one more expected. Maple Leafs, Clippers, Brintons, Maroons and Canucks, whilst Ken Fleming may round out the loop with an entry. Ossifers are Prexy Jim Fleming and Sec. Tom McCarthy. Managers include Jim Riel, Doug Callan, Harry Adams, Tom Busby and Bill Brady. They battle for the Scarfe Cup and for fun, with schedule opening Jan. 3rd. This is a right merry loop and will absorb some of the ex-Blood and Thunder League gallants. They play for keeps and toss elbows and knees around generously. There will be manys the grunt heard around the Sacred Heart rink this winter, we'll bet.

Reminds us of the days at Poverty Pond when we essayed hockey. Shortly after Wm. S. Hart thrilled cinema audiences as Chaplin wowed 'em in the aisles. Pansies at Poverty Pond padded up well, and many claimed they got best results with a Saturday Evening Post around one leg (inside the outer sock) and a Ladies' Home Journal in the other. But the tougher gees let the sticks fall where they woul d. Some of our later O.H.A.-ers learned how to stickhandle there, having to weave plenty to go through 18 guys on a small rink! Others forgot their O.H.A. stuff and played shinny with the rest of us. It may not have been good hockey but it was lots of fun and ya met a lotta people there—met 'em hard and often. Civic authorities, fearing continuuos roars and yells from the Pond would crack the new half-million-dollar bridge in spots, put a damper on the shinny tilts. Alas. Or maybe thank goodness!

He Was Very Wet

A grave error was caused by the inefficiency of our apprentice spy whom we sent to Omemee disguised as a rural mail carrier—he reporting that the district puck loop would be organized Wednesday night of this week. But Manager Art Williamson of the O's states that it'll be next Wednesday night. Needless to say, the apprentice spy has been disciplined and demoted to the rank of an assistant apprentice—and one more such mistake will find him half shot at sunrise! Lindsay, Millbrook, Omemee and one or possibly two Peterborough teams are expected to round out this circuit, a loop that should be faster than last year's Senior City League was here. More on it next week.

There was no puck practice for the senior prospects at the Brock St. rink last night, it being called off early in the evening to save the ice. A workout is being planned for this eve. Quite a few of the boys showed up and they're really going after the coveted berths without any urging. The players are satisfied with their recent showing in Owen Sound and state they can trim the Trappers in another week, which we well believe. Lotta local fans, too, feel the Petes made a decent showing away from home for so early in the season—and against good competition. The Petes ought to do. We hope.

Colts And Monarchs

It's junior night this p.m. at the Brock, Colts' prospects practicing at six o'clock and Monarchs' prospects having ameeting there an hour or so later. Coach Bill Jackson of the Colts invites all those wanting to catch a junior berth to attend, local or district lads under 20 years of age. And Jim Guiry of Monarchs wants junior puckists of 18 or under, who are figuring on being with this team—though Colts have first choice on players—to have a get-together. There is plenty of material for both our O.H.A. junior teams and two classy young squads ought to be lined up in the near future. It'll have to be soon as the junior schedule opens Dec. 30th.

In the Tely last night, J. P. Fitzgerald dealt considerably with oldtime senior hockey in Toronto and the late Frank (Moose) Heffernan, former Peterborough player. In one spot, he writes: "The success of the T.R. and A.A. was due in great measure to Frank Heffernan. He was a big rushing defence man and, while clean, had the weigh and speed to carry him through. He was a native of Peterborough where he learned his hockey with the O.H.A. juniors of that city. From there he went to Ottawa College, coming to Toronto from there. He turned to St. Pat's both amateur and professional thereafter and was part owner of the professional franchise. Of late years he was in business in Warren, Pa., and his death came suddenly while on a business trip." His funeral is being held in Peterborough tomorrow morning.

Hockey Players Hardest Task Is Putting Puck Past Brimsek

You've seen him before, but here he is again, the reigning sensation in the National Hockey League, Frank Brimsek, who stepped into the shoes vacated by Tiny Thompson in the goal of Boston Bruins, and has been turning in one sensational performance after another ever since. Frankie took over as regular custodian of the Boston cage on Dec. 1, but previous to that had seen duty in the first two games of the season, while Thompson was out with injuries. In all he has been the Bruins' last line of defence in 10 games, and opposing sharpshooters have been able to score a grand total of seven goals! Nine of the games have been victories and in no game has the opposition scored oftener than twice. Canadiens, in three games against the boy with the big hands, have scored four goals, two of them in handing him his only defeat, which, strangely enough, saw the tables turned and the Bruins themselves handed a dose of zeros, the only shutout against them thus far in the campaign. Here is the record of the young moestro:

Nov.	3	Boston	3	Toronto 2
Nov.	6	Boston	4	Detroit 1
Dec.	1	Boston	0	Canadiens 2
Dec.	4	Boston	5	Chicago 0
Dec.	6	Boston	2	Chicago 0
Dec.	11	Boston	3	Rangers 0
Dec.	13	Boston	3	Canadiens 2
Dec.	15	Boston	1	Canadiens 0
Dec.	18	Boston	2	Detroit 0
Dec.	20	Boston	3	Americans 0
Totals		Boston	26	Opponents 7

The fans in Boston town have only been witnesses to two of the six shutouts, the others coming in Chicago, New York, Montreal and Detroit. Counting the games before and after his first string of three, Brimsek compiled a record of 231 minutes, 54 seconds, without a puck being propelled past him. At the moment the last one put in the Boston nets came from the stick of Herbie Cain, of Canadiens, in the third period of their game on Dec. 13, giving him now an unbroken string of 195 minutes, 15 seconds. Bruins play Rangers Sunday night and the Eleveth puck-stopper will be shooting for his fourth shutout in a row, something only previously accomplished by Roy Worters, of Americans, and the late Charlie Gardiner, of the Black Hawks.

Remember When—

Jack Dempsey, fully aware of Negro Joe Louis' ability with his fists, announced three years ago today he would conduct a "white hope" tourney among Canadian and United States boxers. Elimination bouts were held in both countries, but the Detroit Brown Bomber's rise to the heavyweight championship was not marred by serious contenders.

Hines Rates Rovers Tops

(Ed Fitkin in Toronto Globe and Mail)

There is some talk that New York Rovers will show here early in the New Year. It's only talk at the moment, but it's a possibility that may develop into an actuality.

If Lester Patrick's amateur farmhands do invade this hockey citadel, it will be with the sole purpose of again crossing sticks with Goodyears. Possibly the game will be arranged with revenge as the motif, for certainly Goodyears haven't been allowed to forget that 9-1 lacing the Rovers tossed into their laps during the Tiremen's recent ill-fated expedition.

The Rovers would be a standout attraction. They play the same type of hockey as the Rangers, and we've discovered (rather sadly) that such a type is very impressive. The Rovers are current pace-setters in the Eastern States League, and at this writing had won 11 and lost 5.

Second Place

According to Pick Hines, who coaches the second-place Orioles, and consequently has to put up with the Rovers all season, the future Rangers are really tops as amateur teams come. Most of their players are recruited from the West, and Alfie Pike, the kid who made such a hit with Winnipeg Monarchs here two years ago, is the outstanding individual. In fact, Mr. Hines avers, he's the best player in the league.

The possibility that Rovers would play here rather intrigued Mr. Hines. It intrigued him to such a degree that he came through with a suggestion, which we herewith pass along. The Merton street meanderer proposes that not only should the Rovers be invited, but also his Baltimore Orioles.

This suggestion, if it gets past the Board of Censors, would provide Toronto fans with one of the finest amateur twin-bills in years—Goodyears against the Rovers in one game and Baltimore against Oshawa in the other.

"Those four teams would really pack 'em in," Mr. Hines said, as a parting shot that sounded strangely like a star salesman's strongest argument being driven home. With the accompanying banging of fist-on-desk, of course.

Bobby Forster, Markham's gift to the Orioles via Oshawa, is handling the netminding chores in modified Brimsek fashion. The kid with the cowlick reminiscent of the late Chuck Gardiner, got away to a shaky start and was away off-form in his first four games. But now he's working as he did when Oshawa Generals came from nowhere to fight through to the Memorial Cup finals last semester.

An "all-day American polo tournament" was held in Pretoria, South Africa.

Learned Lesson, Take Louis In '39 Says Farr

By Alan Randal
(Canadian Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(CP).—Tommy Farr undoubtedly has mellowed during his American stay but those who think four straight ring losses could discourage the one-time irrascible Welshman have not met up with this man from Tonypandy Hills. He is more eager than ever—and wiser.

"You watch," he hollered today as he burned 1938's fistic bridges, "by the summer of 1939 I'll be knocking on Joe Louis' door again."

"Last year was the worst year of my life,' he added. "I want to wipe it out—everything. I'm going to burn every stitch of the flashy clothes I bought and wade right back to the top."

Farr, after losing to heavyweight champion Louis in 1937 and to Jimmy Braddock and Maxie Baer in 1938, finally caught up with himself last week when Lou Nova took him 15 rounds and won. Tommy found he had everything to beat the Californian but condition because nine months of soft living don't disappear with a few weeks training. Now, in his own words, Tommy is once more a "hungry man."

"I love to fight," he fairly shouted. "I love everything about the business. I'm fighting Red Burman next month and I'll be fighting Louis again because I can give him a better battle than Nova, Baer or anybody else. I'm not afraid of him and the public knows it."

You might call Farr the most successful failure the ring has known—popular in spite of losing one fight after another since he shocked everybody but himself by going 15 round against thundering mittens of dusky Joe in 1937.

That performance, embellished with dollar signs for the Welshman, came under the heading of triumph—none too easy to take for a former coal miner 23. Tommy went soft. He admitted as much without being reminded of the nifty hats and haberdashery he sported during the past year around about Manhattan's gayer spots. It took Lou Nova to point it out.

Tommy has lined his sock well. He could retire any time though not right after a year in which he spent more dollars than he made. That comes closer to breaking Farr's heart than ever Joe Louis will. While there are fights to be fought, money to be made and the chance of another shot at Louis, one can expect to hear more about this 'hungry man" from Wales.

anadiens Off.

Shibicky and his linemates, Neil and Mac Colville, contributed all but the last Ranger goal, which Clint Smith bagged. As Canadiens showed lack of lustre, Mac opened the scoring in the second period with the aid of his brother Neil and Muzz Patrick. A minute later Shibicky made the score 2-0 on the brothers' assists.

Big Babe Siebert, playing his best rushing game of the year, tried to rally the Frenchmen with an early third-period goal and another after Shibicky had scored his second. But Siebert's punch was the only one the home club had, and Shibicky and Smith closed the goal-getting with a pair within 16 seconds.

Earl Seibert carried a similar drive from the deefnce for the Black Hawks, to score two early goals, but Chicago faded when Detroit's veterans began to go. In three meetings this term, the Hawks have failed to defeat the Wings.

Seibert scored an unassisted goal and one with the help of the N. H.L.'s leading scorer, Johnny Gottselig, and Bob Gracie. Chicago's total was completed by Gracie 22 seconds after the second period began.

Lewis Gets One

Dave Trottier, who came from retirement last week to join the Wings, began their comeback with a goal from Herbie Lewis. Old Marty Barry carried it along on a relay from Chuck Conacher and Mud Bruneteau and Carl Liscombe tied the score five minutes before the second chapter closed. The third and the overtime went almost without event.

Boston's injury problem became more complicated with Manager Art Ross' announcement that Milt Schmidt, high-scoring centre, would be out for 10 days with injuries suffered against Canadiens Tuesday. Winger Charlie Sands and centre Bill Cowley are other injured Bruins.

Sailors Tumble To G-Men In 4-1 Battle

OSHAWA, Ont., Dec. 23 — (CP). Oshawa's G-men were still alone in second place of the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior A group today, immediate threat of their keen rivals, Port Colborne Sailors, shaken at least temporarily.

A win for the Tars here last night would have sent them scurrying past Oshawa into the second notch, but they failed to hold off a third-period drive by the G-Men and dropped a 4-1 decision. The victory gave Oshawa 11 points, four less than the leading Toronto Goodyears, but three more than either Port Colborne or St. Catharines.

For two periods the Sailors held their own and went into the final session with the score tied 1-1. They took the offensive early in the closing 20 minutes and provided the G-Men with openings that brought three goals. The Ports also spoiled their chances by playing shorthanded three times during the third period due to penalties, while the G-Men were understaffed but once.

Smith sent the G-Men in front early in the opening period, but Gooney McGowan kept the Sailors in the hunt when he scored on a solo effort. The second period went scoreless and in the third, Lex Chisholm, Cooper and Doc Rowden scored in order for Oshawa.

Pate Deserting Tennis Court

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP).—As though the loss of J. Donald Budge were not a crushing enough blow to future United States' Davis Cup tennis, it appeared likely to-day that Captain Walter Pate also will be missing when the Australians come challenging anew for the cup next summer.

Pate, the little Wall street lawyer who coached and counselled the boys to victory the past two years, has asked President Holcombe, ward of the United States' Lawn Tennis Association, to appoint another captain. Pate needs to get back to his law practice.

When Pate took hold of Budge four years ago, the coast redhead was only a hope and a promise, with a fair forehand. It was Pate who finally persuaded him to change to his present "eastern" grip.

N.H.L. Stars

Alex Shibicky, and Neil and Mac Colville, Rangers, picked up nine scoring points in a 5-2 victory over Canadiens with Shibicky getting three goals, Mac Colville a goal and three assists and Neil Colville two assists.

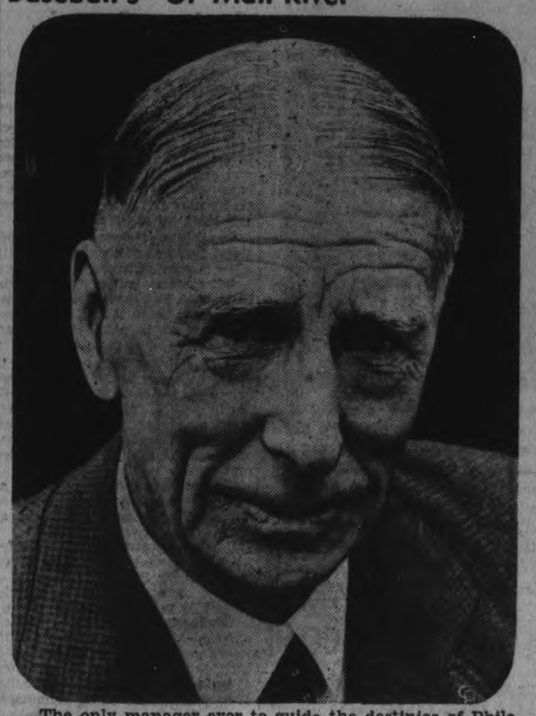
Dave Trottier, Detroit, tallied his first N.H.L. goal of the season in second game with Wings and started team on three-goal drive that netted a draw.

Baseball's "Ol' Man River"



The only manager ever to guide the destinies of Philadelphia Athletics in the American League, Connie Mack, ABOVE, today celebrates his 76th birthday, hale and hearty, and determined to keep right on wig-wagging the Athletics to bigger things with his famous scorecard. After many years of celebrating his birthday on December 23, it was discovered the actual date was the 22nd, but the venerable pilot decided to stick to the old date for what little celebrating he does.

Christmas Shopping Of Tigers Brings Up Fred Hutchinson

(By Central Press Canadian.)

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 23.—This Christmas present the Detroit Tigers have purchased for themselves will prove no April Fool's joke.

Because big Freddie Hutchinson already has demonstrated he's got what it takes to be a baseball pitcher despite his 19 years.

Last summer he was the Seattle Rainier's star hurler and he proved the Pacific Coast League's leading pitcher. He won 25 games in '38, and lost but seven, with an earned run average of 2.48. And last year was his first in professional baseball.

Jack Lelivelt, Seattle manager, asserts Hutchinson already has what it ordinarily takes 10 to 12 years of steady campaigning to acquire.

And that's a real compliment when you consider that two years ago he was playing American Legion junior ball; 18 months ago he was bidding Franklin high graduates good-bye here, and last April pitched his first pro game.

Pitched Semi-Pro.

In 1937, though, he did pitch bush ball for George Burns' Yakima, Wash., team in the North-west league, which is not even a unit of organized baseball.

No small wonder is this boy Freddie. He's a big one — six feet two inches, 207 pounds! And his 19th birthday came only last August.

Born in Seattle, "Hutch" packed local stands whenever word got around he was to pitch. The kid is of English-Irish descent. His father is Dr. Joseph L. Hutchinson, who knows as much about baseball as he does about sawing bones.

In the bush league, Freddie won 20 and lost four games for Yakima. Late in the '37 season, he was given permission to accompany the Johnson Paints of Tacoma back to Wichita, Kas., for the national semi-pro tourney. Hutch didn't win the championship.

Previously, whenever scouts showed up, Freddie's fond father put up the "stop" sign. Father Hutchinson always figured John, an older son, was kicked around a bit by the St. Louis Browns. Two older brothers had dabbled in baseball, but none with the success of Freddie.

The young hurler started out in star fashion—he was given a $2,500 bonus for signing. The rumor is he's to receive a percentage of the present sales price—some say about 20 per cent.

Pitches to Spots.

No "thrower" is this 19-year-old flinger. He doesn't try to get past every hitter, but he uses the old bean like a veteran. He has fine control and pitches to spots and weaknesses. He is a smart observer and after one swing around the circuit he knew his batters on the Pacific Coast.

He has splendid speed but doesn't rely on it. And every curve doesn't explode. He uses a well-chosen mixture.

Some fans think he's a bit cocky for a youngster, particularly a few in Portland, Ore. Once last summer while pitching against the Portland Beavers, he got into a bad hole. He called for time out, walked over to the Seattle bench, took a drink of water, walked back to the mound, and struck out the hitter.

His steammates like him. On road trips he's a model athlete — no smoking or drinking. When not at a movie he's generally hanging around a hotel lobby.

FRED HUTCHINSON

Rumor had it that Freddie would be in a Yankee or Pittsburgh Pirate uniform in 1939, but 'twas Detroit Tigers who were the best Christmas shoppers.

Mack 76 Today Wants Another Flag, Says His Retirement Is As Far Away As the Stars

By John Reitinger
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23—(AP).—Connie Mack, 76 to-day, will not be completely satisfied with life unless he produces another winning baseball team.

The tall leader of Philadelphia Athletics planned no particular birthday celebration, but as he reflected on more than 50 years in baseball he said: "If I had it all to do over again, I wouldn't change a thing."

"Looking back over the years, I have had bad ones in the game, but I also have had many, many happy ones," he said. "My ambition at this stage of life is to give Philadelphia a good ball club again.

"To me, retirement is as far away as the stars. That only comes up in the minds of other people; never in mine. When I should go will be known to me first. When my players come to me and tell me to do this or that or question my judgment, I'll know it is time to quit. When I cannot think for myself, I'll step out."

Mack owns 50 per cent of the ball club, and while he does not have legal control, he has the confidence and consent of the other 50 per cent to run the club as he deems best. To Connie Mack, who has managed the Athletics 38 years, no ball club is great unless it repeats. He believes one should repeat a third time, and said:

Yanks Best of All Time

"In my opinion the Yanks are the best club of all time. I didn't put them in that class until the last World Series. Before that, Baltimore Orioles of the 90's, Chicago Cubs of 1906 to 1909, and the Athletics of 1910-14 were, to me, the three greatest clubs.

"The Athletics of 1914 probably would have gone on for years if it had not been for the Federal league. This league and not any desire to sell players caused me to break up that great team.

"The league offered some of our players three times the salary they were getting—it caused dissatisfaction among them and resulted in our losing the 1914 World Series to Boston Braves in four games."

Connie Mack regarded Ty Cobb as the greatest ball player of all time. "He was in a class by himself—there has been none like him since he left the game." The greatest pitcher, Mack said, was Christy Mathewson.

4 Holdups Bring Toronto's '38 Total Over 200

TORONTO, Dec. 23 (CP).—Police paid tribute today to two Toronto men who captured an alleged gunman following a drug store holdup late last night. The holdup, one of four in the city last night, brought the 1938 total well above the 200-mark.

Harold Hancock, 23, Toronto, captured by Fred McCullough, 27, and Martin Siegel, is charged with armed robbery and having a weapon dangerous to the public peace. Police said a loaded revolver and a second round of ammunition were found on Hancock's person.

McCullough and Siegel were in the dispensary of the pharmacy talking to the proprietor when two men entered, one of them carrying a revolver, and held up Percy Lipshitz, assistant in the store. The bandits fled with $1 from the cash register as McCullough and Siegel ran out the rear door of the store and around to the front in an effort to apprehend them.

One of the men had disappeared but they sprinted after a second man who was running up the street. They said he turned into a bowling alley and that they, assisted by Al Booth, a service station proprietor, overpowered him as he came out of a phone booth. Search for the second man is continuing.

Considerate Robber.

A polite, well-dressed gunman walked into a downtown cake shop a few hours earlier, threatened the attendant, Mrs. Marguerite Meredith, with a revolver and opened the cash register. When he saw the small amount of money in the till he said he was sorry, but that he was "a married man with a family and I'm out of work," according to Mrs. Meredith. He did not take the money.

"Then he asked me if I'd mind giving him a few minutes to make his getaway before calling the police," she said. She refused and the bandit forced her to the back of the store before fleeing.

Two men, one armed with a revolver, jumped in a delivery truck operated by Robert Martin, 34, forced him to keep driving, and relieved him of $59, he told police. A few blocks later the thieves jumped off the slow-moving vehicle and disappeared. No attempt was made to take any of the parcels.

Thomas Offen, driver for a wholesale tobacconist, was the fourth victim. He told police a man walked over to his truck and demanded "that package of tobacco." The man pointed an object at him from an overcoat pocket.

Offen handed the man a large carton of cigarettes valued at $25. The man fled in another car. Offen said the man didn't ask for any money.

Hale and Farewell to the White House

U.S. Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings, LEFT, who will leave President Roosevelt's cabinet on January 1 to take up a private law practice, appears to be "happy about the whole thing" as he leaves the White House after a cabinet meeting. Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins CENTRE, whom rumor slates for a post in the Roosevelt cabinet, already sits in on cabinet meetings and is pictured here leaving the White House after sitting in on the latest meeting with President Roosevelt. This meeting marked the last appearance of Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, RIGHT, as a cabinet member. The ABOVE mentioned rumor hints that Hopkins will fill the Roper vacancy.

Reports were current in Liberal circles last night that some form of an appeasement had been reached in the controversy between the prime minister and Premier Hepburn of Ontario.

W. A. Fraser, Liberal member of parliament for Northumberland and Ross Gray, chief Liberal whip in the Commons, expressed confidence on their return from a visit to Premier Hepburn, that the next federal election would be fought by a united Liberal party.

No Appointments.

There was no announcement of the long-awaited diplomatic appointments. Mackenzie King said, however, that the King has approved the government's choices of the new ministers to the Paris Legation and the dual legation to serve Brussels and The Hague. The approval of the foreign governments concerned has not been received yet and the announcement will not be made until that endorsation arrives in Ottawa.

It was learned that W. A. Found, Deputy Minister of Fisheries, will retire within several days from the government post. He reaches the retirement age of 65 to-morrow. It was not known who will succeed him.

The next cabinet meeting will not be held until next Thursday and as the capital settled into the holiday doldrums the feature political development was reports an accord had been reached in the intra-party controversy between Mr. Mackenzie King and Premier Hepburn in Ontario.

The Prime Minister, when questioned about the reports at the press conference, said he was not aware of them but that "it was a result much to be desired."

In Liberal circles here, however, the impression was growing that there had been an appeasement.

The government is understood to have the major part of its legislative program completed and after a few more cabinet meetings will have all in readiness for the parliamentary opening next Jan. 12.

He predicted there would be full senate discussion next month of German-American relations.

The state department had received with frank astonishment the German protest against Secertary Ickes' Cleveland speech, in which he declared that for a comparison with modern dictatorships it was necessary to go back to a "period of history when man was unlettered, benighted and bestial."

Welles' refusal to apologize was delivered in some of the plainest language which the state department has used in 20 years. It was generally believed President Roosevelt knew of his intention to speak out.

Lets It All Out

An effort was made to keep the statement secret, but it became known in Berlin. Welles then decided to release a full report of the conversation.

He told Dr. Thomsen that recent Nazi policies had shocked American public opinion more profoundly than anything that has taken place in many decades, and that public indignation here was inescapable.

Welles was particularly aroused by many slighting references to President Roosevelt and the late President Woodrow Wilson by German newspapers and officials whom he told Thomsen the United States knew were completely under the influence and dictation of the German government.

He said the German protest came with singularly ill grace from a government that had openly permitted such attacks over a period of many months.

Macdonald, for some years in charge of Montreal advertising offices of the Southam newspapers. Arthur H. Allardyce, assistant advertising manager of the Tribune, will go to Montreal to succeed Mr. Macdonald.

Indicted On Anti-Trust Charges

Twenty-one of the foremost leaders in American medicine have been indicted on anti-trust charge by a grand jury of the U.S. district court. Shown here are two of those indicted. The medical men are being charged with conspiring to thwart the operations of the Group Health Association, Inc., of Washington, D.C.

50 Canadian Experts To Learn Secret Of Aircraft Building In England

LONDON, Dec. 23—(CP).—About 50 skilled Canadian workmen will cross the Atlantic shortly to learn the technical secrets or aircraft construction from Lewis Ord, Canadian production genius who leaves for Canada early in the New Year to superintend construction of airplanes there for the Royal Air Force.

Called from his job as production director of Britain's air armament program to take over general managership of Canadian Associated Aircraft Limited, the Toronto-born engineer will return to Canada in February to become active head of the firm Canadian aircraft builders formed to make bombers for Britain.

Arrangements have been completed, the 57-year-old Canadian said, for the nucleus of 50 skilled Canadian craftsmen to come to England for a period of training in manufacture of the Handley Page 'Hampden' heavy bombers they will later build in Canada. Mr. Ord had a lengthy railroad career in Canada and expressed every confidence in ability of Canadian labor to turn out airplanes.

Not a Hard Job.

"My experience has been that the training of labor for a new type of mechanical production is not as difficult as it sounds, and the potentialities of Canadian labor are unbounded," he told an interviewer in his busy air ministry office where he is working to clean up loose ends of the big job he is leaving.

Credited with introduction of large scale mass production methods in Great Britain, Mr. Ord had little doubt of Canada's ability to produce warplanes efficiently for Britain. He would not predict when the first Canadian-built bomber would be ready to fly the Atlantic for delivery here, but he said that "after the first bomber comes from the assembly plant our worries about production limits will be over. It will only remain for the Air Ministry to worry about getting the money to pay for our output."

Canada's initial order is for 100 of the heavy twin-engined Hampden bombers at a cost of about $10,000,000, including plant equipment and organization costs. Member firms will build bomber parts separately, and the machines will be assembled and tested at central assembly plants at Montreal and Toronto.

"I look upon my appointment as an opportunity for vital national service—service of a character which Canada seems well suited to contribute in these difficult times," Mr. Ord said.

One Great Advantage.

"Britain clearly sees the need of fostering an active aircraft organization in Canada to provide supplies when factories here might be put out of commission. And the great advantage and, in fact, necessity of promoting production in Canada — immune as it is from the more likely war zones—is obvious."

He hoped to see the Canadian aircraft industry a model of efficiency in three or four years. The set-up of the co-operative company, he thought, was excellent.

Production of aircraft components in separate factories for later assembly would result in a smoother and swifter production rate because each part would receive a concentration of executive brain power. The weakness of the single unit plant was the fact brain power was divided.

HIGHWAYS CLEAR.

Motorists arriving in the city on Thursday night report that the highways from Peterborough to Toronto by way of 28 and 2 are clear of ice and snow and in excellent condition.

RADIOS FOR HOSPITALS.

Five radios to be placed in the public wards of Nicholls Hospital during the Christmas season have been donated by Ken. McCannan, R. H. Childerhose, and A. Comstock & Sons.

ICY ROADS BLAMED.

The icy condition of the intersection of Charlotte and Water streets is blamed for an accident there Thursday in which cars driven by George Benton, 782 Water street and Sidney Ward, were damaged in a collision.

TO BECOME MOUNTIE.

Another Peterborough boy becomes a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police next week, Michael Pepe, son of Alfred Pepe, having been notified to report for duty, in Toronto. He will afterwards go to Regina for training.

ELECTRIC RAZOR STOLEN.

Stealing from cars is still going on in Peterborough. Thursday night some one stole a new electric razor which John P. Watts had purchased earlier in the evening. Mr. Watts left the hair-remover in his parked car and when he came back the razor had been removed.

RADIO INTERFERENCE.

A few residents in Ashburnham have complained that "sparkers" on Christmas tree lights are causing radio interference. The sparkers cause the Christmas lights to flash on and off, and each interruption in the electric current is registered on the radio by a crackling noise.

TO BUY HARDWOOD.

Hardwood for the city's requirements next year is likely to be bought from Robert Knox who has 5,000 cords in Harvey township. He has quoted the relief committee $6.75 a cord delivered at the municipal yard or $4 on the roadside north of Buckhorn. The committee the other night decided that this wood, 75 per cent. maple, was probably as good as could be obtained at the same price, but by way of forestalling criticism it was decided on Alderman Glover's suggestion to call for tenders in the possibility that some other bids might be received.

DOMESTIC EPISODE.

"When I got home my wife was entertaining the Ladies' Aid or some group like that, and as I entered the house the rich fragrance of coffee swirled around me. I didn't think much of it at that moment, but when I finally reached the kitchen and my eye fell on the percolator it struck me all of a sudden that I had put the ten dollars my father had given me for a birthday present in the container you put the coffee in. I had put the bill there a week before, intending to think up some way of returning it to my dad. And there it was in the coffee pot. No wonder the fragrance smelled rich when it was emanating from a ten dollar bill. I didn't wait a second, dumping out the coffee grains. The bill was intact, needed only drying out, but it was a close shave to being tossed out in the garbage pail."

3,000 Toys Ready For Distribution To City's Children

These are the toys that are being distributed to hundreds of Peterborough's homes today, so that children may still hold their faith in life. There are close to 3,000 toys here, the most the fire department has ever repaired—and still there are not enough. Working on a more than 24-hour shift, these fire fighters are busy wrapping and delivering the toys all night last night and all day today. In the background are Mayor James Hamilton, Alderman Robert Cotton, and W. Howe, who visited the department and were amazed at the good quality of the toys. With them are members of the force, including Fire Chief George Gimblett. (Examiner Staff Photo.)

Kiwanian Wives Are Guests Of 'Empress'

Kiwanian are busy men today, delivering Christmas baskets to needy families in the city, taking children from St. Vincent's Orphanage, the Shelter, and the Kiwanis Summer camp to a free picture show at the Regent Theatre.

Their wives were guests of the management of the Empress Hotel at the club's weekly luncheon meeting today. It was a meeting in the true spirit of Christmas, with arrangements being made to care for needy, to distribute as many gifts as possible, and was complete with a turkey dinner. Carols in place of the usual songs were another feature. Soloists were Mrs. Lawrie Mitchell, and Cliff Hall, both of whom sang solos that concerned the Nativity and that were subjects of long applause. Mrs. H. V. Dobson was pianist.

Called upon to introduce no speaker at all, Harold Scott gave a long and rambling dissertation between jokes—only two of which were off colour—and was rewarded by the ambiguous praise of President L. J. Pettit: "When Scotty is called upon to do nothing, he certainly fills the bill." Literary highlight of the speech was a poem, that seemed vaguely familiar to most, which he offered as a "Christmas poem," and which dealt with a man, a pig and a gutter, and wound up with the pig's superiority to both.

The theatre program for underprivileged children today is a yearly offering by Gordon Miller, manager of the Regent theatre. Transportation is being arranged by Lawrie Mitchell, manager of the Peterborough Bus Lines, free of cost.

SHIPPED 11 TONS OF TURKEYS

More than two thousand turkeys —11 tons of them—were shipped this week from Jopling's Meat Market to the T. Eaton Company in Toronto. Average weight of each bird was 14 pounds, and they were said by shippers to be of the highest possible quality. Last year Jopling's shipped only three or four tons, but the greatest number they ever shipped was 28 tons, some six or seven years ago.

City Firemen Work All Night Packing Toys For Needy

If you think you are tired when Christmas morning dawns and your youngsters start to strip the Christmas tree all by themselves and rush in to wake you from that first sound sleep in weeks to tell you Santa Claus has come and gone, then pause for a moment between yawns and pity the really tired firemen.

For days these men have been working ten, twelve, fourteen hours a day, trying to get as many toys as possible ready for poor kiddies who would be heart-broken on Christmas morn were it not for them. But all that work was child's play compared to the work they will still be at when you read this story. Yesterday and all day today, only stoppping for a bite to eat, with never a wink of sleep, firemen have been sorting and wrapping parcels.

Last night an Examiner reporter fell into good company when he dropped into the firehall about midnight to see how things were progressing. It was close to four in the morning when he got away, but it was worth losing sleep for. "One boy, age 9; one boy, age 7; one girl, age 5; one girl, age 3; one baby girl, age 6 months," Assistant Chief George Smith was shouting across the huge room stacked with toys. Half a dozen men would immediately start a search, would come forward with some gift for a child of each of those ages. All night long, with only a pause to drink some "pop." In no time at all, they had the coat away from the reporter, his vest unfastened, his collar open, and had placed him at work. And great were the jeers that went up when he proved "sissy" by leaving at a few minutes to four o'clock. For, you see, with true reporter's instincts he had dropped in just in time for a midnight feast—a yearly feature of the Christmas packing. Cooked for the most part by one of the staff, it was a sumptuous affair, complete even to Christmas cake. So, by making him stay so late, the firemen were insisting that he work for his dinner.

There was another helper there last night, and one who stayed through until long after daybreak, rendering valuable assistance. He was Dave Calder, who lives at the corner of Aylmer and Simcoe streets, an elderly man who likes to give children a break. Fred Brown, Gilmour street, perennial assistant to the packers, missed his first year in the past half dozen. He was noted as an extraordinary "wrapper-upper." He telephoned to express regrets, could not be present because he has a severe cold.

Aid Over 300 Families

Presents for more than 300 children were wrapped last night and Fire Chief George Gimblett expressed fear that, although there are more toys this year than any other, there may be a severe shortage. The department will probably have to buy more, since no time remains to repair old ones.

The same men who worked all night went home to eat breakfast this morning, then hurried back and began deliveries that lasted all day.

Cars Damaged

Cars driven by Fraser Watson, 477 Roger street and Oliver Kelly, 714 Water street, were damaged when they collided at Mark and Hunter streets Thursday. The bumper was torn off the front of Kelly's machine and the frame knocked out of line while the right front and rear fenders and the right running board of Watson's car were damaged.

Barber Shop Till Robbed In Night

Securing an entrance into the Charlotte street curling rink through the medium of an open window, thieves made their way through the rink some time during Thursday night and gained admittance into the barber shop of David Hall, which is at the front of the rink property. Here they secured a little over $5 in cash from the till. The whole place had been thoroughly ransacked but the thieves were evidently after nothing but money as they apparently took no tobacco or other articles from the Hall store or from the jewelry store of Bert Austin.

Crown Proves Its Case Against Healey

Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., intimated at the conclusion of the hearing against John Healey in police court this morning of stealing wood from H. W. German of Galway township, that he would find the prisoner guilty but he remanded Healey until Thursday of next week in order that some information may be obtained in regard to the man's past.

H. W. German, owner of the wood, testified that he had some negotiation with Healey about the prisoner drawing wood from German's camp in Galway township into Peterborough but that afterward he had met the accused one day in Lindsay and had told him not to go ahead with the contract because he did not think he had enough wood to fulfill the order.

Wesley Hill, in charge of the German wood camp, swore that on November 23 Healey had come to the camp and had said that he had orders from German to draw wood. Witness had seen him loading his truck that day with green wood.

Cross-examined by Healey, Hill said that after Healey had been at the camp he had seen some wood scattered alongside the roadway but that it was not the green wood from the pile where he had seen Healey loading and there was only about a quarter of a cord.

Saw Him On Road

Henry Montgomery of Bobcaygeon testified that on November 23 he had seen Healey five or six miles south of the German camp with from one-and-three quarters of a cord and two cords of wood on his truck. And Mrs. Annabelle Sinclair, who said she lived at the German wood camp, swore that on the same day she had seen a truck laden with wood passing her place. It was the first truck carrying wood that had been in there.

Healey supplied the only defence evidence. He testified that he had a contract with German to draw wood to Peterborough and that he had gone out to the camp and secured a load. When he started to drive away he said that the wheel of his truck hit a stump and he spilled nearly the whole load. Only three or four sticks were left on the truck and he had thrown them off.

He stated that he had come to Peterborough and seen a doctor and then driven to Lindsay where he left the truck in a garage. He explained that he had been driving the truck for a finance corporation at 35 cents an hour and claimed that he had notified an employee of the corporation that he was leaving the truck in Lindsay until the roads dried up.

"My instructions are," said Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., "that you said nothing about the truck and the company did not know where it was until Provincial Constable Silvester informed them that the truck was in Lindsay."

Magistrate Langley said that the actions of the accused in the matter had not been those of an innocent man."

"Where is your home?" he asked the accused.

"I'm boarding in Peterborough now," replied Healey. "I came originally from Windsor."

"How did you happen to get down this way?'

"I came down first to work on the Minden-Dorset highway job," replied Healey, who told the court that he had no previous record.

However, when Magistrate Langley heard that the prisoner had not yet been fingerprinted he decided to remand him until next Thursday.

Teachers in South Africa have just been given permisison to serve on city councils.

Motorists Skidding On No. 28's Icy Curves "Put The Finger" On Tardy Sanders

After one of the iciest night of the winter there were plenty of driving complaints in Peterborough yesterday. Truckers with the hazard of huge loads were the butterest but were not the ones that suffered outside frayed drivers' nerves.

"Of what use is the Department's campaign for careful driving if the huge sand piles they have scattered liberally along our highways are not used? said W. Addyman, owner of the Hamilton-Peterborough Freight Lines. "Thursday night No. 28 hadn't a shovel of sand on it, and still hadn't when we hit Springville hill at 11.30. Between here and the front we passed two cars in the ditch and it's a wonder there were no more. The road from Hamilton to Toronto, through the city and along No. 2 east was well sanded but when you hit No. 28 it's bare ice.

"Our drivers have been carrying their own sand to get through because they find these conditions practically every icy morning, particularly if they are traveling early. The same applies late at night. They found the same thing last winter.

"This Christmas we're laying up the trucks on Friday night to avoid the heavy holiday traffic and give the driver a well-earned extra day. But lack of trucks on the roads won't help matters much if the sanders don't get out before 9 o'clock in the morning and fold up at dusk, ice or no ice."

The Rambling REPORTERS

AN UNUSUAL GUN

A young man in the north end of the city is doubtless wondering these days what kind of license he needs if he is to carry the remarkable .22 rifle he purchased recently by mail order from Hamilton.

It is a truly remarkable gun, one that hunters have often dreamed about—when they had had a few too many—for with the greatest of ease it shoots around corners. It might even nail a fleeing deer if it hid behind a tree or a boulder.

Here's the way it happened. The young man works at the Nashua Paper Company, and word got about that he had ordered a rifle from a Hamilton company. Fellow workers got busy, wired to the company asking that delivery of the gun be held up for a few days. Then they fashioned a "dream" gun for him, sent it on one truck to Hamilton, to be returned on another—all carefully wrapped. It was a mightily astonished young man who opened his parcel with great expectation, when he found the butt of his weapon was fashioned from an old piece of soft wood, and the barrel was a curved and dusty old piece of gas pipe.—P.

J. M. R. Fairburn Is Retiring

Old residents of this city will join in extending congratulations to J. M. R. Fairbairn, chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railways and former resident of Peterborough who retires on pension after 38 years of service on December 31st. The official announcement of his retirement was made today at Montreal.

Mr. Fairbairn was born in Peterborough and lived in the old stone house on Park street north of McDonnel. He was educated at the old Central school, then at the Collegiate and went on to university. He is the son of the late Thomas M. Fairbairn, a former barrister in this city, who for a time represented Peterborough in the Legislature. His mother was a daughter of the late Rev. Mr. Roger, first minister at St. Paul's Presbyterian church. The late Judge Roger who practised law here before being elevated to the Bench and located at Cobourg was his uncle.

Roland Denne, one of the local men who attended school with Mr. Fairbairn, remarked that the latter was one of the foremost boosters in Canada for his home town of Peterborough and on several occasions has given valuable assistance to city councils in different ways.

Heaviest Mail In History Being Handled

Handicapped by lack of proper accommodation an augmented staff of postal workers are struggling to handle the greatest mail in the city's history at the Post Office today.

The inadequacy of the present quarters was evident to a reporter who watched the men at work for a few minutes this morning under the supervision of Charles Lacheur, postmaster. Mail was stacked in every available bit of space and a double row of parcels stretched from the drop box at the south end of the building zigzagging along the floor to the rear. These were in their proper order to be picked up by the respective carriers.

Postmen and their assistants snatched a bite at restaurants at noon before going back to the task of bringing Yuletide greetings and gifts to hundreds of Peterborough homes. The men were unanimous that the mail this year was a record.

Start Before Five A.M.

The letter carriers came to work this week before 5, and started to sort letters into proper order for delivery. At 8 o'clock they were still at it and many did not get on to the street before nine thirty. The first delivery which is usually finished before eleven in the morning during the last few days has not been done until well after two.

Parcels piled high in different locations took up much space in the office, but every man was stepping along like a part of a well oiled machine and Mr. Lacheur was confident all mail would be cleared before the midnight bells toll on Saturday to usher in Christmas.

Enquiry revealed that mail has continued to show an increase in the local office during the past few years and it is only a matter of time until the present quarters will be utterly inadequate to take care of the load, if the increase continues.

Charles Lacheur said it was positively refreshing the way people responded this year to his requests for early delivery and proper addressing of mail. The peak was reached on the 21st and the mail will gradually taper off now until Saturday night. A rough estimate of the letters coming into the office shows sixteen times as many as an average day in the year.

The post office lobby has been a hive of activity since Monday with extra clerks giving service at the stamp wickets.

CHAPTER 33

WORTHINGTON GURLEY had never actually told Sara Sue that he loved her.

He had imagined it quite heartily—Sara Sue being extremely pretty—and it was pleasant imaginings for an impressionable lad among strangers. Infatuation comes easily that way. And, too, he hadn't felt like just giving in to Bob Towne; competition breeds determination, without rational cause.

But 17 is awfully young, and after meeting the sweet little Marcia d'Alaine, Worthington moved around rather sheepishly for a while. Eventually, though, he went to Sara Sue.

"It certainly is funny, how everything in life works out all right," he told her. Remember how you couldn't meet me for that swim a week ago, Sara Sue? Well, that was where I met Marcia, and say—she's grand!"

"She is, truly, Worthington."

"Yeah man! And I was mad at you for a while, for not keeping your date. Well, Fate does things like that, doesn't it?"

Sara Sue smiled. "You aren't mad at me any more? We can still be friends?"

"Oh, gosh, Sara Sue! I should say so! Why, you were the one who brought us together. I can never repay you for that!"

"I thought you laid it to Fate?" She couldn't resist that dig.

"Well, yes, but—well, you know what I mean. You couldn't keep the date and all. I guess I was pestering you anyway. I—I'm young enough to be your Kid brother!"

She squeezed his arm then, and gave him a truly lovely smile. "I wish I did have a kid brother, Worthington. Like you. I hope we will always be friends. Close friends, Marcia and I are."

"Well, gosh, Sara Sue—you bet! You just call on me, any time you want anything. Anything, ever. Gosh, you're swell, Sara Sue!" The young fellow felt it, and meant it. There is no loyalty in Christendom like that of a teen age for an ideal.

Sara Sue Davis, Incorporated, was made immensely happy by that little conference. Worthington had been a problem customer. She had solved his problem (somehow she felt it was a permanent solution) and enjoyed the process.

She was making $300 a month from her novel Counsel in Romance cottage, but beyond that was the immense satisfaction, not to be measured in figures at all, of unselfishly helping others to achieve happiness. "It seems sort of a copybook philosophy, but it works," she mused. "I feel so sorry for people who are cynical about such things."

Two days later she had to listen to a detailed girl-to-girl confession from dainty little Marcia herself. "Had to" perhaps is incorrect; "had the privilege of" is better, for it was a distinct privilege. It always is—to have a happy friend pour out heart secrets. Little Marcia was glowing.

Sara Sue thought she was done with her youngsters, then, except for casual jollity with the gang in her living room. But in that surmise she was wrong.

Ten days after the broken swimming date, Sara Sue was awakened at 11 p. m. by someone gently calling. She awoke with a slight start, but was not frightened because the voice was outside her bedroom window, and she recognized it anyway. It came in a stage whisper—"Sara Sue! Oh, Sara Sue!"

"What is it?" she answered, face to the screen.

"It's me, Worthington. And Marcia. Let us in!"

"Whatever's the matter? It's awfully late."

"It's not midnight. And it's urgent. Emergency."

She slipped into negligee and went to her door, expecting some sort of joke. They came in, both blushing, smiling.

"Listen, Sara Sue," he resumed, "will you let us borrow your wedding ring?"

They might have asked for her kitchen stove, or her tooth brush, or her lawn mower, and still not have surprised her as much. Her wedding ring! She only stared at them, dopey.

"Oh, please, Sara Sue! It's late. Nothing's open now downtown. And we—we're going to get married! Tonight! We just have to have a ring. It wouldn't be like marrying at all, without a ring, Marcia says, and she's right. Will you?"

She plopped down onto a divan, looking at the kids. Not knowing whether to burst into laughter or tears, and somehow wanting to do both.

"Sit down," she finally managed, and they obeyed her.

"And Sara Sue," Marcia went on with the talk, enthusiastically, "We'd just give anything in the world if you'd come with us and be a—a witness. And my bridesmaid, I mean matron. Or whatever it is. Please, will you? You've been so good! I know it's late, but—"

"Where are you going? You have to have a license. And are you sure?"

"Oh, Worthington has the duckiest idea!" Marcia leaned forward in her eagerness. "We can take a boat at Galveston, with a captain. Worthington knows about it. They can take us outside the Texas line, into the ocean. A captain can marry people, and won't it be romantic! On the gulf. There's a moon and everything! Sara Sue, you simply MUST come!"

Simply must!

Sara Sue knew, then, that she'd give anything to do it. She couldn't imagine an elopement more romantic, from start to finish. She had eloped with her Larry, five years ago, and never regretted it. She believed in young love, in young love's wisdom. She was still young herself. She thought Worthington and Marcia were so fine, so clean and good and American.

"I'm so happy for you," she declared at last, suddenly sobbing. "C-congratulations. It's wonderful —w-wonderful—"

She had to stop and cry a moment. Marcia, too, shed tears—crying with her in sheer emotional stress, happy emotion — while Worthington looked on in dire confusion.

The cry didn't last too long, however.

Sara Sue knew that a responsibility had parked itself in her lap. For the first time in her life, in this moment, she felt the "maturity" of her 23 years. Here was genuine romance—almost her own romance being re-enacted before her very eyes. And it was awful to have to do what she knew she must.

She gathered her wits and talked to the youngsters.

Surely, if they insisted, she would lend them her ring. It had never once been off her finger until a year after Larry's death; then to force herself back to normalcy she had stored it away. What better use in all the world for it, than that some other young people should use it for a love-life seal?

Surely, too, she would go with them, stand up with them. Hold Marcia's hand and give the bride away. Do anything under the sun —or under the moon—to help them! It would be an extraordinary pleasure. Romance!

But—Worthington, and Marcia —listen.

Sara Sue talked then. She told them all the "catches" to their happy plan. She talked long and earnestly. She reminded them that they were just freshmen; that Worthington's parents might cut off his money; that they were awfully young, and perhaps just impulsive. "Couldn't you just kiss her a few times tonight, and wait until June at least?" she pleaded.

"I have already done that, Sara Sue! Gosh!" He squeezed his sweetheart, then, loved her openly, unashamed.

"I know," said Sara Sue, not smiling. "I understand. Oh, I do!"

But she talked on.

This world is no easy place to earn a living now. They both had to think of that. And what of possible babies? And what about obligation to your mothers? And you won't have the college education you so wanted. Aren't you studying to be a great physician, Worthington, taking a pre-med course at Rice? What of your future? You might never amount to much without your college degrees.

"I would love him forever," little Marcia vowed, half-whispering, even if he were a street cleaner always, making $10 a week!"

Sara Sue looked into the boy's eyes, long and carefully. She saw the Grand Something in them. Deep. Soulful. She saw the set of his chin. A strong lad. And strong-hearted. She looked at Marcia, head up, so lovely and young; and so sure. The older girl took a deep breath then, sighing. She understood.

"Do you," she asked after a bit, quietly, "still want to go? Now? To be married?"

Both nodded emphatically.

"Yes," whispered Marcia. "Yes!"

Then come on!" Sara Sue Davis ordered, standing up. "It'll take me just five minutes to get on street clothes. "I'll go with you, and we won't stop for anything in the world!"

Maybe You Cannot Afford To Send Expensive Presents, And If Not You Will Find Friends And Relatives Will Appreciate a "Homey" Message From You

THE mad, glad Christmas season is upon us and most of us are running like hysterical hens up and down the store aisles looking for Christmas gifts for our friends and relatives and enemies, wondering what would suit Grandpa, Aunt Mary, Marybelle, the baby and sniffy Cousin Sally, who always looks at the price tag first.

And mostly guessing wrong. For it is a curious psychological fact that while all the balance of the year we can remember the tastes and needs and desires of our families and friends, just let Christmas come and our minds are a perfect blank. We can't recall a single solitary like or dislike, or whether they are the size of Shirley Temple or Elsa Maxwell, or whether they are on a diet or live on caviar. That is why as a Christmas remembrance we send bedridden old Mrs. Jones an umbrella and bestow upon our flapper niece, whose feet are aching for satin slippers, a pair of galoshes.

Happy at this season are those with long purses who cannot only "surprise" their own loved ones with the sables and pearls and new cars for which they have been openly hinting for the last three months, but who can make Christmas the opportunity to fill a poor widow's bin with coal. Or give a working girl a pretty party dress. Or make the cup of bliss of poor children overflow with the feasts and clothing and toys that they have always longed for and never had.

Surely tight must be the fist that does not open at Christmas. Narrow the soul that at this season of good will does not reach out in sympathy to all humanity and wish to add to its joys. Hard is the heart that is not softened and purged of its selfishness, at least for the moment, and that does not feel that it is more blessed to give than to receive.

There are very few who do not like to give at Christmas time, but unfortunately in these days, when every one of our poor, little, overworked dollars has to pinch-hit for five lusty iron men, many of us have to curb our generous instincts and let the money we gladly would have spent in buying pretty things for our friends go on the butcher's bill and to pay the grocer.

So all about us we hear people saying wistfully, "John is out of work," or "Mary's sickness cost us so much that we can't give any Christmas presents this year." So perhaps it is well to remind these disconsolate ones that they not only need not be empty-handed at Christmas, but that it is in their power to send to their friends a Christmas gift that will never fail of its welcome, that will always be just what the recipient desired and that will be remembered and treasured long after most of the Christmas gimcracks have been swept into the ash bin.

That super-Christmas present is a Christmas Letter. Maybe you can't send your friends a thirty-dollar present, but you can send them a three-cent letter in which you can recall old memories that will bring back their youth to them. You can tell them at Christmas time, when we are all a bit sentimental, things that you couldn't say at any other time. How much you love them, how much you have them, how you have understood them and how you have always waved a flag in your heart when you saw how valiantly they were fighting the battle of life.

You can tell them a bit about your own affairs, the cheery ones not to make them sad, and boast a little of your children just to keep them in touch with you and to strengthen the bonds of friendship that wear thin through silence and neglect. It would give them a chance to tell you all about themselves, and that is a privilege at Christmas or any other time.

A Christmas Letter like that would be the best Christmas gift you could send your poor friends, because they could repay in kind. It would be the best Christmas gift you could make your rich friends, because it would be a novelty. It would give them the thing they crave most in the world, and that is unselfish affection.

They would so much rather have a little love than another silver-plated humidor or a forty-seventh cocktail set. Rich people are the neglected poor at Christmas time because every one feels that if they can't send them a yacht they can't send anything, so their stockings are empty on Christmas morning. But many a millionaire would feel like he did when he got his first pair of bought skates if he found a Christmas Letter from an old friend that Santa Claus had left him.

Put yourself in a Christmas Letter and send it to your friends. It is the greatest gift of all.

Tell Your Friends' Fortunes With Cards

Everybody's interested as you tell Dot's fortune. "A telegram," you say, reading the Three of Diamonds.

"Perhaps it's an invitation to an out-of-town party," you go on, as the Nine of Clubs and Six of Hearts pop up.

The Jack of Clubs indicates that Dot is to have a new beau. The Four of Diamonds predicts that she's going to have a raise, too, but it's not all smooth sailing. "There's trouble ahead," says the Five of Spades. But the Nine of Hearts indicates she'll have her wish anyhow.

If you're looking for something different, try the old Romany method. You shuffle and cut the cards into three stacks, laying them out horseshoe fashion.

Will wishes come true? What do the face cards tell about your future? Is success coming your way? Our 32-page booklet gives meaning of every card in the deck. What your horoscope reveals. Tea leaf fortunes. Fortune games for parties.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of FUN WITH FORTUNE TELLING to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME. ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

Mr. Punch, the puppet, who lived with his wife Judy, in the Show-House which stood in the children's playroom, was talking to our friends Knarf and Hanid.

"Yes," said Mr. Punch, smiling, when Hanid asked him if he knew Santa Claus, "of course I do. Santa Claus and I are old friends. In fact —and you can ask the children's father if you don't believe me — I grew up in Santa's palace way up near the North Pole."

Was Christmas Gift.

"You did!" the two shadows exclaimed.

"Yes, indeed. You see, I was a Christmas present. And all Christmas presents come from Santa Claus."

Knarf and Hanid were curious to know what Santa's ice-palace looked like.

"Santa and I are old friends."

"Is it big?" asked Knarf.

"It's bigger than big," said Mr. Punch. "There are more rooms than you could count from Christmas to the other. And every room there are different kinds of toys."

"And are all the rooms filled up?"

"Filled right up to the ceiling," replied Mr. Punch. Then he added after a pause. "All except one tiny little room."

"Which room is that?" the shadows demanded.

"It's the smallest room of all. To tell you the truth, it's more like a cubby hole than a real room. In fact it's quite empty. It's called the room-of-the-children-who-don't."

"Who don't what, Mr. Punch?"

Not Many of Them.

"Who don't believe in Santa Claus. Yes, my dears, there really are some children—not many, I'm glad to say—who don't believe in Santa Claus. So he keeps the room for them. But it's a very extraordinary room. It keeps changing."

"Changing?"

"Yes. You see, every day or so, especially as it gets nearer and nearer to Christmas, the little room gets smaller and smaller. Until finally—"

"Yes, Mr. Punch, until finally—"

"—until finally, on the night before Christmas, it just vanishes altogether. And that makes Santa happiest of all. He smiles and walks around the palace as joyful as can be, and tells everyone :"The room-of-the-children-who-don't has disappeared!"

Knarf and Hanid were very happy to hear this story. Aren't you?"

Two Havelock School Concerts Happy Christmas Events

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Dec. 23.—The Literary Society of the Havelock High school concluded the first half of the school term Thursday afternoon with a program presented in one of the upper rooms.

Miss Buelah Leng, president of the society, was in the chair for the program, which commenced with a chorus by the second form Latin students, entitled "Adeste Fidelis." Principal R. W. Goheen then addressed the students, explaining in detail the new curriculum.

"Does Santa Claus do more harm than good" was the subject of a heated debate between First and Second Forms. The affirmative, taken by Madeline Lewis and Bill Mathison, won over Elsie Fleming and Steve Deline. Judges were Public school principal, W. Duncan, and Robt. McLauchlin.

Other items on the program were a poem, composed and read by Wallace Buchanan; amateur programme and the school paper.

Public School Concert.

In joyful holiday spirit, the pupils of the Havelock Public school held a gala Christmas concert, Wednesday evening in the town hall auditorium. The first occasion in which all the classes have presented a combined entertainment. The event proved a decided success, with the attendance around 200, including pupils, parents and teachers.

Entering whole-heartedly into the holiday spirit, the boys and girls gave a most interesting variety of entertainment, including dialogues, songs, recitation, readings and drills, under the efficient direction of Principal W. D. Duncan and staff, Misses M. L. Roche, E. Roberts, L. Wing, N. Watson and V. Robinson.

Appropriate red and green decorations with a large Christmas tree on the stage brightly illuminated with colored bulbs, added an air of festivity to the scene. The appearance of jolly old St. Nick, towards the end of the evening, brought screams of delight from the children who watched with eager eyes as their beloved Santa Claus handed out the numerous presents which lay at the foot of the tree.

Recitation of "welcome," Ne Wrightly; chorus, "Jolly Santa Claus," Miss Wing's class; "Christmas Fairies," 12 pupils Miss Wing's class; "Christmas Brownies," 11 pupils of Miss Wing's class; chorus "Silent Night," pupils Miss Roche's class; folk dance, pupils of Miss Roche's class; "Broadcast," pupils Miss Robinson's class; "Playmates in Ferryland," Miss Robinson's class; chorus, "Jingle Bells," pupils Miss Robert's class; pantomime "Good Santa Claus," pupils Miss Robert's class; dialogue, "Trouble in Santa Claus Land," pupils Miss Robert's class; chorus, "Merrily We Go," pupils Miss Watson's class concluding number, "Last Word" by three boys, 2 girls.

Eggs will not crack if they are dampened with cold water before being dropped into the boiling water.

Looking Back On This Date

Christ Church cathedral, Vancouver, is 50 years old today. It was on Dec. 23, 1888, that its dedication took place. It was not the first Anglican church in what is now Vancouver. That distinction belongs to St. James, dedicated in 1881, destroyed in the great fire of 1886, after Hastings Town Site became the city of Vancouver. But the present cathedral was the first parish of the Church of England in Canada in the centre of the new city. The C. P. R. donated a site opposite its projected hotel, and a modest wooden building was put up. Its first rector was the Rev. L. Norman Tucker, from Montreal, afterwards Dean of Huron at London, Ont. He soon had a handsome stone church and when he came back east again he left to his successor, Rev. C. C. Owen, a growing congregation, many of whose members played their part in the upbuilding of the great terminal city.

Although the diocese in New Westminster, Archbishop dePencier moved his see house to Vancouver, making St. Paul's church for a time his pro-cathedral; but within the past decade he has formally made old Christ church his see church and thus made it a cathedral. Hundreds of people all over Canada who have worshipped in Christ church will send the present congregation sincere congratulations upon the church's jubilee, and felicitate its rector, Very Rev. W. R. R. Armitage, M. C., not so long ago rector of the Church of the Messiah, Toronto, and son of the much loved Ven. Archdeacon W. J. Armitage, long rector of St. Paul's, Halifax, the mother of all the Anglican churches in Canada, thus being a living link of the Church of England from sea to sea.

Santa Is Present At Party

Members of the Choir of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church were delightfully entertained by the choir leader, Mr. M. B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., and Mrs. Chenhall, 607 Water street, following a short choir practice.

Gifts from a Christmas tree bright with colored balls and lights were distributed by Santa (Mr. George East) whose arrival at the front door was heralded by the music of sleigh bells. He was greeted with the singing of "Jingle Bells" by the choir members, and as he handed out gifts, the jolly fellow demanded a song from many of the recipients.

Three splendid gifts on behalf of the choir to the librarian, Mr. Horace Hope, and to Mr. and Mrs. Chenhall, were presented by the president of the choir, Miss Marion Armstrong.

Social Hour Follows Packing Of Gifts

Mrs. J. Milby, assisted by twenty members of the Confederation Home and School Association, filled bags with candy and oranges, and the gifts were distributed to the school children on Thursday morning.

Tea cup reading was also enjoyed during the tea hour, and Christmas solos were sung by Mrs. F. Hopkins and Mrs. L. Monk.

Bowen—Mouncey

A Yuletide marriage was solemnized at noon today when one of Roseneath's popular young ladies, Blanche Marie Mouncey, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Mouncey, of Roseneath, became the bride of Raymond Curtis Bowen, of Wooler, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bowen of Castleton.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents under the bridal arch of pink and white, from which was suspended a white bell. The arch was arranged in the bow window of the living room and was banked with ferns and potted plants.

Rev. L. W. Scott, pastor of Roseneath United church, officiated. Lohengrins wedding march was played by Miss Vivian Bowen of Castleton, sister of the groom. Mrs. L. W. Scott of Roseneath sang "Beloved it is Morn," during the signing of the register.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a floor length gown of shell pink net over shell pink satin. The bodice was trimmed with satin buttons and the bolero and skirt were trimmed with dainty satin bows. A sash of satin, a coronet of pale pink flowers in her hair, a boquet of sweetheart roses, and silver slippers completed the ensemble.

The bride was attended by Miss Lois Talling of Roseneath. She wore a floor length gown of torquoise blue flounced taffeta, with touches of fuschia satin and rose buds and blue flowers in her hair, roses for her bouquet and silver slippers, completed the costume. William Quinn of Castleton was the groomsman.

Following the ceremony dinner was served. The color scheme in the dining room was pink and white and the three-tiered wedding cake centred the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowen left by motor for a brief honeymoon. For travelling the bride wore a rust alpaca crepe dress, trimmed with gold clips and a gold locket. With this was worn a grey Persian lamb coat, rust velvet hat, rust gloves and bag, and grey goloshes.

The groom's gifts to the bridesmaid and the pianist were compacts, and to the groomsman a combined silver cigarette case and lighter.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowen will reside in Wooler, where Mr. Bowen is public school principal.

St. John's Choir Is Entertained

At the close of the regular rehearsal of St. John's church choir Thursday evening, the members were entertained at a Christmas party in the church parlors of the Parish house, where to the delight of all (particularly the boy choristers), a Christmas tree gaily decorated and laden with gifts was discovered. Since jovial old St. Nicholas had many other duties to perform, his place was assumed by the Rev. R. T. F. Brain.

Each choir boy was presented with a gift and the choirmaster, Frederick G. Mann, L.Mus., the choir-mother, Miss Ruby Quartermaine, and the assistant, Miss Lily Bacon, were all presented with a gift from the boys.

Chocolate bars were distributed to the boy choristers, and after they had left, the adult members were entertained by the choirmaster and Mrs. Mann, when refreshments were served by the hostess. The Rector, Rev. W. P. Robertson, B.A., B.D., was also present.

Members Of Choir Honor Their Leaders

A social meeting was held at the close of the practice of St. Andrew's Church choir Thursday evening, when refreshments were served by the social committee under the convenership of Miss Dorothy Ridyard and Miss Kay Lillico.

Mr. Edward Humpage, chairman of the executive, spoke in appreciative terms of the splendid work done by Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Harle in connection with the choir, and presented them with a beautiful electric lamp as a token of the esteem and affection of the choir members.

Rev. Dr. E. W. Young and Mr. F. E. Kerr, secretary-treasurer, also complimented Mr. and Mrs. Harle on the success of the choir. The singing of Auld Lang Syne brought an enjoyable function to a close.

Christmas Concert Is Held by C.C.F.

The Peterborough branch of the Canadian Co-operative Federation held its annual Christmas tree and concert in the Parago nHall on Thursday evening. Over 300 were in attendance and every child received a gift as well as bags of candy and nuts.

An informal program was held with young and old joining in the old games that have been favorites of all for years. William Wiggins, Eldmer Hickey and John Pilley brought down the house when they entered the kitty-car race. The three had to race to the end of the room, eat several soda biscuits and then return and drink a glass of water. Age won out and John Pilley beat his two young opponents by a wide margin.

Winners of the poultry draw were: 1, Mrs. S. Phillips, 367 Park street; 2, Mrs. W. G. Langhorne, 272 Lansdowne; 3, Mrs. E. Hennessey, 24 Cricket Place; 4, David Fife, 262 Stewart street; 5, William Robertson, 440 George street, and 6, F. Barns, 288 Burnham street.

St. Andrew's Choir Honors Leaders

R. B. Harle, choir leader of St. Andrew's church, was brought to trial Thursday evening. Yes, he was. He and Mrs. Harle were jointly charged with promoting harmony and goodwill amongst the choir members. They did not elect or plead.

Edward Humphage, president of the choir, acted as prosecuting attorney and said that the evidence was so complete that there could be only one verdict in the case. The choir pronounced them guilty. As it is Christmas time, the sentence was made very light.

Mrs. Johnson, on behalf of the choir, presented Mr. and Mrs. Harle with a beautiful reading lamp. Mr. Harle, in thanking the choir, said that he had had great pleasure in training them, that he had conducted much larger choirs that were not nearly as satisfactory in the results obtained. He paid a tribute to the hearty co-operation of Mrs. Williamson, the soloist.

Dr. Young and others also spoke and expressed their appreciation of the good work done by Mr. and Mrs. Harle and the other members of the family.

LEOPARD LEAPS BACK IN FAVOR

By ALICE ALDEN

Fur-trimmed suits continue to star wherever the weather isn't too severe. Leopard is one of the furs that is back in favor this season. It is used to trim daytime and evening things and it has quite jumped out of the sports class. Shirley Ross RIGHT, wears a black wool suit with clever leopard trimming. The fur revers are smart, as is the wide sash of the same pelt. Bright green suede gauntlets, a leopard muff and a jaunty black hat are other features. Wendy Barrie, LEFT, wears a distinctive jacket frock with grey krimmer used to trim the slanting pockets and tabs at the throatline.

We Noticed

....It's come—the Christmas spirit, we mean. Hurrying shoppers with furrowed brows, gaily decorated stores, even coming home to rooms that are a mad whirl of bright wrappings, mistletoe, Christmas cards, failed to arouse that peculiar feeling that makes one want to shout and sing for joy.

....But this morning, rushing off to another day of pre-Christmas rush and work, the cooling touch of snowflakes brushing hot cheeks as they drifted unhurriedly down combined with the glad note of Christmas carols ringing out from church bells to relax tired minds and kindle in the heart a spark of friendliness and good cheer.

Yuletide Brevities Here And There

PADUCAH, Ky. — Magistrate Jesse Copeland has announced his "closed season" on debtors again. Each year at Christmas time he instructs court aides not to serve garnishment papers during the holiday period. "If a creditor can't wait until after Christmas, he needn't bring his business to this court," he decreed. "I'd be sad if I felt I'd contributed to unhappiness during Christmas season."

RAND, Colo.—Miss Dorothy Mason, who teaches at the Muddy Pass school, just 42 miles from here, travelled 450 miles to spend Christmas with her parents in Rand. There are no direct roads, and friends dissuaded Miss Mason from attempting the straight-way trip on skis.

SALISBURY, Md.—This Maryland community has sent its annual Christmas greeting to Salisbury, England. "A very merry Christmas, a most happy New Year to everybody in Salisbury, England, from everybody in Salisbury, Maryland, U.S.A.," Mayor Arthur Boyce cabled the English city's Lord Mayor. Friendship between the towns started in 1932 when the Lord Mayor came over to Maryland Salisbury's bicentennial.

HELENA, Mont. — Christmas presents rained from the sky near Helena—but the finders gave them back. Investigation disclosed a compartment door of a westbound Northwest Airlines plane had come open, dropping a package near one farmer's doorstep, drapone mail pouch over a telephone line and depositing another in a clump of weeds. Assistant Postmaster Fred Mayer said to-day all the lost mail was recovered.

GREEN BAY, Wis.—Santa Claus walked right into the Brown county jail. What's more important, after a while he walked out again. The big blue eyes of Marlene Kellner, four - year - old daughter of Sheriff and Mrs. Clifford Kellner, popped wide open. But the prisoners—they just laughed and said nothing. They knew that after Santa visited one of his friends at the pokey, he had to go back to work at the department store.

GRIMSBY, Ont.—Grimsby residents, with Santa Claus having difficulty collecting his Yuletide requests, want some mail boxes set up around town. At present there are only two places to post mail—the post office and railway station.

RICHMOND HILL, Ont. — The youngsters in a fraternal home near here will have a quiet Christmas this year. Hhey've ben quarantined because of a minor outbreak of scarlet fever and measles. There are 114 children.

TORONTO, Dec. 23 — (CP). — You won't find telephone number of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Christmas in the directory. They said to-day "it's fun" being Mr. and Mrs. Christmas, and it helps business—Joseph is a druggist—but because of people 'phoning to ask "silly things" they've had their number delisted.

STRATFORD, Ont., Dec. 23 — (CP).—Santa Claus got this request while performing his duties in a downtown store: "Dear Nickie— Please bring me a nice blond, about 23 years old, with bright ideas. If you do, I'll leave a real good snootful of giggle juice out for you.—Your pal, Willyum."

Harness Racing Fight Threatens

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 23.—(AP). —Harness horse hostilities on a nation-wide front loomed to-day as the newly formed United States Trotting Association announced it would invade in 1939 the Western and Mid-western territory hitherto ruled exclusively by the American Trotting Association of Chicago.

The United States group was organized here last week by a merger of the United Trotting Association, the National Trotting Association, and the American Trotting Register Association. The Chicago body, invited to participate, voted down the consolidation plan and declined to send representatives to the four-day conclave at which merger details were ironed out.

Asked to-day for a list of the states in which it operates, the American's headquarters answered, "We have a fight on our hands now," in declining to release the desired information.

The United States group, however, in setting up eleven districts in the United States and Canada, has taken in every state in the union.

Further plans of the United States Association include the membership setup under which race meeting sponsors would be charged $15 to $100 per year, owners and drivers $5 per year, and "interested persons" $5 per year, with the latter having no voting privilege.

Wounded Man Is Still Missing

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Dec. 23. — The police have reported that they are up against a stone wall in connection with the Ancona Point shooting of the week-end. Nothing new has developed following the search in the Bobcaygeon district, and the belief is held that the wounded man is not in this section. It is thought that probably the two men who were caught in the summer home were members of a party out to make a clean-up, and had visited the house before the raid was made.

Bruce McNevin, M.P., was the host to directors and ex-directors of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company at the Hotel Elsmure on Tuesday. The function was an enjoyable one. A review of the progress of the company and a report on the past year's business was given.

Goods Stolen From Car.

Mrs. Neil Gregory, town, was the victim of a mean thief in Toronto a few days ago. While having lunch the front window of her car was broken, the door unlocked, and goods valued at $100 stolen. The theft was committed on one of the busy streets of the city in the afternoon.

With the date of the nomination meeting a few days away, very little interest is being manifested in the municipal elections. Two members of this year's Council have intimated their intention of retiring.

Attorney Justified.

At a hearing before the Court of Appeal in the action brought by James Thorndyke of Oakwood against Crown Attorney Anderson, that body ruled that the latter was justified in taking fees in connection with seven slot machine cases. The case arose out of a number of slot machine prosecutions in the Lindsay court. Thorndyke sued for the penalty of $60.00 in the seven cases, amounting to $420.00 in all. In each of the cases called the Crown Attorney collected a fee of $10.00.

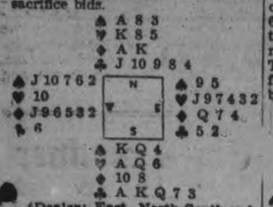
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

BE READY FOR THEM

Fighting opponents will try whenever they can to interfere with the smooth exchange of information between your partner and yourself when your side has the big hands. Your bidding conventions should be so worked out as to enable them to continue to operate efficiently even with obstacles thrown in the way. That is true of the Blackwood convention, for slam bidding, which enables you to continue showing your aces and kings despite interference sacrifice bids.



(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

After East's pass and South's opening bid of 1-Club, West combined a semi-psychic with interference and preparation for a sacrifice by calling 1-Diamond. A wise North, foreseeing the likelihood of an ultimate No Trump contract, refrained from the artificial call of his opponents' diamond suit and instead signalized strength with 3-Clubs. This showed up West's bid as almost surely great length and weakness, so East prepared for a sacrifice by showing a fit at 3-Diamonds.

Undaunted, South used his artificial Blackwood 4-No Trump call to ask about North's aces. West interfered then with 5-Diamonds. To show no aces conventionally, North would pass this; to show one would bid the next highest thing, 5-Hearts; to show two would bid the next level of 5-Spades; to show three would bid 5-No Trump. When he called 5-Spades then, South knew he had two aces. South's 5-No Trump thereupon inquired about the kings. West cut in with 6-Diamonds, but North's 6-Spades disclosed two kings. East then tried to sacrifice with 7-Diamonds, but South knew the No Trump grand slam was certain, with fourteen top tricks countable, so bid it.

Tomorrow's Problem

If on this deal, East bid 1-Club, South doubled, West 1-Heart, South doubled again, West 1-Spade, North doubled and East passed, what should South now do?

Cabinet Shakeup Seen Giving Eden New Post

LONDON, Dec. 23 — (CP-Havas). —Name of Anthony Eden to-day dominated comment in press on the Cabinet shakeup expected early in the New Year.

Political commentators agreed that differences between Mr. Eden and Prime Minister Chamberlain, which caused the Foreign Secretary to resign early this year, are less acute.

It was suggested the former Foreign Secretary might re-enter the Government in one of the defence posts or as Dominions Secretary.

The Times (Independent) and the Daily Telegraph (Conservative) merely mentioned that a Cabinet shake-up appeared certain, without referring to Mr. Eden. But other newspapers said he possibly would become Defence Co-ordination Minister, with Sir Thomas Inskip, the present incumbent, being elevated to the peerage to replace Lord Maugham, who has expressed a desire to be relieved of his duties as Lord Chancellor.

The Daily Mail (Independent) said Mr. Eden's close friends and advisers were divided on whether he should return to the Cabinet. One group suggests his immediate return and the other advises him to refrain from participation in any Government headed by Mr. Chamberlain, the newspaper said.

"It is possible that Mr. Eden's personal qualms may be overcome if the Prime Minister decides to broaden the basis of the National Government," The Daily Mail declared.

"When the Cabinet reconstruction takes place next month," said The Daily Mirror (Independent), "Mr. Eden is expected to become Dominions Secretary or First Lord of the Admiralty."

Mr. Eden returned yesterday from the United States. He said it was a "most refreshing experience to exchange views with the vigorous, vital and progrssive people of the United States," but declined comment on political affairs at home.

Clarification of some of the problems puzzling investigators is expected when Samuel Reich, Musica's attorney, makes public the text of a note left by the drug firm head when he shot himself to death last Friday in his luxurious home at Fairfield, Conn.

Buffalo Strike Is Broken

BUFALO, N.Y., Dec. 23 — (AP). —Hundreds of tons of Christmas foodstuffs refilled depleted retail store stocks to-day in this city of 600,000 as warehouse and produce workers ended a two-day strike.

Members of Warehouse and Produce Workers Local 558, an affiliation of the American Federation of Labor's International Teamsters' Union, voted last night to return to work and accept a compromise agreement with the food industry of Western New York, an employers' group.

The agreement will be in effect until April 1, 1940. A union spokesman said it provided for a closed shop, seniority rights, wage increases ranging from 2½ to 5 cents an hour and a guarantee of a 40-hour work week for warehouse workers.

Produce workers received guarantees of overtime pay and a 2½ cents an hour increase to compensate for the shoter work week made necessary under the Federal Wages and Hour Law.

Approximately 600 workers went on strike on Monday night and their picket lines stifled the flow of Christmas foods into retail outlets in this city and other communities in Western New York and Pennsylvania served by the Buffalo markets. Only foodstuffs for hospital or charitable institutions were allowed through picket lines.

Obeying Orders

BERLIN, Dec. 23 (AP).—The maternity wards of Vienna are full, the Berlin 12 Uhr Blatt said today, indicative of a joyful holiday period "that was predicted in the happy time of Anschluss" last March.

The paper said that with the absorption of Austria "young married couples and indeed those in their 40s and 50s, in newly found hope for better conditions, did not want to continue without children."

Cavan W.I. Hears Excellent Report

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, Dec. 23 — The special feature of the program of the Cavan Women's Institute December meeting, held at the home of the president, Mrs. Donald Tinney, was the splendid report of the 37th annual convention of the Central Ontario area of the Women's Institute, given by the local delegate, Mrs. Oakley Carley.

The business session was filled with the spirit of Christmas as the members discussed relief problems and Christmas cheer. One project planned was the sending of Christmas dinner to a family where the mother is ill and the children are small.

After the business session, Christmas carols were sung and a nice lunch served, giving an opportunity for the usual sociable visiting. There were eighteen members present.

Necking Drinking Parties Get Hotel Sued

CORNWALL, Ont., Dec. 23 (CP). — Mr. Justice Norman Urquhart granted overnight adjournment yesterday in the trial of an action for unstated damages brought by J. Nazaire Gosselin against Alfred Lefebvre, proprietor of the Royal Hotel.

Gosselin, who lives next door to the Royal Hotel, declared before a crowded courtroom in four hours of evidence that the peace and rest of his family had been disturbed and the value of his property reduced by the proximity of the hotel. The adjournment was granted to allow possible out-of-court settlement.

Gosselin, examined by Walter Schroeder of Ottawa, acting for the plaintiff jointly with J. B. Woods of Hawkesbury, described alleged "wild parties" in hotel bedrooms and declared profanity, loud talking and singing from bedrooms and beverage rooms interfered with his family's sleep. He produced rubbish which he said was flung to his lawn from bedroom windows.

"There was loving, necking and drinking beer" in the rooms, Gosselin declared. One night in October, 1936, he said, he was able to stop the noise in one hotel room by squirting water from a hose against the window-screen.

EDITORIAL

We have passed through another season of giving. The desire to give does not perish with the passing of years; rather does it increase. We do it at the Christmas season as we do at no other time of the year. A birthday remembrance may be forgotten, and there are times when other important family occasions are allowed to lapse into forgetfulness, but not so with Christmas. We do not stop always to think whether we can afford it or not. We prefer to do our giving first and then afterward to do what we can to bring about a reconciliation between our finances and the desire to give tangible expression to our good will.

We have possibly made the error to too great a degree of associating Christmas giving with Santa Claus. We tell our children and one generation passes it to the next that this mysterious old gentleman comes around on Christmas eve and attends to wide distribution in remarkably short order. The method of his coming and the manner of his going we describe in much the same way as the story was told to us in childhood.

Truth is the idea of giving was associated with the birth of the child Christ Jesus. When the wise men despatched by Herod came to the manger in Bethlehem and saw the new-born child "they fell down and worshipped him; and when they had opened their treasures they presented unto Him gifts, gold and frankincense and myrrh." That was actually the beginning of Christmas giving. Christ himself was God's greatest gift to mankind. So we find the root idea of giving at Christmas has a deep and significant meaning. Greater and more sublime than Santa Claus.

We hear people say this year that nothing seems like Christmas because of the unsettled condition of world affairs, because there is hatred and suspicion and avarice and excessive armament and actual war and slaughter. But all these things, separately or combined provide no adequate cause for surrendering Christmas and its spirit. They actually point to good and substantial reasons why we should cling to Christmas with greater tenacity.

If that Christmas feeling were to be taken from us we would be poor indeed. We are rich only according to our desires, and if the desire to give were taken from us it is probable the void might be filled with the desire to take.

If the deep-rooted passion for love and its outflowing were stemmed and blocked then we might be moved to supplant it with hatred and distrust. The fact that there is trouble and malice in the world is more than ever the reason why we should cling to Christmas in the full-freighted meaning of the word at its best. Life would be barren without it. And hopeless.

* * * * * *

Christmas is one of the events which keeps the home alive. The boys and girls—all of them perhaps—have gone out into the world, and they may have placed many miles between their present location and home. Financially they may be cramped; demands upon their slim

7 On Bomber Perish In Explosion

Fear 2 Others Among Bodies Flung Over 60-Acre Area

UNIONTOWN, Ala., Dec. 24.—(AP) Broken bodies recovered over a 60-acre area indicated today seven men—and possibly nine—died last night in the explosion and crash of a twin-motored United States army bomber two miles southeast of here.

Major Warren Maxwell, operations officer at Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala., said a tramp over the area today "convinced" him at least seven persons were killed.

Effects recovered indicated nine persons might have been killed, but reports from Hamilton Field, Calif., said only seven soldiers left there Thursday aboard the plane en route to Mitchell Field, N.Y.

An eighth member, army sources said, apparently boarded the plane at March Field, Calif., but alighted at some point before the big B-18 type plane plummeted down through a rainstorm. The terrific explosion shook many houses in the vicinity.

First Lieut. James Underhill, 28, pilot, Morganstown, N.C.

Warren Wunderlich was reported to have boarded the plane at March Field, and effects found in the scattered wreckage indicated a Capt. Reiber also had died.

Knee-deep mud hindered investigation, and most of those who came because of curiosity went away horror struck. Even veteran newsmen and photographers turned away.

Italians Chased For Salutes

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Dec. 24.—(AP).—Police were called out last night to rescue 60 Italian sailors from jeering crowds who chased and taunted them in answer to Fascist salutes.

The police protection was necessary to escort the sailors, on a world "prestige" cruise, back to the cruiser Eugenio II Savoia after fist fights in which one civilian was injured and about 50 arrested.

Trouble broke out when the sightseeing sailors, riding in buses, sang Fascist songs and gave Fascist salutes before crowded sidewalk cafes. Later the Italians told police they were amazed to hear shouts of "Long live Republican Spain, "Long live France" and "anti-Fascist" cries returned by the Uruguayans.

The sailors rushed the patrons of one cafe, but immediately several hundred citizens gathered aid repelled thir attack, chasing the Italians to the Plaze Independecia where police rescued them. Many suffered bruises.

Rome Press Renews Anti-French Jibes

ROME, Dec. 24 — (A.P.).— The Italian press to-day opened a new and vigorus anti-French campaign which political observers saw as a prelude to a formal demand for concessions.

The new attacks apparently were a result of France's unfavorable reaction to Italy's denunciation of the 1935 Mussolini-Laval agreement concerning North Africa.

The Fascist press insisted the 1935 pact never became effective and that there must be some adjustment of the North African situation to preserve the "equilibrium."

In reply to French newspaper statements that the accord was automatically put into effect by Italian occupation of a 44,000-square mile strip of Sahara Desert ceded by France, Italian newspapers asserted the territory never was occupied.

It was recalled that Premier Mussolini, replying on the eve of the Ethiopian War to a suggestion that he be satisfied with what France had ceded instead of taking Ethiopia, said, "I am not a collector of deserts."

Mr. Hepburn will spend Christmas at his home, and will go to Toronto in the last week in December.

An invitation to visit New Zealand has also been received, but the premier's present plans embrace only a few hours stay there.

500,000 Men Lock In Battle As General Franco Tries To Decide Civil War

HENDAYE, France, Dec. 24 (AP).—Two of the greatest armies assembled on a single battle-front since the beginning of Spain's civil war were locked in desperate combat today in the snow-covered mountains of Northern Spain.

Government bulletins and dispatches from insurgent territory agreed that General Franco's long-awaited offensive had begun.

Border sources estimated 500,000 men were engaged in the battle area extending from Tremp 100 miles south to the Grosa Mountains.

The insurgents' main goal and the government's prize possession was the little industrial town of Artesa, called the "key to Catalonia."

Success or failure of Franco's drive, both sides acknowledged, may decide the two-and-a-half-year-old war.

One point in the government's favor was that the insurgents struck at the same sector where their attacks failed December 15 when, according to some quarters, an espionage plot gave their plans away.

Rebels Stopped In 2 Areas.

On the second morning of his offensive, Franco apparently had been stopped in the Balaguer and Lerida sectors. His troops, however, were said to have broken through at least the first line of government defences near Tremp and in the Grosa Mountains, at the two extremes of the battle-front.

Casualty lists ran into the thousands, although the insurgents — strong in artillery and aviation — were believed to have lost less than the government.

Since dawn yesterday and through the night the crash and rumble of artillery fire and the stutter of machine-guns and automatic rifles have echoed through the Segre Valley.

Here is how the situation stood on the second day, based on a comparison of despatches from both sides:

At Tremp the insurgents appeared to be concentrating most of their 800 pieces of artillery to back a force of 100,000 men. Insurgent despatches from this area said the insurgents had carved out advances of from one to 10 miles on the eastern bank of the Noguera Pallaresa River.

North of the Balaguer powerful fortifications guarding the junction of the Serge River with its tributary, the Noguera Pallaresa, apparently had stopped another insurgent thrust, aimed at secondary roads leading to Artesa.

Units Flung Back Over River.

Insurgent attacks north of Lerida also were said to have proved unsuccessful. At dawn several units crossed the river, but were forced back again under the withering fire of the militiamen.

South of the Derida the insurgents not only forced a crossing of the Segre, but gained a foothold on fortified Grosa Peak—highest of the fortified hills at the southern end of the Ungel Plain. This column aimed its drive northward, apparently trying to cut the Lerida-Tarragona Highway at Borjas Blancas.

Artesa, a town of 3,000 population, stands on a highway leading to Puigcerda, frontier post which forms one of Catalonia's two main border links with France. It is about 20 miles east of Tremp.

North Monaghan Council Is Acclaimed

North Monaghan township council was returned by acclamation at the annual nomination meeting held Friday night in the court house, when a handful of people approved a long range economy plan that had been carried out by the 1938 Reeve and council.

Reeve James Milby, for six years a member of the Council received his third acclamation as Reeve while Melville H. Johnston, Deputy Reeve was also returned. The other members are W. J. Grady, Alex Archibald and John Barnes.

Bruce Johnston, township clerk, who presided during the nomination period and was chairman afterward when each of the members spoke, said he would have liked to have seen more of the ratepayers on hand as often valuable suggestions are put forward by them. He said building prospects in the township for 1939 are very encouraging particularly in the sections adjoining the western residential area of Peterborough.

Spirit of Harmony

Reeve James Milby thanked his sponsors and explained that the council had not only enjoyed a most successful year from the standpoint of benefit to the township but that a fine spirit of harmony had prevailed throughout all of their deliberations.

"Time and again Mr. Johnston, the deputy-reeve crossed swords with us when he felt we were not giving proper attention to the welfare of the farmers in the townships and I can truthfully say every argument and suggestion put forward by him has received the utmost consideration."

He told the people the Council had been successful in having the Suburban Road Commission assume quite a stretch of road, and had a mulch surface put on two other sections. He was emphatic that the paving was a wisemove, one that is heartily endorsed by government road experts, as it eliminates dust and reduces the upkeep to a minimum.

"Our relief rate was set this year at the same rate as 1937 but on representations being made to the Government we were assured of an adjustment at the end of the year."

Relief Has Declined

Reeve Milby pointed with pride to the relief figures which had shown steady and marked decline since the peak year of 1933 when there were 130 families on the relief lists and the total cost was in excess of $12,000. For eleven months this year the cost was only slightly over $2,900.

Deputy Reeve Melville Johnston, the second speaker thanked the other members of the council for the cooperation and friendly spirit they had shown during the year. He said they had not accomplished everything they set out to do, but great strides had been made and better still the spirit of harmony had been restored to the township. He forecast that drastic steps would be taken in

Kidnapped, Held Three Days, Robbed Of $54

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—(CP).—Patrick Kelly, 30-year-old factory employee, told Toronto and suburban Islington police last night of being kidnapped by two men, blindfolded, drugged, held for three days and robbed of $54.

Kelly arrived home late yesterday. He said the men stopped him while he was riding his bicycle Tuesday, forced him into their automobile and after blindfolding him and drugging him took him to Hamilton, where he was imprisoned in a house.

There, he declared, his pay of $54 was taken. He was fed only bread and butter while held. To-day, he told police, he was taken from the house and driven out to the highway, where he was able to hitchhike home.

Last Minute News Flashes

HENDAYE, France. — Firm Government resistance, it was reported to-day, has checked a great Spanish insurgent offensive all along the frozen Pyrenees front from Tremp to Balaguer. News filtering across the border into France said the big push, led by General Franco's Moors and Italians, had been brought to an abrupt halt.

Nomination Proceedings Are Very Quiet But Several New Men Intimate That Their Hats Will Be In The Ring

The nomination of fifteen candidates for the five vacant places in the City Council Friday night virtually assured an election on New Year's Day.

The proceedings were devoid of any excitement although there was a fairly good attendance of electors, including three former mayors, W. H. Bradburn, Roland Denne and A. A. McIntyre. Senators Advise Easing Off Raps At Berlin

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 — (AP). —Criticism of the American State Department's stiffened attitude toward Germany, as demonstrated in its brusque refusal to apologize for Interior Secretary aHrold Ickes' recent denunciation of that country's treatment of minorities, developed in United States Congressional circles to-day.

Fear of retaliation against Jews in the Reich as well as concern over the possibility that t his attitude might needlessly entangle the United States in a controversy which would accomplish no good prompted several Senators to counsel caution in future exchanges.

Asserting that he agreed with Ickes' blunt criticism of Nazi treatment of Jews, Senator Burke (Dem., Nebraska) said, however, he believed it was "unwise." Ickes said Jewish persecutions had taken Germany back to an "unlettered, benighted, and bestial" period.

"There can't be any war between the United States and Germany unless spokesmen for executive departments like Ickes make inflammatory statements that take us beyond the point where level heads can operate," Burke said.

Senator Lewis (Dem.-Illinois), the Administration whip, said he feared acrimonious exchanges between officials of the German and American governments might be followed by new outbreaks against the Jews in the Reich.

Senator Schwartz (Dem.-Wyoming) also cautioned against putting any avoidable strain on relations with Germany.

Representative Fish (Rep.-New York) agreed with the State Department's action, but said that Cabinet oficers "should not publicly denounce foreign governments or indulge in abusive tirades."

Four Candidates Have Qualified

Up to eleven o'clock this morning four candidates had qualified for the aldermanic race but a number of others had expressed their intention of doing so and so a New Year's election is certain. The four who filed their qualifications with City Clerk S. R. Armstrong were Herbert J. McCannan, Robert I. Bradburn, Thomas Littlefair and Francis H. Kearney this morning. The other nominees have until 9 o'clock tonight to qualify.

Sarkens Thankful For Feudalism —Even With Woman Dictator

By Ted Farah
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 24—(CP).—The world's only woman dictator, acknowledged chief of a tiny feudal state which is part of the British Empire and remains immersed in the atmosphere of the 16th century, is a visitor in teeming, mechanistic America.

The Dame De Serk, Queen of the island of Sark in the English Channel, interviewed in New York before she left to visit friends in Arizona, said that when her subjects read the news of the world they say to one another "aren't we the lucky ones?"

Grey-haired and very gentle-looking for an autocrat, the Dame De Serk said there never has been a murder or a divorce among her people, who number 600. Nor is there any sign of poverty or unemployment. What is more, on the island of Sark there are no movies, politics, paved roads, billboards, motor cars, local newspapers, or labor unions.

While other absolute rulers seek to streamline and modernize their social and economic systems, the Dame De Serk is determined to preserve the feudal character of her island, which still is governed under a scheme devised in Queen Elizabeth's time.

The gulf stream was considerate enough, she said, to divide in two and surround her kingdom of about 1,200 acres, so that the people have flowers all year around. Besides her large estate, the island is divided into 40 farms and the inhabitants are mostly farmers and fishermen.

Television Available For Britons' Christmas Stocking

London, Dec. 24 (AP)

A SANTA CLAUS will leave a television set by John Bull's Christmas stocking if manufacturers' plans ring true. They are out to make this a "television Christmas" in England.

The British Broadcasting Corporation is putting extra dash into its programs. The radio manufacturers association opened a big promotion campaign. The result, they hope, will be that 10,000 television receivers instead of the present estimated 6,000 to 7,000 will be in use at the end of the drive.

John Bull if he wishes can now see a program and any day of the week—if he invests £25 to £210 ($125 to $1,050) on the "never never" plan, as he facetiously tags the instalment system of buying.

Folks Be Made Happy Repay Clown In Hour Of Sickness

Detroit, Dec. 24 (CP)

DETROIT'S favorite clown, Nosey De Cop, wept today as he lay suffering on his hospital bed, but they were tears of joy. Six of his youngest children were cold and hungry. One had no shoes. Another child was ill. Successive misfortunes had deluged the family. The mother died a few months ago. This week the father went to hospital with a serious stomach complaint.

But the one-time clown was happy, for as news of his plight leaked out, police, welfare workers, neighbors and scores who remembered the laughter the clown brought to others rallied to their aid.

Food appeared as if by magic, coal arrived. A new stove appeared. Men who knew of the clown only by reputation agreed to take the youngest of the children to their homes, until the clown could resume work.

French Military Secrets Escape Blaze

PARIS, Dec. 24. — (P). — Armed Soldiers mounted guard today before the still-smouldering facade of the Hotel Des Invalides—which houses military offices, the army museum and Napoleon's tomb—where firemen successfully smothered a spectacular blaze that threatened France's military plans.

Many French military secrets were housed in the general staff headquarters in a wing of the Invalides, a 30-acre, gray stone structure that was once a soldier's home and remains a show place of Paris.

Thirty fire units poured water, which quickly froze into sheets of ice, on the building. The fire was believed caused by a snow-blocked chimney.

2 Russians Indicted In U.S. Spy Case

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 24—(AP).—Indictments charging espionage, returned by the Federal grand jury after a secret session, to-day named Mikhail Gorin, 34, coast manager of the official Soviet Travel Bureau, and Hafis Salich, 33, former Berkeley, Calif., policeman and employee of the United States' Naval Intelligence Service.

Both the defendants are in jail in default of $25,000. If convicted of the charges, they face sentences of 20 years on three counts in the indictment.

The indictment alleged:

That they took instruments, documents and notes regarding matters connected with United States' defence;

That they transmitted the documents to a foreign power (Russia) to the advantage of that country, and against "the peace, dignity and safety" of the United States;

That they entered into a conspiracy beginning in September, 1936, to accomplish these things.

Salich, Russian born, is a naturalized American. The jury heard testimony that he received $1,700 for various documents transmitted to Gorin. Among the witnesses were naval intelligence service officers and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents.

Missed On Birthdays

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—Robert Graham, 98 years old Sunday, says he's never had a birthday present, nor a birthday party nor a birthday toast, but isn't worrying about it. He's had enough Merry Christmases to more than make up for it. He was born on a sailing vessel in the Atlantic Ocean in 1840.

Queen Elizabeth gave it to Sir Helier Carteret as an independent feudal state with its lordship invested in Sir Heluer and the first-born among his descendents for all time. The great-grandmother of the Dame De Serk purchased the island from descendants of Sir Helier in 1852. A property tithe and such taxes as a chicken for each chimney are still collected from the farm owners.

Married to a New Yorker, the present seigneurial head goes in America by the name of Mrs. Robert Hathaway. Her husband became a British subject after they met. They have four children and live in an ivy-covered stone mansion which was built about the time Shakespeare and Ben Jonson were lifting the Wassail in the Mermaid Tavern across the channel in London town.

On the island of Sark the woman's place is still in the home. They teach their children the songs that were popular in Shakespeare's day and the inhabitants have great fun at parties, their ruler said. A great deal of barter and exchange of labor is carried on among the people.

"If you'll help me plough my fields I'll shingle your roof," said the Dame De Serk by way of illustration.

"Please don't imagine," she added, "that we are backward just because we are contented. Sark had the first compulsory education in the British Empire."

Everybody on the island speaks both English and French. They read the newspapers imported from both sides of the channel and thank their stars they live in Sark.

Wards Remembered By Children's Aid

Miss Rachel Young, superintendent for the Children's Aid Society, has added a personal touch to her work this year that has brought many favorable comments from members of the Board.

She has taken time to make a personal visit to the home of every ward in Peterborough County with whom she has had any contact since assuming the work of superintendent. In all she has reached about forty of these children and has handed each a Christmas gift with the compliments of the Society. She visited Havelock, Norwood, and Warsaw, including the surrounding district. One ward who lives in Haliburton had a present sent to her by mail.

A prominent member of the society remarking to-day on this extra service said in the past it was not unusual for five years to pass without an official of the Society seeing some of the wards. He added that road conditions were certainly not the best in many of the sections where Miss Young visited, but the young woman was not deterred, and completed her trips.

Blizzard Blankets Mid-West States

CHICAGO, Dec. 24 — (AP). — Snow and sleet covered most of a half-dozen Middle Western United States to-day and the weather forecaster said more would arrive before Christmas.

A storm of blizzard proportions swept Northern Wisconsin and the Upper Michigan Peninsula. Traffic was slowed and in some places halted by drifting snow. A five-inch fall was recorded last night.

There were up to four inches of snow in most of Minnesota and five inches in several sections of Iowa, but highways were open. Nebraska and the Dakotas also were in the snow belt.

A short-lived but intense snowstorm swept into Chicago from the north last night. Two traffic deaths were attributed to the storm, the worst of the season.

3rd Christmas Asleep

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 24.—(AP)—Little Mazine Yarrington won't see Santa Claus again tonight and, perhaps, she never will—although her deep blue eyes are wide open.

Tossing fitfully in fever that comes one day but always vanishes the next, Maxine has slept through three Christmas holidays, a victim of encephalitis lethargica (sleeping sickness). They call her the "sleeping beauty" of St. Francis Hospital. Physicians fear she may never recover. Her Christmas dinner will be the liquid diet she has received since entering St. Francis in 1935.

Millbrook Public School Pupils Stage Yuletide Highlight

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 24—Featured by a large and appreciative audience, seasonable stage decorations including a lighted fire-place, and festoons of red and green caught with holly wreaths, the Millbrook Public School, as in previous years, provided an excellent entertainment for its annual Christmas concert, in the town hall on Wednesday evening, the gaily-lighted tree being an item of peculiar interest to the scholars and their friends.

The opening Christmas carols, with Mary Burnham as the accompanist of the evening, and the massed pupils of the three rooms of the school marching to the stage in correct time and manner, were one of the highlights of the program.

The principal, B. B. Dawson, directing.

Dr. J. W. Wright, chairman of the school board, filled the position of chairman, the first number being an exercise, "Christmas Bells", by pupils of Miss Betty Montgomery's room, the little girls: Joan Yelland, Jane Stinson, Kathryn Bigelow, Margaret Dawson, Francis Handley, and Anna Manley, looking very lovely with their red capes shaped like bells, red wreaths set flat upon their heads and ringing hidden, sweet-toned bells as they danced and sang in the chorus.

Recitations were given by Garry Charlebois, "I Saved My Cake for Santa Claus", and Betty Wright, "Miss Mistletoe", afer which "I Want My Ma" was presented by 'Santa's Boys' to the great delight of the audience; the little lads were: Lorne Manley, Lorne Forsyth, Billy Lunn, Leslie Fickling, George Smith, Allen Wright, Benny Handley, Billy Smith, Johnnie Fickling and Alvin McMahon. The Farmers' Drill was another popular number, the boys, with typical rustic outfit and carrying hoes, being: Gerald Lowery, Herbert Ball, Bobby Kinsman, Ronald Richards, Ralph Lunn, Gerald Deyell, Albert McIvor. The 'farmerettes' who came in with sunbonnets, aprons over their gingham dresses, and carrying lunch baskets for the hungry workers, included. Francis Handley, Leone Manley, Jane Stinson, Elizabeth Williams, Margaret Dawson, Betty Wright, Maretta Olan and Mary Fallis.

The Doll Scene.

A dialogue, "Choosing A Doll", was quite well presented, and very attractive, Norma Gray, hugging her doll, falling asleep as she rocked in her small chair, and having a variety of dolls present themselves for choice. The Chinese dolls were: Jessie Dawson, B. Harkness, J. Smith and J. Murney; the Jack-in-the-Box Garry Charlebois, was very realistic, having to be pushed down every time the box-lid was raised; shoving the box in were Albert Brooks and Douglas Sanderson, the Scotch dolls were: Helen Yelland, Leona Charlebois, Irene Yelland, Rosemary Stinson, and the darkies, Bobby Bigelow, Connie Stinson and Leona Manley. Suitable music was played as the various dolls arrived for inspection, "The Wooden Soldiers" being for Donald Trick, Roy Dawson and Allen Moyles, smart in their cadet uniforms; The French dolls danced in: Barbara Handley, Juan Little, Anne Stinson, and Lois Wainman and the Japanese dolls had dainty kimonas: Elden Little, Lloyd and Donald Trick

Jessie Dawson, in costume, recited "The Battered Doll", and "Lo, In A Manger", was sung by Bobby Bigelow, Connie Stinson, and Tom Peers. "That's what I want for Christmas" was another chorus by Helen Yelland, Leona Charlebois, Rosemary Stinson, Teddy Sisco, Ralph Richards and Donald Trick, after which a dialogue, "Mother and Dad have their Innings", was presented by Tom Peers and Esther Armstrong as the parents, the children, eagerly opening their red stockings which hung from the mantlepiece, including Teddy Sisco, Betty and Shirley Forsyth, Jack Kinsman and Pauline Kennedy. The fairies who won all hearts were: Lois Wainman, Juan Little, Esther Armstrong, and Pauline Kennedy.

The Quilt Draw.

The draw for the quilt, which had been made by the girls of the senior room in connection with the new course of study, was made by Johnny Fickling, after Principal Dawson had shaken the container thoroughly, the holder of the lucky number, 013635, being Mrs. Russell Smith. Following this item the operetta, "The Inn of the Golden Cheese" was well presented by the pupils of Mr. Dawson's room, the character of Grandma, seated in her rocker with her knitting, being taken by Laureen Richards; that of Peggy by Betty Smith; reporter, Teddy McDowell; Sally, Francis Tickner; Indian baby, Joan Yelland; father, Robert Ridge; mother, Mary Muspratt; William Penn, Raymond Powell; Chief Painted Feathers, Albert Richards.

The arrival of Santa Claus, and the distribution of gifts from the tree, completed an entertaining and successful evening.

Seven Simple Rules For Good Health

During the last 21 years the Bell Telephone Company of Canada has paid out over $3,600,000 in the form of sickness benefits to its employees. A study of the more than 40,000 cases of illness involved has revealed that ailments of the respiratory system—such as colds, laryngitis, influenza, bronchitis, and tonsilitis, were responsible for, by far, the greater part of this expenditure.

If the experience of this company is to be taken as a criterion, the seven simple rules for good health during winter time, about which Bell employees were reminded recently, should be of general interest. They follow:

1. Keep room temperature around 72 degrees.
2. Keep air moist—fill radiator pans with water regularly.
3. Sleep with windows open, but keep out of drafts.
4. Keep fresh fruits and vegetables on your daily menu.
5. Wear enough clothing when outdoors—not too much when inside.
6. Avoid going out into the cold when you are perspiring.
7. If you have a coal fire, be sure gases are burned off before closing dampers for the night.

Baxter Classes M.P.'s According To Their Drinks

London, Dec. 24 (CP)

HERE is how A. Beverley Baxter classes members of parliament:—

"If they are drinking milk they are Liberals—a fast disappearing body. If they are drinking creme de menthe you know they are contemplating joining Churchill's glamor boys; if they are drinking tea, you know they will vote like gentlemen for their party, even if they do not know what they are voting on. Therefore I think tea is the foundation of British liberty."

The Canadian member-writer was speaking at an empire tea centenary luncheon. January 10, 1939, is the actual date of the centenary of the first auction of empire produced tea.

Nazis Charge U.S Disturbing Yuletide Peace

BERLIN, Dec. 24.—(AP)—A charge of disturbing the Christmas peace was laid on the United States' doorstep today by the German press in heated editorials stressing the possibility of the severance of strained German - American diplomatic relations.

The Nazi press, unanimous in sounding the diplomatic rupture threat, apparently had received a clue to the future trend of developments from higher up. Official sources still remained silent on the rebuff Germany received when she demanded an apology for an address last Sunday in which Harold Ickes, United States secretary of the interior, criticized dictatorships.

Newspapers were united in saying the Reich would draw the consequences in "calm determination" if this "miserable campaign of hatred is approved in the future by responsible leaders of the American government and that part of Americans who have regard for themselves."

Chancellor Hitler's own newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, was especially angry at Senator Key Pittman's statement—expressing dislike of the Berlin and Tokyo governments—which the paper captioned "an American interdict."

Describing the statement issued by the chairman of the United States senate foreign relations committee as parallel to "th medieval ex-communications of Roman popes," the paper scornfully declared "we have come to the conclusion that responsible America conducts an open feud with us. As this quarrel was in full swing long before the German anti-semitic decrees were announced and as it lacks a pertinent motive, we are convinced that it serves no American but dark sinister interests instead."

5 Monaghan Schools Unite For Concert

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CENTREVILLE, Dec. 24. — The Sunday School Hall was filled to capacity on Tuesday night when the five Public Schools of South Monaghan Township gave a concert under the leadership of Mr. Oulette, conductor of singing in the schools. Reeve Roy Whittington was chairman. The program began with the audience singing "O Canada," after which the following program was presented:

The chairman's address; Schools singing "Silent Night"; song by the junior girls of School No. 2, and a play by School N. 3; Joan and Norma Pue sang "Star of the East" in fine style; two folk dances by Junior Schools No. 1 and No. 2 were well received; Two pantomimes, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing," by senior girls Schools No. 1 and No. 4 respectively; two dialogues by Schools N. 1 and No. 5.

Several songs and Christmas carols by all the schools were well rendered and much enjoyed by the large audience. Following the singing of the National Anthem, Santa Claus appeared and distributed gifts from a beautifully decorated tree.

Senators Advise

Meanwhile, Frederick Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, suggested "the question may well be raised whether recent statements by administration officials are a part of an effort to create an international spirit of fear and hate which will overcome rising opposition to the President's armament program."

Senator Frazier (Rep.-North Dakota) voiced a similar view in wondering if the statements might "be more ballyhoo for the super defence and armament programs."

WEEKLY GRAIN REVIEW

WINNIPEG, Dec. 24 — (CP). — Wheat prices on the Winnipeg market displayed a firm tone throughout the past week despite a series of dull sessions in which quotations moved within a narrow range.

When trading closed Friday values were ⅜ to ⅝ cents higher with December at 60¾, May 62⅝ and July 62⅞ cents.

Export business in Canadian wheat was on a lower scale than the previous week with sales estimated at around 1,500,000 bushels, worked chiefly from the Pacific Coast. Considerable mill and overseas demand appeared late in the week and there was a show of good outside support, believed to be of a speculative or covering nature.

One of the chief reasons for the steady trend was a drop of more than 200,000,000 bushels in the United States' winter crop estimate for 1939, compared with production during the present year.

Government experts estimated 485,000,000 bushels of wheat would be harvested from the winter fields against 686,637,000 bushels for 1938. The 1927-36 10-year average is 546,396,000 bushels.

Another stabilizing factor was damage to European winter crops in the recent cold wave which swept the Continent. It is believed in some quarters the spring will reveal heavy losses.

Counteracting these bullish sentiments was the uncertainty among traders regarding the export policy Argentina will use to dispose of her 231,000,000-bushel wheat surplus.

Snowbound Britain Land Of Cheer

LONDON, Dec. 24 — (CP Cable). —Christmas came to-day to the British Isles snow-mantled for the first time in a decade.

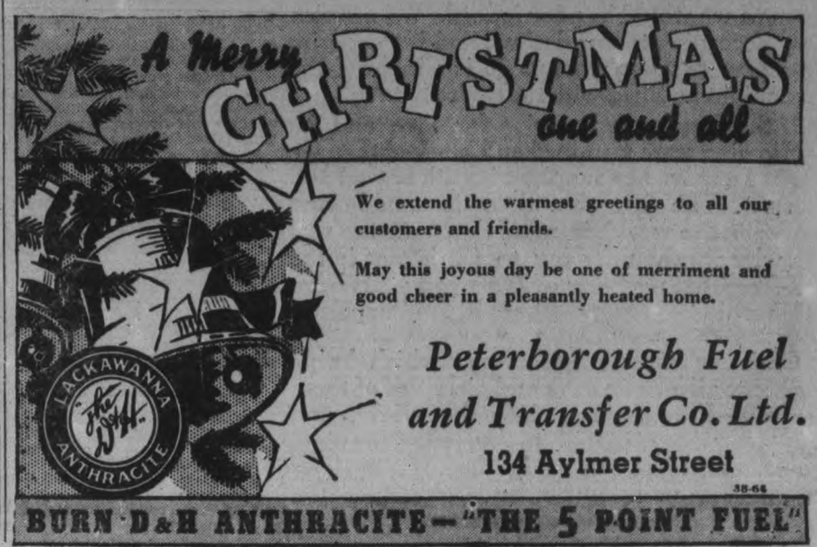
It was a bit slushy in the cities, but elsewhere holiday merrymakers made the most of the first white Christmas since 1929, the "year of the great snow." The weather was just what the children hoped for and they revelled. They chucked snowballs, made snowmen, and played on sleds, skis and skates. Adults joined in the fun.

The cold and snow have hit some parts of these islands hard, dislocating traffic, curtailing deliveries of food and supplies, freezing water pipes, stranding motorists on the road, and playing havoc with the holiday sports program.

But Britons are in a most cheerful mood. Business has been good. The country is enjoying peace and other anxieties are forgotten, at least temporarily.

This mood is significantly reflected in London's carollers, who are singing more seasonable airs. Even itinerant, jazz bands have switched to carols, blithely syncopating them Men with bagpipes also are doing their best with "Good King Wenceslas."

Throughout the day railway stations were clogged with bundle-laden smiling throngs hurrying from London to the warmth of family hearths. Millions in the cities also gathered about the family Christmas tree or joined in gala festivities at hotels or restaurants. London's hotels alone were catering to more than 50,000 overseas and provincial visitors.



We extend the warmest greetings to all our customers and friends.

THE BABE

Rough shepherds geering into the manger to get a glimpse of the Babe. It is fitting that the first to pay homage to the Babe should be men of the fields, men of the people, men who lived their lives among the high, barren hills of Judea. For the Child will one day call Himself "The Good Shepherd" and His farewell command will be: "Feed my sheep, My lambs."

The shepherd's life in that land was not easy. These shepherds are representatives of the common people who heard Him gladly in days of His Ministry. A little later the wise and the rich will be drawing near to offer their gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh. But He is first shown to the shepherds, members of His own people, men with toil worn hands following the occupation of David. For the Babe is to be the Saviour of rich and poor; of wise and simple. Whosoever cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out."

"He was a goodly child." Can you doubt that? God is beautiful and His son is beautiful also, born of the beautiful Virgin Mother. Two thousand years earlier a mother looked at her babe: "He is a goodly child. He shall not be destroyed" said the mother and the father, echoing the cry, began to make a little cradle of bulrushes for the babe Moses. The child's beauty saved him. It is fitting that we should remember that God is beautiful. There have been Christians in the past to whom beauty made little appeal. A great artist lay adying with closed eyes. Suddenly his eyes opened and he exclaimed: "I have seen the Almighty. The curves are perfect." His eye for beauty was satisfied.

You remember how you gazed at your first born. A little mite of humanity with tightly closed fists. He is bone of your bone and flesh of your flesh and your heart was filled with awe at the thought of the gift God had given you. Perhaps that ancient prayer came to your mind: "For his sake I consecrate myself." Then in some small way the ever-new prophecy was fulfilled: "A litle child shall lead you."

Once more look at the Babe lying in the manger. He is God; Emmanuel—God with us. It is the tremendous mystery of the incarnation. God veiled in human flesh looked out upon the world as a Babe, helples, lovely and appealing to mankind throughout all generations. The secret of the Christmas season is the appeal of the child to men and women hardened by the stress and strain of life. Perhaps for a little season your heart softens and your eyes grow dim as you think of the Christmases of the past; of the dear ones who were with you. Do you wish to be really happy? Seek out some child or children, poor and under-privileged, and brighten their lives, giving them a little joy and happiness because the Christ Child was born in Bethlehem.

It is your opportunity to enter the cave and worship at the manger Cradle. As you brighten the lives of the Lord's little ones you are ministering unto Him: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these My brethren ye have done it unto Me."

The Church of the middle ages pictured the Christ as a beggar and then with deepr insight advanced the beggar into the leper. "Behold, The Man, The Leper." When the Church remembers that the poor, the degraded, the ignorant are God's children, His little ones, and sends her best sons and daughters to serve them she is walking in the foosteps of her Lord and Master, Who went about doing good.

You will worship on Christmas Day with deeper joy and thanksgiving if you have gone forth to give joy and happpiness to Christ's poor. Remember He was born in Bethlehem, "the House of Bread."

"LET US NOW GO EVEN UNTO BETHLEHEM."

God's Great Love

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Dec. 25 is Matthew 2: 1-12, the Golden Text being John 3: 16, "God so loved the world that He gave His only bebotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.")

BY NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THIS IS the day on which we again read the sweet story of the birth of Jesus. We think of the Wise Men, mounted on their stately camels, and guided by the bright star which had come out of the East.

These men were called Magi, or wise men. We get our word "magic" from this word magi. Magi were especially interested in astrology and divination—prophesies. They may have come from Persia, and they knew that something wonderful was to happen in Bethlehem, the small Jewish town, and they traveled far to see it. First they went to Jerusalem, and asked everyone they met: "Where is He that is born king of the Jews? For we have seen His star in the East, and are come to worship Him."

Now, Herod was king of the Jews, and he was a very cruel and jealous king. He didn't want anyone left alive who might try to take his throne from him. He had killed his wife and her two sons because he thought they might do it. So when he heard what the wise men said, he called his courtiers around him and asked them what it meant. And when he found that the Wonderful Child was to be born in Bethlehem, he craftily told the wise men to let him know all about it and he, too, would go to Bethlehem to worship.

The brilliant star went ahead of the three wise men, and when it reached the manger where Jesus and His mother lay, it stood still above the spot. Then the wise men went in, and when they saw the Baby, they kneeled down and worshipped and gave Him gifts of gold and precious gums called frankincense and myrrh, which were very expensive.

After they had worshipped they went directly to their homes, but not back to Jerusalem, for they were warned in a dream that Herod only wanted to know where the Child was that he might kill Him.

Now, at this same time, "abiding in the fields were shepherds, keeping watch over their flock by night, and lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone roupd about them; and they were sore afraid."

But the angel told them not to be afraid and then related the birth of the Savior.

"And suddenly there was with the Angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God and saying:

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill toward men'."

Then the shepherds went to Bethlehem and saw the child in the manger and went away rejoicing, and telling everyone what they had seen and heard.

Soon after Jesus' birth, Joseph, was told in a dream to leave Palestine and go to Egypt, for Herod would kill the Child. So Joseph and Mary took the Babe and went to Egypt. Herod, when he could not find the Child he sought, had all the babies under two years of age killed, so that "In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they were not."

Herod died when Jesus was about two years old, and then He was brought to Nazareth to live.

"Peace on earth, goodwil toward men!" wouldn't it be wonderful if, after nearly 2,000 years, peace should really be brought to men now, when the world is in such turmoil, with hatred and fear on every hand? During the World War, cannon ceased firing on Christmas Day, in some sections, at least, and soldiers who were enemies fraternized.

"Star of the East, show us the way
In wisdom undefiled
To seek that manger out and lay
Our gifts before the Child—
To bring our hearts and offer them
Unto our King in Bethlehem."

Thus we should show God that His gift of His Only Begotten Son was truly appreciated and that we love Him.

Dr. G. Patterson Norwood Boy Retires Dec. 31

A distinguished-looking man who went to Ohio 40 years ago to found a parish in the sparsely-inhabited Glenville neighborhood and who remained to become one of the foremost leaders of religion in Cleveland, will bring his active participation in the work of his church to a close at the end of this month.

He is Dr. Gerard F. Patterson, who was born on a farm near Norwood, and who for the past eighteen years has been archdeacon of the Episcopal Diocese of Ohio and for 22 years a parish priest in Cleveland. His resignation was presented this week to a special meeting of the diocesan council summoned by Bishop Beverley Dandridge Tucker at Trinity Cathedral parish house.

Dr. Patterson walked eight miles into school in Norwood in his early life. His life was characterized by the familar struggle of an energetic lad surmounting obstacles and acquiring a good education. He spent two years teaching school to earn money to help pay his expenses at the University of Toronto. From Toronto young Patterson went to the theological seminary at Nashotah, Wis., and immediately after his graduation and ordination, left with a classmate for the mission field of Oklahoma.

Oklahoma in the '90s was a wild country, with plenty of gun fighting and cattle stealing, and stampedes for homestead sites. Dr. Patterson was present at two of these mass races at the opening of new lands for white settlement.

Altogether he established eleven missions in the Oklahoma territory.

From the exciting scenes of Oklahoma, the young cleric in 1893 settled down to the quieter although exacting routine of rectorship, being transferred several times until he accepted, in 1899, the appointment to the charge of the Mission of the Incarnation in Glenville. In the fall of 1920 the diocesan council elected Dr. Patterson executive secretary, and in October, 1921, he was appointed archdeacon. Since that time he has carried on the work of both offices. He has had charge of the establishment of missions throughout the diocese and has supervised the small parishes.

Besides the arduous tasks of the mission enterprises, Archdeacon Patterson has shouldered the work of secretary of the diocesan convention and also that of secretary of the synod of the Province of the Midwest.

Tall and erect now, with the vigorous walk of a youth, Archdeacon Patterson carries his years lightly.

In recognition of his work Kenyon College in 1936 conferred upon him the honorary degree of doctor of divinity. Upon his retirement, according to the wish of Bishop Tucker, Dr. Patterson will retain his title of archdeacon, as well as that of honorary canon of Trinity Cathedral which he is to receive. Archdeacon Patterson will continue his residence in Shaker Heights and the bishop has asked that he accept various appointments in the diocese.

Cathedral Musings

There are many incidents in the account of the birth of the Master which are full of significance to the student of esoteric Christianity. For instance, there have been many speculations, ingenious and otherwise, to explain the Star which appeared in the East, the Star which the Wise Men saw and followed. The mistake has been in confusing the "East" (a purely mystical term which refers to the great awakening of spiritual light, the dawn of the spiritual Sun) with the geographical east. Also in thinking of the "Star" as an astronomical body, not understanding that it was the spiritual radiance of the Son of God who was about to be incarnated in human form. Tradition has it that these three Magi, representative of the great spiritual brotherhoods, were from different lands, one from India, one from Persia, and one from Egypt —so that while two of them travelled in a westerly direction, only one, he from Egypt, actually went in an easterly direction. It was a tremendous event in the cosmic evolution of mankind. Great teachers had come in the past, done their work of preparation, and departtd, and now the last and greatest of the Initiates was about to appear. The clock of the zidioc was about to strike the hour, deporting from the sign of the Fishes, entering the sign of the Lamb, and the whole world paused, expectant. Then He came, born in humility, living in sorrow, grieving for the suffering and the wayward. He came with the new-old message bearing tidings of a Loving Father who really cared for His children. He brought His new commandment that we should love one another even as God loves us. Do we realize this in this present day when the whole world is sick with hate, fear and mistrust? Love is what the world needs perhaps more to-day than ever, for only by love can we ever hope to attain His Peace here on earth, for His is the inner Peace of the Spirit which passes all understanding, all comprehension. Only by this love, expressed in word and in deed can we aid the Holy Child of the Celestial Wisdom in His work and so became His brethren, for Love is the key to His heart of Love.

Art's Contribution To Christmas Story

Christmas pictures will be shown in St Andrew's Church on next Sunday evening and Christmas music will be sung by the choir under R. B. Harle, L.L.C.M., A.T.C.L.

Art has made a valuable contribution to the Christmas story. The great artists believed in angels as intermediaries between God and man, they have put them upon canvass and have placed the Christian church under a debt of gratitude to them.

The pictures will include reproductions of the works of Hofmann, Willam Hole and other renowned artists.

God's Great Love — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher,

Scripture—Matthew 2:1-12.

The Wise Men follow the star in the east to be the first to worship the Infant Jesus in the manager at Bethlehem.

The Wise Men find the Babe with His father and mother in the stable, and gave Him gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh.

An angel appears to the simple shepherds who are watching their flocks on the hillside outside of Bethlehem. They are afraid.

In a dream Joseph is warned to flee into Egypt or Herod will kill the Holy Babe. (GOLDEN TEXT—John 3:16.)

The First Christmas

As recorded in the second chapter of St. Luke:

8. And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

9. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

10. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

11. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

12. And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

13. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

14. Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

15. And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

16. And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

He Had His Tax Money

When a North Monaghan ratepayer went to settle his tax bill a few days ago he was ready for it. He had a long tin can and a cotton bag as well and these were filled with coppers. What the amount of the tax bill was we do not know but whatever the total there was sufficient to meet it on the copper standard.

Smile if you wish but there is a good-sized truth which emerges from it all, and that is the ratepayer was ready to pay his taxes when they fell due. And what's more he had been getting ready for the day for a good many weeks and months. And it was by the simple and direct method of saving coppers.

We do not believe the average ratepayer makes much provision in advance for the payment of his taxes. When they come due either all in a lump or in instalment measure he sees the total, groans and then starts to see what he can do about raising the money. We do not point to this North Monaghan resident and say "Go thou and do likewise." Not at all. But we are certain enough his method was the one which suited his case, and people in general would find tax paying easier if they took the trouble to make some provision for it in advance.

Men Want To Work

The local superintendent of the Employment Service does not subscribe to the theory that men do not want to work and that they would rather accept relief as the easier solution to the serious business of existence.

Mr. Douglas meets men every day in the week, dozens of them. And they are looking for work otherwise they would never be going near his office. He says it is not unusual for some of them to call around three or four times the same day to make certain they are not missing anyth ng which may have turned up since the previous visit.

In the Christmas season the men who look for work admit they want it particularly so they can buy a few presents for their children. Possibly if they left their names and addresses at the proper place they could have this attended to for them, but they prefer to go out under their own power and do it themselves and do their own paying. And there's something substantially sound in that, something to indicate that the core of the man has not shrivelled. He may be travelling along a rough spot in the road but such a man is fundamentally sound. When he gets his chance—and he will—he will go ahead because he has a sure foundation on which to build.

The Price Of Hogs

On the 15th of October the Examiner received a letter from a farmer who had been discussing the price of hogs. His impression was that the packers kept the price down according to their own desires to buy them as cheaply as possible. The note which we have kept has this prediction:

"We find every year that the price of hogs will fall off just about the time we are getting ready to sell for the purpose of getting some cash together against the payment of the year's taxes. You can bet the same thing is likely to take place again this year. Just wait and see if I am not right."

That note with the prediction was dated October 15.

On that date hogs were quoted at $7.90 live weight.

On the 14th of November the price was $7.50.

On the 14th of December the price was $8.50.

And that price was 60 cents per hundred higher than the price on the day the note was written telling that the price would drop. And prices at the moment are $8.90. We suspect that when there are many hogs delivered the price falls; when they are scarce the price goes up.

Plain Talk To Germany

Relations between United States and Germany should be on the basis of friendship. That is, there is no war between these two countries and that entitles them to rank as friendly nations, and that is the proper diplomatic term to use.

But they are not on that basis. The United States ambassador to Berlin was called home weeks ago "for report and consultation" and he has not yet returned to Berlin although he has had plenty of time to make all the reports necessary and do all the consulting which might be desired.

The German ambassador to Washington has gone back to Berlin and that move was made after Washington had recalled its man from Berlin. In each capital diplomatic business is now in the hands of the next-in-command during the absence of the accredited ambassador.

There is a peculiar method of telling one country what another thinks about it. For example: U.S. Secretary Ickes of the Interior Department made an address recently in which he criticized Henry Ford and Colonel Lindbergh for accepting decorations from the government of Germany. President Roosevelt could not very well step in and say he approved of everything which Secretary Ickes had stated, but he could—and did—express his friendship and approval in another way because he drove to the Secretary's home for dinner shortly after and it was announced in the papers that he had done so. The diplomatic world understands well enough what that meant, and Germany also interpreted it correctly.

Then there came the plain statement of Senator Key Pittman chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Washington despatches go so far as to suggest that the statement was prepared by some person high in the confidence of the government. Of greater interest than its source was the blunt nature of its contents:

1: The people of United States do not like the government of Japan.

2: The people of United States do not like the government of Germany.

3: The people of United States, in my opinion, are against any form of dictatorial government, communistic or fascistic.

4: The people of United States have the power and the right to enforce morality and justice in accordance with peace treaties with us. And they will. Our government does not have to use military force and will not unless necessary.

Admittedly that is plain talk. Plain as a pikestaff. So plain that is caused Dr. Hans Thomsen, German Charge d'Affaires in Washington, to call on U.S. Secretary of State to lodge a sharp protest on behalf of the German government. But Dr. Thomsen did not get far with his protest because the State Department at Washington merely refused to accept it, and that is another way of saying it was thrown out. Secretary Ickes' criticism of two American citizens, Henry Ford and Col. Lindbergh, Dr. Thomsen was informed, was purely a domestic affair and not the concern of any foreign government. And that means just another way of saying to the German diplomat, "Here's your hat — what's your hurry?"

It means that United States has cut off from the traditional moorings where it sought to live by itself apart from the rest of the world. That blunt message, given favor by official utterance: "The people of United States do not like the government of Germany" said some thing and Washington's spine is stiffened against retraction, apology or further explanation.

Make Their Own Soap

We read with some interest an article on the changes which have taken place in rural housekeeping, and apparently there have been many. We read in part that "we have been spared the drudgery which many of our mothers and grandmothers endured who used to spend whole days at such business as making soap which we have today in its modern and usable form . . ."

Possibly the lady who wrote that is right to some extent but not entirely. Making soap at home was quite common along the Tenth Concession and it was the custom on Lot 4. It was a gradual sort of process which had its inception in two or three things, the first of which was the wood-burning kitchen range. The second feature was a barrel a short distance from the back door into which the wood ashes were put. In the bottom of the barrel and the front there was a hole, and when water was poured in at the top a brown fluid used to trickle out and that was lye. The thing went on in season from day to day until there was sufficient lye to start the boiling process to make soap.

It never seemed to be exactly drudgery because folk in other houses generally got to know that the soap-making was on and they used to come over to see how the stuff had turned out. Some of it was scooped out in a sort of jelly and would be used that way, and then again there were times when other treatment and added ingredients made it so it could be poured into pans and afterward cut up into cakes. They even added glycerine and such to cause it to appear it would be good for the skin. It was always a day of much conversation and dinner and supper were both liable to be delayed owing to the amount of stove space being used for making the soap. But people made their own soap then just as commonly as they boiled or fried their own potatoes, and never did we hear it referred to as drudgery.

Paying For Stubbornness

Some people take a long time to learn, and there are others who never will learn.

The proof is here: Some time ago Kenneth Proper of Flint, Mich., found $370 secreted in a wood pile. William Griffith owned the land and also the wood pile where the money was found. There were no claimants for the amount but Proper and Griffith could not agree on how the money should be divided.

Kenneth Proper contended he had found it and therefore it belonged to him. William Griffith was just as certain it was found on his property and therefore he had the right of ownership.

They would not take $185 each and call it quits. Not much. They went to court and before the case was settled it had been dragged through six sessions.

Now a settlement has been reached and each will receive half the money. But instead of there being $370 to divide there remains but $18, the rest having been needed to pay the costs of the case. Too bad human nature runs that way so many times. But it does.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The Examiner wishes you a Merry Christmas.

About this time of the year we suppose every hiding place in the house has been captured and occupied by the army of good cheer.

An don't forget to leave out a piece of cake and a glass of milk this evening for the fine old gentleman who will come popping down the chimney while you sleep.

The fact that Secretary Harold Ickes who has been speaking for United States is a Jew may cause Germany to increase her campaign for the extermination or banishment of all Jews.

Joseph Stalin celebrated his 59th birthday but there was no mention of it in the Russian press. When a man's in the dangerous fifties he does not want the rest of the folk to know about it.

Canada now recognizes Italy as the governing power of Ethiopia. Whether this means much or little we do not know. It may be just another way of stating something which has already become history.

Premier Chamberlain is said to have turned a deaf ear to demands for cabinet reorganization. We do not believe Premier Chamberlain possesses such a thing, but on occasion it may be convenient to create the impression that he does.

Calgary housewives were advised not to give the postmen a drink of wine at Christmas but rather serve a bowl of soup. If a postman were filled with soup at each stop he would soon learn to shake his head and say "No, thanks, I'm on a diet."

When Anthony Eden returned to England from United States he said it would be well for British papers to give more space for "informed American opinion upon European events." When he was at it he might well have suggested that the British editors be nudged into recognizing that there is such a place as Canada in the world.

The late James Couzens left Chatham and went to Detroit years ago. At the time of his death he was Senator Couzens and left an estate of $34,000,000 of which state and federal governments will take $19,000,000. His name was not on the list of government employees but he was surely working hard for the government.

WHY NOT?

(By A. R. K.)

¶ It's kind of nice this time of year, when folk seem full of words of cheer, it sort of warms the heart; and no one wrinkles up the brow, and then informs me when and how, they'll take me all apart.

¶ A stern faced man lives up our street, he walks with slow and measured beat, nor will he gee or haw; today I saw him for a while, and he was really trying to smile, his face began to thaw.

¶ I found it hard to understand, when first he grasped me by the hand, and wished his greetings there; perhaps he thought I was surprised, and my response was undersized, my words perhaps were bare.

¶ The man around the corner store, I've seen him many times before, I've known him now for years; his Merry Christmas greeted me, when I went in for prunes and tea, a grin pinned to his ears.

¶ And folk that I know none too well, they seem to treat me now so swell, they rush and shake my hand; and I send greetings back to them, I seem to walk with merry men, upon a happy land.

¶ It would be mighty fine I know, to have the Christmas feeling grow, and cause the thing to stay; so when I went out here and there, I'd meet men with a cheerful air—and do it every day.

SWEET STORY OF CHRISTMAS

Tell me again the sweet story
Of the babe of Bethlehem.
Of the Angels who sang and the glory
Of the peace, and goodwill to men.
Tell me again of the Shepherds
Who heard those Angels sing,
And hastened away to the stable
To behold their Saviour and King.
Tell me again of the Wise Men,
Who followed His guiding star,
And laid their gifts on the altar
Their gold, frankincense, and myrrh.
Tell me again the sweet story
Of the Father's great love to men,
As is shown by the gift He gave us
In the Babe of Bethlehem.
O! Beautiful, wonderful story,
And best of all, it is true,
Oh sinner, won't you receive Him?
He is God's Christmas gift to you.

• Captain Eden Reminded Me . . .

(From the Jersey Journal, Jersey City)

I HEARD Capt. Anthony Eden's speech in New York Friday night, and I took as special notice of the MANNER in which he spoke as of the MATTER of his address, and I think he wished his listeners to do so. As he proceeded with his talk, he reminded me of what happened in the editorial room of The Pharmaceutical Era, in New York a day or two after England's declaration of war with Germany in 1914. I was proof-reader for the publisher of that magazine, and had occasion to go to that room, in that capacity. There were two or three young fellows on the editorial staff, and they were discussing the new sensation with varying degrees of ignorance of Europe and the situation. On one point, however, all were agreed—that it was absolutely no business of the American people if the nations across the sea chose to destroy each other, except, of course, to sell all of them all the supplies we could.

I then ventured a remark to this effect: "In days gone by, several great empires have risen and fallen: the Empire of Nebuchadnezzar, the Medo-Persian, the Empire of Alexander and the Roman Empire. It may be that the time has come for the fall of the British Empire; if so, it may just as well be now, I suppose, as any other. But, gentlemen, if the British Empire does go down next week, the United States will go down the week after, because it stands for the same basic ideas, and this is a war between opposing ideas."

As I understand Capt. Eden's whole address, what he meant to say to this nation was that the prospect of England's having to defend herself by armed force was by no means non-existent, and also that in the event, this nation would find itself in very serious peril.

Wilson and the military and naval authorities did not enter the war 'till they realized the peril that would confront us if the Germans got to the Channel ports—especially in our then relatively unprepared condition as to both army and navy. They also realized that it would be better to fight with support of English and French naval and military forces; also that the best DEFENSE then was a vigorous OFFENSE. Wilson's purpose was to DEFEND OURSELVES and thus make the world safe for democracy and I regard the refusal of Lodge & Co. to support the League of Nations as 99 per cent to blame for Hitler and Mussolini; because OUR Delegates would have been IN FACT (whether avowedly so, or not) at the head of the table, and would have been able to restrain Lloyd George and Clemenceau from preventing a reasonable modification of the Treaty to let Germany recover from the war's effects. OCTOG.

• Had the Wrong Impression

EDITOR EXAMINER: Sir,—On December 16th, you published a letter from M. W. Shearer of Hall's Bridge, criticising the Peterborough Fish and Game Association for having what he considered a "Fish Hog" address the annual meeting, which was held on December 7th last.

Mr. Shearer evidently read the article in your paper of December 10th, where the Hon. Mr. Nixon quoted from a letter written to the Department on October 13th, 1938, but unfortunately only quoted a part of the correspondence and failed to say that it was known to the Department that a large percentage of the maskinonge caught had been returned to the water unharmed. It is generally known by our members and other sportsmen in the community that the party referred to has always made a practice of putting back to the water unharmed more than 50 per cent of his catch, as he is a strong believer in conservation. Since this question was brought up, we have been informed that only four of the fish caught were obtained for his personal use. He also gave a few to a needy family in the district where the fish were caught. Evidently Mr. Shearer misjudged our associate, as a number of others have done, and for that reason we desire as an association to have the facts made known. Any person interested can obtain same from any of our executive officers.

In regard to the question of propagation of maskinonge, which was also referred to in your issue of December 10th, we cite an extract from December 1938 issue of Hunting and Fishing as follows:

"Minnesota's maskinonge propagation experiment, according to John H. Connon of the State Department of Conservation, is far exceeding expectation of the superintendent at the new portable hatchery on Belle Tain Lake near Nevis, Minn. Starting with less than 15 brood stock fish, the hatchery produced nearly 500,600 eggs by the end of April. Today the fish hatched from these eggs are nearly ten inches long and thousands of them will be planted in northern Minnesota lakes where bottom conditions have been found suitable."

The above has since been verified by our association by the following letter.

"Dear Sirs—In reply to your letter of December 12th, relative to Minnesota's work in propagating maskinonge, the story you read in Hunting and Fishing Magazine, was prepared by myself and is correct in every detail.

Sincerely,
ED. L. SHAVE,
Director Minnesota Tourist Bureau
by John H. Connon."

If the above results can be obtained in Minnesota why not in the Kawartha District, which is a natural breeding ground for our finest of game fish.

We have always maintained and still do, that if more revenue collected by the Fish and Game Department, was spent for propagation and restocking purposes, and not elsewhere, our waters would have more attraction for our local fishermen and tourists than they have had during the past few years. Our association will always welcome constructive information but we feel that anyone wishing to criticise should first obtain facts before denouncing the association and its members, who are spending time and money each year for the benefit of the public interested in this outdoor sport, as well as the reputation of the Kawartha district.

This letter is written as an explanation of what actually took place and ends any controversy so far as we are concerned.

STANLEY O. SHIELDS.
Secretary Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association.

THE TAX OUTLOOK.

(St. Catharines Standard)

WITH an estimated deficit of $35,000,000 in the next budget of Finance Minister Dunning and one which will not be provided for in the payment of the wheat bonus to the tune of $65,000,000, those who watch the gyrations of national finance are wondering what Mr. Dunning will be able to do about it, if he is there when the wheat bonus must be published in the national books. Moreover, under the new trade treaty with the United States which extends concessions to about forty other nations and also removes the excise tax, Canada, under the present volume of revenue, stands to lose very substantially in the matter of needed revenues.

AN OVERWORKED WORD.

(Manchester Guardian)

GLAMOUR! How ubiquitous the word has become. Like many another pretty one of its kind it is being seriously overworked and will soon be dead of this slavery. "Thrill," poor ten-a-penny article of every film and feuilleton, was once magical and shiversome. "Thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice." It meant something to Shakespeare. It means nothing now. The same demise awaits poor "glamour."

You cannot look at a popular print without seeing some reference to a Glamour Girl, a phrase which to Sir Walter Scott would have meant a genuine enchantress, but now has been degraded to serve as a verbal tiara for any little "cutey" whose agent can get her a film contract.

HAPPY AS CLAMS.

(Vancouver Province)

"THEY WILL never be free in their entire lives," said Herr Hitler, speaking of the youth of Germany to the new Germans of Sudetenland at Reichenberg the other day. "And," Der Fuehrer added, "they are happy about it."

In one of the newspapers, last week, there was a description of the British Columbia clam industry, and in it the statement that the big Pacific Coast butter clam never moves more than two feet in his whole life. Like the Hitler youth, he never knows freedom. And, like them, too, he is happy about it. No one has ever heard him make a complaint. Even when he is made into chowder he remains content.

TRUE MEASURE

'Tis Christmas time again—like men of old
We seek the star that love may truth unfold.
As spirit is the power of the word
In silent solitude great depths are stirred.

Disguised in charity no man is free,
For love and love alone is liberty.
A spider's web may weigh the worth of fame
Or balance true art made in beauty's name.

Where honor's house forsakes humility,
There's lack in laughter, dearth of dignity.
As roses kissed by dewdrops make a song,
So love leaves fragrance in the memory long.

Suicide Of Spy Claimed An 'Execution'

HENDAYE, France, Dec. 24 — (AP).—Despatches reporting the suicide of a British Consulate employee following his arrest in an alleged widespread insurgent spy plot was interpreted in two ways to-day on the border.

Reports from within surgent Spain said the suicide was an admission of guilt in the espionage network and indicated the dead man—identified in a Burgos despatch only as "Fermin," a Consulate porter—had tried to smuggle military information out in the British Consul's automobile.

Spanish Government sources, however, scoffed at the suicide reports and declared the arrested man had been executed. The suicide report, they said, was issued officially to support the insurgent side of the alleged espionage plot.

Insurgent advices said the employee was arrested when an investigation showed he had opportunities to reach the valise of Harold Goodman, British Vice-Consul at San Sebastian. Military information was said to have been found by border guards in this valise when Goodman was searched at the frontier.

(Military informants at Irun, on the frontier, said documents despatched through Goodman were intended to inform Government Spain of insurgent military plans. London sources declared Goodman had been absolved of any guilt in connection with the documents, which were taken from him at Irun last Monday.)

The Spanish war front remained quiet, although insurgent bombers continued their daily raids over the government lines and rearguard cities.

Bloody Clothes To Be Analyzed

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Dec. 24—All blood-stained clothes and other articles held by police following an attack upon Lem Lung, Chinese restaurant proprietor at Marmora on December 10 last, were on Wednesday given into the custody of Dr. E. R. Frankish, legal-medico expert of the provincial Attorney General's department, for examination.

Police arrested 57 year old Isaac "Ike" Neal of Marmora, following an alleged attack upon Lem Lung in the latter's Glossy Cafe at Marmora on the morning of December 10, at which time Lung stated he had been set upon and attacked by Neal and struck over the head seven times with a hammer. Neal was arrested and held in custody on a charge of criminal assault.

The blood-stained clothes of Lem Lung and clothes said to have been found in Neal's boarding house and also bearing blood stains, were given into the custody of Dr. Frankish, as well as a hammer also found at the Neal home. The blood stains will be examined for comparison, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., revealed yesterday.

County Constable Percy Gray and Provincial authorities arrested Neal after Lem Lung staggered to the street bleeding profusely from multiple wounds and lacerations of the head, stated that Lung had been attacked from the rear while preparing a meal in the kitchen of his restaurant. Lung was released from the hospital on Wednesday and returned to his establishment. Neal is being held without bail.

ROSENEATH

Woodvale School Has Good Concert

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, Dec. 24.—The pupils of S.S. 1 and 25 presented a Christmas program of unusual merit Thursday evening in the schoolhouse. One of the outstanding parts on the program was the presentation of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Lois Sandercock as Snow White, and Velma Elder as the Queen, gave remarkable performances of these characters. The dwarfs in the prescribed costumes played their parts equally well. Then, the dance of the Brownies, when eight little pupils in costumes danced in dull formation and sang a Santa Claus song, made a pretty picture.

The program was arranged as follows: Chorus by the School, "Jack Frost"; Welcome recitation, Jean Down. An act without words entitled "A Terrible Mistake." Recitation by Lulu Kimble: Dialogue, "Each to His Trade." Dance of the Brownies. Dialogue, "Three Wishes." Song by five juniors, 1914 model (automobile). Recitation by Hayden Wellwood. Chorus, Cradle Song. Recitation by Marian Harvey. Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. Dialogue, Yassuh, Boss. Recitation by Lois Sandercock. Dialogue, The Night After Christmas. Closing Chorus, Santa Claus. A recitation by Flex Edington ushered in Santa Claus, who distributed the gifts on the tree.

The children were trained by their teacher, George Turner. Silas Sherwin acted as chairman, and Miss Hilda Arthur was the accompanist of the evening.

Previous to the opening of the program, the Christmas edition of the school paper, The Woodville News, was distributed among the audience. A small fee at the door resulted in $18.40.

Blast, Fire Damage Home In Norwood

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, Dec. 24.—The house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ott, Spring street, was badly gutted by fire Wednesday afternoon. Reports stated that the fire started when naptha gas which Mrs. Ott was using to clean her chesterfield was overturned near the stove and exploded.

The contents of the house were badly damaged by smoke and water. The Norwood fire department deserves much credit in keeping the fire under control.

Mrs. Ted Hunt of Toronto and baby Jane arrived here Wednesday to spend the Christmas vacation with Mrs. Hunt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Greenbanks.

The United church held their annual Christmas concert in the town hall Wednesday.

BARRIE COLTS CAPTURE THE S.P.A. JUNIOR "B" CHAMPIONSHIP

Beat Waterloo 4 To 3 In Overtime Game

The fleet Colts from Kempenfeldt Bay staged a fighting finish to shade Waterloo Siskins, 4 to 3, in overtime at the Gardens last night. And that victory gave Barrie the honor of winning the first S.P.A. Junior "B"' competition conducted.

Forced to come from behind a 3 to 1 score, the Colts showed more power at the finish and emerged victorious when Don Picard, speedy French-Canadian from South Porcupine, converted Dint Scott's pass in the fourth minute of overtime.

George Hainsworth's well-coached Siskins looked the better team in the early going, but Barrie came strong on end and had the staying qualities to take advantage of the fast-tiring Waterloo kids.

Neither team could flash the red bulb in the opening frame, but Brill scored twice and gave Lang the pass for the third goal in the second session. Vicks got the first Barrie goal and Mohns started the Colts' comeback with a second marker before the period's close.

Twice weakened by penalties in the third frame, the Siskins held on until the thirteen-minute mark, when Vicks notched the tying marker. Scott set up he play for he winning goal in the overtime, passing to Picard in the clear and the latter drew out Goaler Dunbrocke before sinking the disc in the mesh.

Dint Scott, Harold Mohns and Don Picard sparked the Barrie drive. All skated tirelessly, checked well and were ever dangerous around the net. Goaler Silk played steadily, while Ken Terry handed out some jolting bodychecks as Ernst and Dargie can attest. Don Bowen, Palmer and Livingstone went well.

Eddie Brill and Bill Lang starred for Waterloo. Brill's sniping was uncannily accurate, while Lang's persistent poke-checking stymied Barrie attacks on countless occasions. Jerry Bauer and Bob Martin played heads-up hockey, while Goaler Dunbrooke turned in another polished display.

TENNIS PROFITS UP

Inside Sportin' Dope

BY A. WISE CRACKER

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, I hardly think the customers will be expecting much if anything in this here colume this week, this being the festive season when folks is full of Christmas spirit and such and aint got no time to read sport columes. Anyway, outside the fact that the local hockey team has got in a spot of practice and had a trip to Owen Sound for a exhibition feature they aint been nothing stirring locally to get excited about. That Owen Sound trip was a good workout for them what could make the journey north and while all this season's prospects wasn't in uniform the gang showed enough to justify us pointing with pride rather than viewing with alarm. Our scouts give us some nice reports on this here now Mister Gray and they is a few other likely lads that is new to local fandom that the folks will be cheering around here before long.

Outclassing The Field

In the N.H.L. Mac, the Boston Bruins and the New York Rangers is at present making sorta joke of the race and right now would hafta be picked to play off for the title at the end of the season. Of course on the other hand, last year's playoffs showed that you can't tell nothing about the final results from the schedule games. You may remember that the Toronto Leaves which had a heck of a job beating the Bruins all season, slaughtered them in three straight in the playoffs and then was themselves knocked for a loop by a third-place Chicago team that on paper didn't look as if they oughta be in the league at all.

Right now about the only excitement in the loop is waiting to se when and how they're going to shoot a goal past this Mister Brimsek, the rookie in the Boston nets. If the thing keeps on the team what finally does ooze the rubber by the season's sensation will claim a couple of points and the board of directors will have a tough time upsetting thir claim at that.

Well, old timer, they is still some of the Christmas shopping to be done so mebbe the customers will let me do a bunk about here. First, however, I want to wish the whole gang I of the merriest of Yuletides they has ever had.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

Ski Notes

Now that the snow is finally arrived we wish to advise all skiers that the conditions are still very dangerous, and there has not been sufficient snow to take any foolish chances. However, we may say that anyone who feels like skiing as long as they go about it very cautiously, there are apt to be no broken limbs for over Christmas.

There will not be an organized run over the week-end, but the club will concentrate its activities around Jackson's Park and Profit's Hill.

Beginning Monday night, next, at Victoria Park, Jack Holland, the senior instructor, and Bob White, who is in charge of the Junior ski club, will commence teaching at 7 o'clock. Junior classes from 7 until 8 in order to let the little ones home in good time.

Once again we would like to say that if anyone goes out and is injured it is only through sheer foolishness.

AT THIS TIME OF GOOD-WILL WE JOIN IN AGAIN WISHING OUR GOOD FRIENDS A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

May we extend hearty Christmas greetings to athletes, fans and readers of this column in Peterborough and district. And thanks to the several dozen folks who remembered us with Xmas cards. Our budget busted at the seams, so we couldn't get around to a lotta people with written wishes for a merry holiday. While Goodwill-to-Men Inc. has slumped badly on the world market and there is peace on earth everywhere but in Europe, Asia and Africa—and a few subdivisions—we can't kick too hard, and things seem to be sailing along pretty fair in Peterborough. Nothing wrong with sports here and biggah and bettah crowds have been taking in the tilts the past season or two. So we believe it will be a merry Christmas for most of the folk who follow this pillar de piffle. We sure hope so, anyway.

* * * * * *

En passant, we might recommend some "peodi" for touchy dictators and also quarrelsome sports officials, crabby players, referee baiters, etc. This "peodi" business, we learn, is a native Indian drug or herb brewed into a sort of tea and drunk by Indians in the Southwest. It is said to have no harmful effect but the feelings engendered by use of the beverage are those of goodness—a desire for kindness to others and a cheerful charitable good nature. It has been used in religious rites to stimulate brotherly love. We are all for plenty of pots of this "peodi"!

Apologies To None

A peek into Santa Claus' mail bag showed a few letters from local lads. One from Coach Frank Buckland of the Petes said: "dear sandy—all i want this christmas is a strong team, lots of ice, some nerve tonic, less crepe-hanging and a puck title. thanks lots." The Messrs. Hartley and Sheehy of the Brock wrote: "dear santy claws—we want very little this year, just cold weather, hard ice, tight tussles, big crowds and plenty of playoffs. if we get these few things, we will promise to not turn away any fans in playoff time." Sec. Jim Dorris of the Petes' ball club was brief: "santa—give us nine bob dolls and a decent schedule. thanks a million."

* * * * * *

We glimpsed a couple of others before getting the bum's rush from the busy post office. Coach Bill Irwin of the Orfuns scribbled: "dear st. nick—i would like 7 new players weighing 1400 lb., not each, of course. and i would like a free hand in handling the team, and i would promise peterborough a playoff team." Belleville Local 241 Umipres' Union said: "please sandy claws give us lots of one-sided games, but not too many with peterborough teams, and leave us a bottle of arsenic for the liftlock city scorer and critic. surely that's not too much to ask." All we ask of Santa at the moment is to please let us go quietly to sleep in a fur-lined hollow tree till the clamor of the bill collectors dies off. That ain't much to ask, is it?

The Petes Practice

Quite a raft of railbirds—impatient for the hockey season to begin—viewedt he Petes' practice at the Brock last e'en. Several of the pretty sure prospects were absent, going home for Xmas, but among those noted were: Whitey Dann, Bill Flack, Lorne Grey, Archie Weir, Dude Brady, Jack Gardner, Eddie Starr, Bun Kingdon, Dot Nicholls, Dutch Pammett, Eddie Prete, Art Heal, Honey Tompkins, Red Creighton and a few more. With Coach Frank Buckland putting 'em through a pretty stiff drill. Several of the newcomers looked okay, too, and we imagine the Petes will ice as good a team as last year, if not better. They will be heavier, that's a brass-bound cinch.

* * * * * *

With the holiday falling on Sunday this week-end, the Church Hockey League re-organization is liable to run behind its schedule, but loop ossifers hope clubs will line up right away. There is an executive meeting Tuesday night at seven in the "Y", and prospective entries and those desiring information are invited to drop around. Probably some 18 or so squads will play church hocke yat All Saints' and Quaker rinks this winter, but it's up to the various clubs to put in an entry if they want to see the schedule started right away.

Some Hoop Gossip

Don Charlton sends us a 1938-39 Ontario Church Basketball Association year book with rules, et al. Thank ya, suh. It contains a picture of St. Paul's squad of Peterborough which won the O.C.B.A. intermediate "B" championship last year—those pictured being Orm Weir, Harry Marsh, Les Ascott, Jack Gemmell, Ross Pulkinghorn, Gord McIntyre and Don Sedgewick. This team will have to move up to intermediate "A" this year. St. John's will enter a juvenile crew in Ontario church competition. Brampton, St. Paul's finalist opponent a year back, are doing right well in Toronto senior church ranks now.

From time to time, some sympathetic gee says to us: "How do you manage to fill up that column every day? It must get tiresome grinding out the same sort of stuff six days a week the year 'round." Well, sir, it does sometimes get pretty tough—but then doesn't every job get you down at times? We can't always turn out a readable effort, but we can always fill the pillar up with some sort of stuff relating to sports. And we try to stick to local or district athletics and leave the pro games to those who are on the spot to see 'em. We comment merely on sports in our own sector. It's interesting work most of the time and, as stated before, it's a job. Sports scribblers never retire at an early age on their earnings, but they do get around a bit and have a lot of fun. Yeah, it's an okay racket.

Up and Down Sports' Rialto: We understand there are no puck practices at the Brock tonight, just skating to music....Tough luck for Ivan Fletcher of Keene, no stranger to sports here, getting wounded in the back—but, fortunately, not seriously....Queen's knocked over Belleville a few days ago in a VanHorne Cup tilt to take the lead....While the Petes lost a 6-3 fray in Owen Sound lately, don't forget that the Trappers handed the Belleville Redmen a 16-2 pasting in playoffs last season....And it's pretty much the same Quinte crew now which figure the Petes will be set-ups this season for 'em!....'Tis expected that Bobcaygeon will not operate a team in that O.H.A. loop with Lakefield, Lindsay, etc.....We didn't see the junior hockey practice here last p.m., but heard some good lads were present....K.C.: And what would Morganson know about things locally; or, after all, what would you Quinte folk know of them?....Doesn't seem to be anything else to look after just now....And so a merry Xmas to you and you and all of youse!

Johnny Longden Has Ridden 232 Winners

By Alan Randal
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(CP)—It's about time now to mark little Johnny Longden down as the ridingest fellow of the year with Nick Wall, the saddle mite from Glace Bay, N.S., alongside him for winning the most money on the North American turf in 1938.

As for Wall, he was top money winner by more lengths than there are for horses. A year ago Charley (Big Heat) Kurtsinger found 120 firsts, 94 seconds and 106 thirds good for $384,202 and top money honors. This year Nick got the mount on Stagehand in the Santa Anita handicap, won the 100 grand, and went on to bring his total to better than $400,000.

That was a long way for Wall to come from the days after he moved with his family from Newfoundland to Glace Bay and found his fun riding mine ponies in the Cape Breton coal fields.

Beat Out Adams

The same might be said for Calgary Johnny, a familiar figure on Western Canada tracks before he made his eastern debut in 1935, placed second on the United States turf in 1936, and dueled down the stretch at Tanforan to beat out Adams this year.

Not only did Longden bring home the most mounts to supplant Adams as the leading rider—the Kansas Kid scored 260 firsts in 1937—but he placed right behind Wall in purses won with better than $250.

The tiny 28-year-old Alberta rider—he wouldn't weigh more than 105 pounds sopping wet—has always been in great demand. First call on his services cost his contract holders $17,000 a year and when one considers that Longden gets $10 a mount, plus $15 extra money for every win, it is enough to make a bank president here and there wish he had never got his full growth and knew how to ride.

In 1935 Johnny won five out of six races on Bert Baroni's Top Row. In 1936 he won three derbies, the Latonia, the Illinois and the Louisiana, aboard Rushaway, the so-caleld "Iron Horse" of A. G. Tarn of Winnipeg. Up to now, those were his big thrills.

Fred Walmesley Dies In North

SUDBURY, Dec. 24. — Fred (Wiggy) Walmesley, former Nickel Belt baseball great, died Friday from a heart attack as he reported for work at Copper Cliff. Death came in the concentrator building at Copper Cliff, where the deceased man was employed.

The heart condition which resulted in his death had troubled Wiggy for ten years. It was the reason he was forced to leave professional baseball ranks when with Toronto Maple Leafs in 1928.

He was in his 34th year. A native of London, England, he came to Copper Cliff with his family when only eight weeks old. Surviving are his father, Arthur Walmesley, International Nickel Company pensioner; and three sisters, Ethel, Gertrude and Thelma (Jo).

Wiggy Walmesley starting playing baseball in Copper Cliff junior leagues, and was only 17 years old when he stepped into senior company in 1922. In 1925, when still a junior, Walmesley did all the catching as Copper Cliff won the senior championship of Ontario. His work in the championship series and afterward was so impressive that Wiggy was signed to a pro. contract. In 1927 he was with Rochester in the International League, and next year with Toronto. It was in the Queen City that the heart condition first became apparent.

Leaving pro. ranks, Wiggy was reinstated as an amateur, and last played baseball in 1936 for Copper Cliff. Last year and in 1937 he acted in an advisory capacity as coach at Copper Cliff.

Maple Leafs Will Hang Up Their Stockings In Hopes That Santa Will Be Good To Them

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—(CP)—Toronto's Maple Leafs will hang up their blue-and-white stockings following a game with Detroit here tonight in hopes that Santa Claus will fill them to abundance with hockey goodness. That is, all except Roughouse Red Horner. He doesn't believe in Mr. Claus.

Horner, once again regaining the heights as the National League's "villain," doesn't think there's a Santa because 'some guy dressed like Santa Claus told me the Leafs would be in first place by Christmas." Horner hissed as teammates appended a list of hopes to the genial old gent.

Although reluctant to discuss their Christmas wishes, players admitted they all pertained to hockey. Here's what a few of them admitted:

Goaler Turk Broda—"I asked for seven or eight more shutouts."

Bucko McDonald—"Bigger and better bodychecks, and I want to make good with the Leafs."

Gordie Drillon—"A voucher for 20 goals."

Syl Apps—"I said I'd be satisfied with 20 assits."

Japan will register all workers.

THREE FORMER BOXING CHAMPIONS PREPARE FOR COMEBACK

Are Waiting For Jacobs To Set Dates

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(AP)—It is learned from what the foreign correspondents term an unimpeachable source that three former world boxing champions are preparing to make comebacks and are waiting only for promoter Mike Jacobs to name their opponents and the dates.

They are Jim Braddock and Max Schmeling, the two old geezers who held the heavyweight championship some years ago, and Jimmy McLarnin, the ex-welterweight titleholder from Vancouver, whose last important fight was in 1936.

Braddock, out of the ring a year, wants to try it again because he has been bored stiff since his restaurant folded up some months ago. He is aware, too, that the boxing business is enjoying its greatest boom in years. The book says Jim is 33.

If Fully Recovered

Schmeling, fully recovered from the back injury inflicted by Joe Louis last summer, is bickering from Germany and will go into training as soon as Jacobs decides upon a spot for him. Max plans to have two tune-up bouts in Germany before coming over. Max is also 33, according to the book.

They have been after McLarnin to come out of retirement and try to put the slug on Henry Armstrong and in spite of his denials, "Baby Face" is said to be ready to give it a whirl if the inducement is right. He is willing to fight Armstrong next spring but only if the welterweight championship is on the line. Jacobs fully expects to arrange that to Jimmy's satisfaction.

Such a fight would just about fill any of the local bowls, and Jacobs who presently is sunning himself down in Florida, knows it.

Alone of the three come-backers, Braddock has no illusions about regaining his title. The memory of that final punch Louis landed on him out in Chicago still is with him. He wants no more of it. Jim simply has fought so long he knows nothing else to do, and he figures he still can whip most of the heavyweight crop.

14 Goals Scored When Chiefs Beat Brantford

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Dec. 24 —(CP). — Goalkeepers apparently entered the spirit of Christmas gift-giving here last night for 14 goals were scored in a Senior "A" division, Ontario Hockey Association game between St. Catharines Chiefs and Brantford Red Birds. Chiefs won 9-5 and players of both teams benefitted to the extent of 23 scoring points.

Through the winning debut in the new Garden City Gardens, St. Kitts took over undisputed possession of third place in the standing of the six-team league. They are one point behind Oshawa and five in arrears of the leading Toronto Goodyears. Brantford, who have won but one game this season, are fluttering about in the cellar.

Four Brant goals came in the final period. Ebby Edmison counted two of them in the final three minutes. Other Bird marksmen were Hamilton's Ab Conick, with two, and Tony Torti, one.

Eddie Lister celebrated the Yuletide season with three goals and Arn Rombough followed with two. Bobby Pinder, Rudy Pilous, Sam Phillips, and Ossie Carnegie, Toronto negro, each scored one.

President James Douglas of the O.H.A. and other association officials attended the game and were introduced to the crowd of 1,000.

Public Picking Gershwin Successor At Christmas Night Concert

NEW YORK, Dec. 24—(AP).—Paul Whiteman ended a three-year search today for his choice as the successor to the late George Gershwin—but he's leaving it to the public for a decision Christmas night in Carnegie Hall.

The King of Jazz wouldn't name his preference but intimated it lay among Ferde Grofe, Raymond Scott and Morton Gould.

All three, among others, have worked for months on compositions especially for the concert.

The concert, the first that Whiteman has given in Carnegie Hall in five years, is to be a musical market place, an occasion for the audience to choose the foremost from what Whiteman believes to be the cream of modern American composers.

His orchestra of 30 is being augmented by 30 Philharmonic-Symphony members. So intense have been the rehearsals, and so minute, that Grofe has not yet heard the last movement of his "Trylon and Perisphere"—suggested by the New York 1939 World's Fair theme symbols.

Whiteman, who was instrumental in placing Gershwin prominently before the public, is using two of that composer's numbers—the famous Rhapsody in Blue and the Cuban Overture.

ROLL CUSTOMERS

HALIFAX — (CP). — More than half of Halifax's bootlegging "joints" were not satisfied with selling liquor but had to "roll" their customers as well, Inspector E. S. Tracey of the Nova Scotia Liquor Commission testified in a liquor-selling prosecution.

TRENT RIVER

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Clark and daughters of Detroit will spend over Christmastide at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Longmuir and family.

Mrs. Claud Insley and sons Jack, Douglas and Bill Liberty of Toronto will be Christmas visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Francis Ruttan and family.

Mr. James Paget leaves this week for Toronto where he will spend over the holidays with his daughter, Mrs. Roy Burgess and Mr. Burgess.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ellis and son Carl will spend Christmas with their daughter Mrs. Fisher and Mr. Fisher of Bancroft.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Davidson will spend Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. J. Hoffman and family of Havelock.

Mr. Ross McLaren of Campbellford is spending a few days at "Bonnie Bank"

Mr. Thomas Sedgwick lost a cow this week under unusual circumstances, through being hooked by the horns of another cow in the region of the heart. Upon investigation a lump was found near the vital organ which caused death.

Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Lean and family will spend Christmas Day with Mrs. Lean's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Richards of Baltimore.

Christmas visitors from outside points with Mrs. A. Wight of "Cedar Isle" will be Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kearsey, Miss Laura Wight, Mr. Bill Goodfellow of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wight and family and Mr. Will Wight of Peterborough.

The Terror Of Any Air Raid

So perfectly did this Tokyo family enact the roles of air raid bombardment victims that we find it difficult to believe the picture was made during an air-raid drill. All residents of Tokyo, the Japanese capital, took part in the week-long drills which included every conceivable type of manoeuvre for protection in a possible raid. Bombing planes whizzed overhead dropping smoke bombs as smoke flares added to the reality. Gas masks and oiled-silk gas-proof shelters received a stern test.

Salvation Army Christmas Concert

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 24.—The annual Christmas entertainment sponsored by the Salvation Army held its proverbial appeal for the children as evidenced by the large attendance. Dr. O. C. Watson, who for the past few years has been acting chairman for this event, announced the program in his usual genial manner. Appropriately enough the opening song, "The First Noel," was sung by the audience, and following a brief prayer by Captain D. Sharpe, the entertainment proceeded. Miss Lorraine Clarke gave a song of Welcome in series with an acrostic dialogue by the girls of Mrs. Cochrane's class. Bill Runions offered a guitar solo; next was a dialogue, "The Reason Why," by the boys of Mrs. C. Runion's class; followed by a recitation, "Two Stockings," by Phyllis Seaborne; a dialogue, "The King Comes," the Home League ladies; a sketch, "Cat Pie"; "Grandma Rile's Christmas," a one-act play by members of the Primary classes; recitation. "An Impatient Waiter," by Albert Melvin; instrumental selections by the String Band; tableau, a Christmas story; recitation, "At Christmas Time," by Mrs. Forde; drill, The Torchbearers, by members of the Youth Group; a display of feats by members of the Wolf Cub Troop; recitation. "Why We Are Happy," Betty McInroy; tableau, "Silent Night." At the conclusion of the program Santa arrived and distributed gifts among the children.

Four large department stores of Japan are reported to be preparing to open branch stores in Shanghai, Soochow and Nanking, China.

Snow-Bogged Roads Begin To Wean Britain As Milk Delivery Services Fail

LONDON, Dec. 24 (CP Cable)—Great Britain, already suffering a crisis in coal delivery, today began to feel a pinch in the milk supply as the cold wave neared the end of its first week and the air ministry's weather bureau forecast no relief.

Temperatures which rose above freezing yesterday sagged again today, adding discomfort for the householders whose water services are disrupted. The nature of London's plumbing is such that many frozen pipes can be thawed only in warmer weather.

London restaurants began refusing to serve milk drinks as the supply decreased owing to delivery difficulties, but it is still possible to have milk in tea and coffee.

It is estimated the cold snap cost main line railways and the London passenger transport board $1,250,000 in damage to rolling stock and pay for extra gangs. Simultaneously, however, the number of passengers increased as motorists put their cars away and took trains.

The snowy spell arrived at the worst possible time, catching the services already overtaxed by the Christmas rush. Mail delivery was delayed and provincial papers arrived at the Canadian Press office more than two hours late.

TWEED

3 Youths Caught With Stolen Fowl

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Dec. 24. — Three Marlbank youths were arrested by police as they attempted to dispose of 30 chickens on Thursday morning. The chickens, as well as three bags of grain found in the youths' possession, are said by Provincial Police to have been stolen from the farm of Henry Mountenay, residing in the County of Lennox and Addington, on Wednesday night.

The names of the three youths were given as Kenneth Bradshaw, Earl Ferguson, and Ernest Huff, all lumbermen residing near Marlbank. Following their apprehension in Belleville where the trio attempted to dispose of the fowl, they were returned to the County Court of Lennox and Addington County, where the charges of theft were preferred. They were held in custody.

The arrests followed a lengthy police vigil looking into the wholesale theft of poultry in the southern part of Hastings County.

Provincial Constable W. E. Smith assisted by Belleville police effected the arrest of the trio, who later are said to have made statements to the authorities. Police state the three men left their lumbering activities near Marlbank late yesterday and drove by automobile to the Mountenay farm where they stole the 30 birds and three bags of oats. Six of the chickens were smothered to death en route to the poultry establishment, however.

Held on Serious Charges.

Clarence Dafoe, Tweed, was remanded to custody after being arrested by Chief J. Clair Hayes, on serious charges. The young man was denied bail.

He appeared before Justice of the Peace C. H. Kerr, and was later removed to the County Jail at Belleville.

Springs In Ocean End Sponge Beds

NASSAU, Bahamas, Dec. 24 (CP).—The phenomenon of fresh water springs bursting suddenly through the floor of the ocean was blamed for the destruction overnight of an artificial sponge cultivation venture in the Water Cay Channel at Andros Island, which represented five years labor and a $25,000 investment. Fresh water is deadly to growing sponges.

Drs. Walton Smith and H. H. Brown, English scientists and sponge culture experts, who investigated the disaster for the Nassau government, struck on the undersea springs theory when they discovered much of the island's water supply came from subterranean reservoirs into which rain seeped through the island's limestone surface.

The theory was supported by local fishermen who said it was possible often to scoop a fresh drink off the surface of the sea surrounding the island.

The sponge beds at Andros Islands were the most extensive and prolific in the Bahamas and after disasterous storms in 1926-27 it was necessary to introduce artificial cultivation to offset the ravages caused. In time the beds spread into the channel where sponge had never grown naturally — probably because of fresh water springs.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, December 25.

Sunday's horoscope indicates a paramount attention to the spiritual and humane attributes of the year's outstanding period of festivity and celebration of the festival of good will and peace on earth. A more than ordinary attitude of these mystical qualities is likely to mark the annual period of joyousness, kindliness and mutual appreciation. All trivial intrusions of jealousy, strife, and ill-will should be summarily dismissed.

Those whose birthday it is may approach the holiday season with subdued, reflective, sympathetic and philanthropic appreciation of the meaning of Christmas, and a more sober reaction to festivity and celebration. The mystical and idealistic or altruistic impulses are emphasized, although the social, congenial and youthful attributes are not wanting. All petty or ignoble impulses should be decisively dismissed.

A child born on this day may be versatile, diligent, and talented, as well as audacious, adventurous, and romantic. It should be friendly, companionable, and jovial, although having deep religious and humanitarian impulses.

For Monday, December 26.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a continuation of the major joy and jollification of the annual period of good cheer, although there may be somewhat of a reaction from high tension and acute indulgences. A surprising stroke of good luck, primarily affecting the social, domestic, or emotional life, is indicated. Persons of high station figure in this and may join in prolonging the festivities. Cultivate this by hospitality.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a very promising year, with a sudden stroke of good fortune looming large and affecting the social as well as business status. Persons of high prestige and standing seem disposed in this direction and should be cultivated by gestures of hospitality and grace. Much depends on such social or humanitarian contact.

A child born on this day may be excellently endowed with fine attributes and talents to win the support and friendship of those in high places. It may have an arresting personality, many graces and social charms making for a probably fashionable or influential career.

Christmas Out Of Jail

PORTLAND, Ore.—John Collier, 38, laborer, landed in police court yesterday on a charge of vagrancy. "Your Honor," he pleaded to Municipal Judge Julius Cohn, "I've been in jail for the last 11 Christmases. I'd like to be out this one." He got his request.

War Continues

SHANGHAI.—Since neither China nor Japan is a Christian nation, more than 2,000,000 men in their armies continued their war today while the rest of the world prepared to celebrate Christmas. Tomorrow will merely be the 537th day of the conflict which has left millions homeless and destitute.

590 Special Baskets Distributed City's Relief Officer Announces

The spirit of Christmas reached out through the agency of the city's relief department to share the festive reality of the Yuletide season with 590 families and 14 single persons.

The distribution of special baskets of food and delicacies for the Christmas dinner and subsequent meals was completed this morning excepting some last minute calls, some of them having been deferred until today. Five of them were for families at Lakefield and one in Ennismore, who are still on the city's relief roll but whose residence had been transferred to those communities. Alderman Dutton also sent in the names of five families on the border line, those who are struggling along without recourse to relief.

A. G. Metheral, relief officer, informed the Examiner that of the 59 families who had received Christmas cheer, 528 are on relief and 70 are other families whose ability to support themselves is still holding out against adversity, but who really needed some aid to brighten the great festival of Christmas.

Citizens Assisted

Such is the story today at the city's centre of the well-doing that has received generous assitance from citizens during the last week. Mr. Metheral showed the Examiner in confidence the list of individual citizens, churches, service clubs, factory employees and other organizations who assumed a great deal of the burden of preparing hampers and otherwise making certain in so far as was possible that no persons were being overlooked on the day that observes the anniversary of the birth of Jesus Christ at Bethlehem.

The bulk of the assistance came from the city's churches, and new recruits in the public spirited work of sharing the enjoyment of Christmas were various employees organizations from local factories.

Mr. Metheral asked the Examiner to thank all those who had co-operated so readily and generously in the preparation of Christmas baskets. He said that some of them might not wish to have their names mentioned publicly, and for that reason, today at any rate, he was expressing his appreciation to them collectively, and hoped that the joy of Christmas would be abundantly reflected to them.

Issue Dinner Tickets

For single persons on relief the relief office is issuing tickets for turkey dinners on Sunday, and some of the churches have also remembered this small group, nearly all men. One church is giving three dollars each to any of its unmarried members on relief to help make the occasion more cheerful for them.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

By an Examiner Reporter.

A CHRISTMAS ROBIN

A robin has been seen in the yard behind the J. E. A. Fitzgerald coal offices on Hunter street for the past several days.

99 YEARS OLD SUNDAY

The Examiner was told this morning that Richard O. Grahame, Driscoll Terrace, was going to Toronto for Christmas to be with his father who will be 99 years old on Sunday.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Close to one hundred turkeys were distributed among the married men employed at the Peterborough Lock Company as a Christmas gift from the employers, and all single men on the payroll received a cash award.

RATEPAYERS' MEETING

Topics discussed at the meeting of the Rural Ratepayers' Association of North Monaghan at their meeting this week the proposal to unite the three rural school sections of the township, appointment of an independent Court of Revision next year, and several other related community questions. The Association decided not to be represented as a body at the municipal nominations held at the Court House last night.

LOST NAMES AND ADDRESSES

Two people are going to wait in vain for a Christmas chicken they won Friday night, unless they see this item. They won the birds at the Legion social games and their names and addresses were taken down by officials who planned to deliver the birds today. Then the names and addresses became lost. If the people concerned will telephone to the Legion Hall they will have birds delivered.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

At the aldermanic nominations Friday night, Ald. H. J. McCannan in congratulating Mayor Hamilton on his re-election referred to the services to the city by the mayor's father, the late Peter Hamilton, as a member of the School Board for over 25 years. Ald. McCannan stated that he had worked six years in Mr. Hamilton's employ while serving his apprenticeship in the Peter Hamilton plant.

SECOND CHRISTMAS IN HOSPITAL

To-morrow will be the second Christmas in succession that Gerald Johnson, young Indian boy from Burleigh Falls, has spent in hospital. It will probably be a lonely sort of time for him, except that Gerald has begun to believe that people are fundamentally kind, that they do go out of their way to help others. Last Christmas many people sent him gifts.

TOYS DRY-CLEANED

Tom Lansfield put a large quantity of teddy bears, gingham dogs, cats and other similar toys through his dry-cleaning machine this week as his contribution to the Firemen's Toy Drive. The toys were turned in to the Fire Hall and many were soiled, so Mr. Lansfield undertook to make them new again. He succeeded and tomorrow morning the dogs, cats and bears will be huddled under Christmas trees in the homes of the needy.

CHRISTMAS DAY AT POST OFFICE

The public lobby will be open on Monday, December 26 from 6.30 a.m. to 6.00 p.m. All wickets will be open from 8.00 a.m. to 12.00 noon. The regular deliveries will be given by the letter carriers. There will be no delivery by the rural route couriers. The collections will be made from the street letter boxes as usual, and all mail posted will be despatched as usual.

THIRTY BOYS GUESTS.

Thirty school boys were guests of the Y's Men's Club at a turkey supper at the Y.M.C.A. Thursday evening. A fine spread was prepared for these youngsters of from eight to twelve years, and they brought to the festive board the vigorous appetites of boys. The Y's Men had presents for all of them, and generally provided an exceptionally pleasant evening for their young guests.

CASE ADJOURNED.

A drunk charge was the only thing that marred the Christmas serenity of the police court this morning and the fact that it was the Yuletide season saved the defendant. He pleaded not guilty, and Chief Newhall pointed out that the man was a painter and that he claimed his condition was due to the effects of turpentine he had been using. Smilingly Magistrate Gee adjourned the case for a week.

A SURPRISE

This week somebody at the City Hall raffled off several chickens but when it became known that one of the girls in the City Clerk's office had won a prize, the employees entered into a conspiracy with the police and killed a small pigeon which was plucked, then carefully wrapped and handed to the girl as her prize. The dwarf chicken, according to the latest reports, wound up in a waste basket.

CHRISTMAS BONUS

All employees of the Peterborough Canoe Company received a Christmas bonus this year, renewing an old custom that has not been followed for a number of years. Holidays with pay in summer months and an athletic association that is active during the winter months, are enjoyed by workers. The athletic association is sponsoring a 4-team hockey league this winter. To put the association on its feet, the company donated wood for two special canoes that were made by the men in their spare time, sold by the company, with proceeds going to the association.

Christmas Show At Trent River Draws Big Crowd, Good Program

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TRENT RIVER, Dec. 24. — The Sunday School Christmas tree and entertainment drew a good attendance at the United Church on Friday night, notwithstanding other similar events in the near vicinity. A beautifully decorated tree adorned the platform. Rev. A. McLauchlin was chairman for the following program: Opening carol, "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing"; chorus, "Beautiful Story," by school; recitation, "My Cake," Doreen Doupe; recitation, "Save a Little Christmas," Bobby Glenn; chorus, "Jolly Old Fellow"; piano solo, Irene Wood; recitation, Morris Dunn; recitation, Myrtle Aulthouse; vocal solo, "I Don't Want to Go to School Today," Jeryne Brown; recitation, "The Christmas Tree," Eleanor Lean; recitation, "Around the World To-day," Dorell Lean. Rev. G. F. Kelly of Lakefield rendered the first part of the appropriate story of Dickens' "Christmas Carol." Mr. Kelly presented an impersonation of Old Scrooge that held the audience's attention. Recitation, "Santa Claus," Craig Brownsell; recitation, "A Real Santa Claus," Willie Wight; piano solo, Jimmie Umphrey; recitation, "Eastern Legend," Doreen Free; recitation, "The Wooden Shoe," Glenna Brown; recitation, "The Christ Child," Margaret Doupe; chorus, "Deck the Hall."

Rev. Mr. Kelly presented the second part of the "Christmas Carol"; chorus, "The Spirit of Christmas"; recitation, "Santa Claus' Arrival," Laureena Wight; recitation, "Bachelor Sale," Erlie Wannamaker; vocal duet, "Silent Night," Jeryne Huble and Jeryne Brown. Mr. Kelly gave the third part of Dickens' "Christmas Carol," the Spirit of Christmas Present" and yet to come; chorus "Calling Santa Claus." During this chorus Santa Claus arrived at the door to greet the children; recitation, "God Bless Us Every One," Goldie Glenn; choruses, "The Night Before Christmas" and "Listen to the Mocking Bird." The Misses Fleda Thompson and Ethel Shearer were the piano accompanists for the evening. Santa Claus distributed the gifts from the tree. The door receipts amounted to $22. Each child also received a bag of candy.

Centreville Pupils Have Supper, Games

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CENTREVILLE, Dec. 24. — The annual Sunday School entertainment was held in the Sunday School hall on Thursday night. There was a large representation of parents and children. A delicious supper was served at six o'clock, after which the little children and young people enjoyed themselves with various games. A pleasing feature was community singing of Christmas hymns.

The superintendent, Stewart McGill, welcomed the gathering and thanked all who helped to make the entertainment so successful.

NESTS FOR CHINESE

Edible nests of a species of swift are being gathered in the Philippines for shipment to China, where they are considered a great delicacy.

Canadian Legion Notes

Last Wednesday evening was a most unfortunate one for our carpetbowlers as all three of the Legion teams went down to defeat, but though the Legion Rooster's head is a little bloody it is still unbowed and after a couple of days of depression he is once again strutting as proudly as ever.

The Legion carnival on Monday last was an unqualified success and our thanks are due to the many kind friends who helped to put it over. We are greatly indebted to H. Cranford of the Westclox, Zellers, F. & G., Edwards Wood Co., National Grocers and Mr. Stevens, Gladstone avenue, for the gifts of the door prizes.

Christmas has arrived once again and No. 52 of the Canadian Legion can look back on a most successful year marked by many and varied activities. Through the generosity of all classes of the community we have been enabled to bring a measure of cheer and happiness this Christmas into homes that would otherwise have been gloomy. It has been our pleasure as well as our duty to give a measure of care to some of the more unfortunate of our comrades who have fallen by the wayside in the battle for a living. The general public know little of the activity of the pension officer, Comrade Doug. Loomis, in securing pensions long overdue, and also in securing allowances for men who have passed the fifty mark, men who otherwise would have to go on relief and thereby saving the pockets of taxpayers.

To all our members and friends, and our fellow citizens we wish a Merry Christmas and in the words of Tiny Tim, "God bless us all, every one."

Presents Bring Tragedy

HUNTINGTON, Ind., Dec. 24 — (AP).— Mrs. Bertha Beady, 37-year-old mother of six children, had her arms so full of Christmas presents when she got off a bus in nearby Andrews last night that she did not see an automobile coming. She was killed. Stanley Putnam of Chicago, driving the car, told authorities she stepped in front of it. He was not held.

Santa By Plane

BRIGDEN, Ont., Dec. 24.—(CP)—Santa Claus arrives here today by airplane, weather permitting. If it doesn't he will come by the afternoon train for the annual parade.

Neighboring Merchants Suffer Similar Hurt At Almost Same Time

Campbellford, Dec. 24.

TWO Campbellford merchants whose stores face on opposite sides of the main street received practically identical injuries at practically the same time this morning.

Hector McArthur, proprietor of an electrical shop was out near Hastings erecting a radio aerial this morning when he lost his balance at the top of a ten-foot ladder and jumped to the ground. He broke two bones, suffering a compound fracture of the left leg. Following emergency treatment by Dr. Campbell of Hastings he was brought to Campbellford and placed in the hospital.

J. A. C. Allan owner of the hardware store bearing his name broke a small bone in his right foot. He stepped outside the back door of his store this morning to look over a pair of sleighs, slipped on the ice near the doorway. It was not until some time later that he found a bone had been broken.

Prices Of Fowl Are Increased

The Christmas market this morning was down in attendance and up in prices, leaving the impression that buyers who passed up turkeys on Wednesday missed the boat.

At 10.30 o'clock turkeys were selling at 25 to 30 cents a pound for hens and 23 cents generally for gobblers; geese were 20 to 25 cents, chickens 18 to 25 cents, butter 23 and 24 cents and eggs from 28 to 35 cents.

First grade turkeys could have been bought on Wednesday as low as 20 cents a pound with a big supply on the boards. According to farmers the wholesale market had absorbed most of the turkeys in the outlying district, many of them going to Montreal, and today's offerings were the remnants. The quality of the birds was apparently on par with those of Wednesday but the supply was lighter and prices were consequently firmer.

Several farmers remarked that they had never seen a Christmas market with empty spaces along the tables at 10 o'clock until today. Trade was late in getting under way, there was plenty of room along the buyers' aisles, and the general prospect seemed an anti-climax to Wednesday's trading and even to that of last Saturday.

An Effective Sign

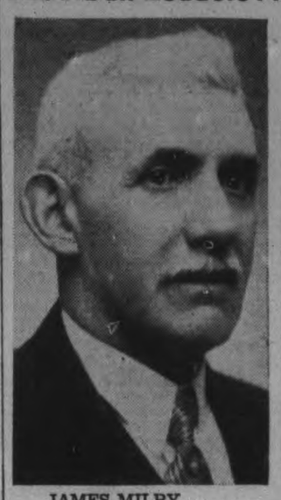
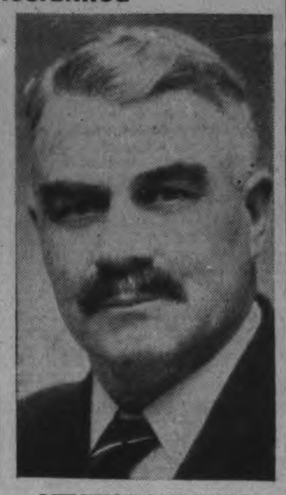
Suburban Leaders Acclaimed



JAMES MILBY



MELVILLE JOHNSTON

James Milby, Reeve of North Monaghan for the past two years, was returned to office by acclamation last night along with all members of the 1938 Council. Melville Johnston, lone rural representative on the council, who has been Deputy-Reeve for some time, was also returned.

Ivan Fletcher Suffers Gunshot Wound

Wilfred (Ivan) Fletcher, of Keene, driver of the Keene-Peterborough school bus is in St. Joseph's Hospital as the result of a shooting accident at a turkey shoot at his place Friday afternoon.

A shotgun in the hands of one of the competitors was accidentally discharged and some of the pellets struck Fletcher, who was standing some 100 feet away, penetrating his back.

Dr. H. Wright of Keene removed the pellets and the injured man was brought into hospital here. This morning it was stated at the hospital that he had a comfortable night and is doing nicely.

Fortunately Fletcher was wearing a leather jacket at the time of the shooting or the accident might have had more serious consequences.

Dismiss Charge Against Accountant

LINDSAY, Dec. 24—The charge against Sidney E. Gale of Toronto was dismissed by Magistrate Gee on Friday. The charge was that he did unlawfully falsify the books of the Canada Lime Company, of Coboconk, with intent to defraud. Gale had been employed by the Company until it went bankrupt, and subsequently was in charge of the Company in the interests of National Trust Company. Preliminary hearing lasted the entire day, and the court room was filled to capacity by people from the north country. V. J. McElderry, K.C., Peterborough, was prosecutor.

Starting the first Wednesday after the New Year all grocery stores in Lindsay will close one afternoon during the winter season. The necessary bylaw was passed at a special session of the council.

Fenelon Falls tried out its new $11,000 power plant on Monday night, and a distinct difference is noted in the current power as well as the brilliancy of the lights.

Whitfield's School Has Jolly Party

MILLBROOK, Dec. 24.— Whitfield's school was alight on Thursday evening, candles burning in the windows, festoons of green and red, and other seasonable decorations, with a Christmas tree loaded with gifts and bright with tinsel, and other ornaments, bringing the Yuletide atmosphere within doors, as the pupils, under the direction of their teacher, Miss Della Mae Sisco, presented their annual entertainment, prior to dismissal for the vacation period.

Rev. A. L. Sisco acted as chairman, the opening number, a chorus, "A Christmas Wish for the Audience," being sung by the Junior pupils. This was followed by a pretty Star Drill, by seven girls, wearing white dresses, with wands wound with yellow and surmounted by a glittering star. Dressed in ragged clothing seven boys gave the Tramp Drill, and the caste for the "Christmas Cookies" dialogue included: Tom, Carl Williamson; George, Paul Elson; Kate, Marian Rowe; Lois, Hazel Rowe; Mrs. Allen, Ruth Lewers.

"A Christmas Vision" depicted a church scene, with choir and congregation, and after the singing of carols by the whole school, and a Christmas prayer, they saw a vision of the Christ Child, with Mary (June Miller), the Babe lying in a manger.

An operetta, "What's the Matter with Sally?" was well presented, with rollicking choruses and solos, the caste being: Miss Jeffries (teacher at the Orphanage), Norma Gillis; Mr. Blount, Orphanage superintendent, Melbourne Morton; Mrs. Donnelly, Sally's mother, Audrey Lewers; Sally, Hope Douglas; orphans: Prudence (Ruth Lewers), Agnes, (Margaret Elson); Peter, (Howard Gillis); Betsy, (Marian Rowe.) Other orphans, the remainder of the pupils.

Between Acts 1 and 2 "Shortnin' Bread" was sung, the chorus wearing darky masks, and following the second act Santa Claus arrived, with inglingj of bells, and was heartily welcomed by the gathering, the "Santa Claus Song" being gaily chorused by the juniors. The distribution of gifts from the tree completed an enjoyable entertainment.

DIGNITY, GRACE CHARM

By ALICE ALDEN

This season the mode is especially kind to the woman of majestic mien. She of the statuesque form can select frocks that bestow dignity, grace and charm, without bulk or heaviness. The woman of generous proportions, who is much in the public picture, has a chance to show her sisters how lovely she can look. One of our great singers, Lotte Lehmann, star of the Metropolitan Opera Company, makes a particularly pretty picture when she appears in a recital. She wears a frock of the type depicted here. This one is of sheerest uncut velvet in a clear sapphire shade. A softly-draped neckline, slim body-clinging lines and elbow-length sleeves which form a cape that can be thrown off the shoulders at will, make it a splendid choice. Diamond clips and a matching buckle add chic and just the right note of glitter.

A CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

December 24, 1938.

Friends:

Thirty years ago, Santa Claus came down the chimney; bread was five cents a loaf; a dime's worth of round steak was enough for a family of four; everyone ran to the window to see an automobile go by; and the world was going to the dogs.

Today, we hang a wire from our housetop to bring in a tune; we fly to England and back; the world is still going to the dogs; but, Santa Claus comes down the chimney in just the same old way.

It is the same spirit of friendship and goodwill which prompts us to send this message of Holiday cheer to you.

"We wish you all the peace and joy a Merry Christmas can bring and a New Year of happiness and prosperity."

On Behalf of the Entire Staff and Directors.

A Christmas tree nicely decorated followed. There was a present under the tree for each member and one by one they pulled a cord which drew forth a toy. Then the fun began. There were Donald Ducks, Mickey Mouses, clowns, etc.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. T. Alcock and her committee.

The Origin Of Yule Carols

The word carol was originally a term for a dance, or for songs intermingled with dancing. Afterwards, it came to signify festive songs, particularly such as were sung at Christmas.

In England the practice of singing Christmas carols was widely spread as early as the fifteenth century, to which date belong many of the carols printed in the collections of Ritson, Wright and Sandys. Some of these ancient carols—"Cherry Tree Carol," the "Carol of St. Stephen" and others—preserve curious legends that have descended from a remote past. Unfortunately, many of the traditional carols are not extant in early manuscript copies, and were greatly corrupted when they found their way into print.

In the second half of the eighteenth century, a Birmingham publisher, T. Bloomer, did good service by issuing (in broadside form) all the carols that came to his notice. The first printed collection of carols came from the press of Wynkyn de Worde in 1521. A unique fragment of it is extant, containing the famous "Boar's Head Carol" which is still sung at Queen's College, Oxford, on Christmas Day.

Another collection, of which only a fragment has come down, printed by Richard Kele, appeared about 1550. In Ravencroft's Melismata (1611) is found the carol "Remember O Thou Man" with musical accompaniment; and there are well-known carols of a somewhat later date among the Roxburghe Ballads.

Besides the sacred carols that were sung in the open air there were jovial carols that were sung at Christmas feasts. A small black-letter collection of these pieces was published in 1642, another in 1661, another is undated, and a fourth appeared in 1688. These collections which are of the highest rarity, contain curious specimens of the songs that were sung by shepherd and plowmen at Christmas in farm houses.

The Puritans did their best to discourage carol singing; but the practice revived at the Restoration, and continued throughout the eighteenth century. Hone, writing early in the nineteenth century, predicted that in the course of a few years Christmas carols would be heard no more. His prediction has not been fulfilled; but for some time past it has been a growing practice to sing carols in churches instead of in the open air, and the quaint carols of old days are in consequence falling out of remembrance.

Christmas Concert At Caledonian Club

A happy band of children gathered in the Paragon Hall Friday evening to celebrate the annual Christmas tree entertainment provided by the Caledonian Club for their members' children. The hall was bright and cheerful with its Christmas festoons and gaily decorated and lighted Christmas tree. A present for each child was beautifully wrapped in seasonable fashion and placed under the tree. Two long tables were laid in the centre of the hall and these were tastefully decorated with red and green streamers on a white ground. When the small guests arrived at 6.30 o'clock they were seated at these tables and waited upon by a willing band of ladies. After full justice was done to the good things provided for them the children entertained the parents and friends to a splendid program of instrumental numbers, songs and recitations under the direction of Mrs. J. Wyllie. W. Petrie made a good chairman in his usual happy style. A. Clark and Mrs. J. Harrison presided at the piano for games.

The highlight of the evening was the arrival of Santa Claus in the person of R. Hendry, dressed in the regulation suit of red and white, with a pack of toys on his back. One of the children was heard to remark that "his face is so shiny and red you would think it was a false face." After making fitting remarks to the children, he presented each of them with a gift and a bag of fruit, nuts and candies. The entertainment was successfully carried out under the convenership of Mrs. O. Sugden and Mrs. K. Shadgett, with valuable assistance from Miss Isabel Findlay and Mrs. J. Harrison.

e called for her at 8 o'clock, when she saw him she barely gnized him.

Ah—some of the faculty as— biles will be quite formal, I am ."

Yes, but—well, all right. I 't imagine anyone else will e on a tux where we are going ght, though. But no matter."

t occurred to me that I might well accustom myself to wear- it while dancing also. I have n it on certain occasions, often. I have not danced in it."

ara Sue deliberately chose the est and perhaps most demo- ic of the various dance halls to found in the Sylvan Beach area. her guess had been right—it full of seagoing men and boys, e just arrived in port, some ing their last fling before sail- The hall itself would have been excellent place to store hay, or cars, or almost anything Stripped of its bunting and tric lights and white wash, would have been exactly what name (in three-foot letters) claimed: YE OLDE BARN.

You mean, 'The gang's all ', don't you, Thorny?"

e laughed with her. He had n making some progress at hu- manizing his precise, scholarly conversation. She halted now to give him instructions.

"Dance with me a time or two, so you'll be accustomed to the place. Then take a pocketful of tickets and dance with any unat- tached girl you like, Thorny. Just go up and ask her. It's the style here. Nobody will know you. None of the Rice crowd ever comes here. That's why I suggested this place."

It was a hard dosage for him, at first.

Hard for Thornton Holgate, Ph. D., to ask a painted up little girl, whose name he didn't even know, to dance with him. But he managed it. He blushed and stam- mered, but he managed it. And danced with her reasonably well.

He didn't discover it at first, but within an hour or so he was hav- ing a corking good time. "May I have the next dance?" he would ask some pretty girl, and away he'd go! There was about this, a thrill of conquest. Such as a hunter knows when bagging choice game. Or a fisherman hooking fine bass.

It simply never occurred to Thornton that he looked like the proverbial million dollars to this crowd. He and his semi-formal clothes looked like class. He out- shone every other man present. He was distinguished looking, and act- ually handsome, now that he had left his glasses at home. His face was animated, his conversation correct but not too prim. The whole experience was tonic to him, and quite unwittingly he impressed most of the women and girls there.

By the same token, however, he also impressed the men.

A girl who said her name was Leila White introduced him to her husband.

"How do you do?" bowed Dr. Holgate.

Mr. White smelled of the sea. He weighed more than 200. His mus- cles bulged. But his eyes were wide and frank, which offset his need of a shave. "Don't never see many important people here, Holgate," he avowed. "Proud to know you."

Now that was simply, directly said, and Mr. White was dancing on away. But the sincerity of it thrilled Thornton as much as a eulogy from Dr. Lovett would have done. The young faculty man felt a warmth within him. These were mostly poor people, but good peo- ple, fine and American and devoid of sham. Proud to know you!

He danced next with a black- eyed stranger who was wearing an all-red evening gown. She clung so close that she embarrassed him. She saw that fact—and clung closer still! When she saw that people were watching them, she edged him toward the center and planted her cheek against his, clos- ing her eyes in rapture.

Dr. Holgate was appalled, but he went on dancing, looking guilti- ly for Sara Sue. He did not know it, but that was Francine Powers, head hostess for Ye Olds Barn, who liked to give important cus- tomers a thrill.

He left her when he could, and hurried to find Sara Sue. She had seen him—and just for devilment she pretended to be angry. But she couldn't keep up the pose; the hurt look in her eyes would not let her. She had to laugh.

"You're getting a lot of practice, Thornton," she assured him then. "Soon you will be absolutely at ease, in any kind of society."

"I think so," he agreed. "I am— it is actually pleasure! Mostly."

But—ah me, Thornton. One does not conquer a world in a single evening.

It is nice, to be sure, to have a burly ship worker adopt you for a friend, and not be jealous when you dance twice with his pretty wife. It is nice to have many girls admire you openly. It is even nice —in its way—to have a pretty woman dance with her cheek against yours; that is, it is a sat- isfactory sensation. But these things do not mean that a perma- nent bridge to happiness has been built.

Sara Sue Davis herself was pretty. She might well have won any contest to select the prettiest girl there. The men present were not blind to that fact. Especially was Mr. Duke O'Reilly conscious of her, immediately after he ar- rived.

Mr. O'Reilly was due to sail to- morrow for Liverpool, London and Cherbourg on a cotton freighter. Out of Houston, that would mean 21 days at sea, and 21 more com- ing back. It would be pleasent to know that a girl like that one yon- der (Sara Sue) was waiting. Mr. O'Reilly was an A. B. In Thornton Holgate's world, A. B. meant Bachelor of Arts. In Mr. O'Reilly's world, it meant able-bodied sea- man, a hard, he-man job.

There is no real need to dwell on the somewhat rapid processes by which Mr. O'Reilly worked up to the object of his desires. He simply fortified himself with a few more drinks of gin, barged up to her and said, "Chicken, you're mine. And nobody else's, see?" Un- fortunately he did it when Dr. Thornton Holgate was at Sara Sue's side.

When his leer and his liquor- breath offended her so that she de- clined to dance with him, Mr. Duke O'Reilly made some more conver- sation, and kissed her smack on the shoulder before she realized what had happened.

"Oh!" she cried, but Mr. O'Reil- ly pulled her into his arms, danc- ing. "Don't . . . don't!" she shrieked again, but Mr. O'Reilly laughed loudly and forced her on.

And Thornton Holgate, Ph. D., (who of course, earned his own A. B. before winning his doctor- ate) stood there agape, holding one hand out as if in supplication.

"I say—my gracious!" he finally managed, still staring.

Fun to Read Palms, Simple Tips Show How

Look Out for Lucky Stars

Never a dull moment when you've added palmistry to your bag of social tricks. And what a thrill to read your own hand!

Maybe you're lucky in love. If you have a star on your palm near your thumb, you are indeed.

Or are you going to be rich? If you have a long third finger and a prominent mount below, you probably will be.

And your talents! Look at your Head Line—the second line from the top of your palm, beginning below the index finger. If it swoops far down at the end—you have writing ability.

Exciting, too, to read types. To know the psychic by his long, narrow hand; the philosopher by his bony fingers. And the cold type! He who has no horizontal lines below his little finger has a heart Garbo couldn't melt.

Simple to remember these and the other palmistry tips in our 32-page booklet. And have grand fun at parties, home evenings.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of SECRETS OF PALM- ISTRY to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

DOROTHY DIX

There Is Danger In Marrying The "Perpetual Boy" Unless You Have a Strong Mother Complex And Are Willing To Forever Put Up With a Childish Attitude

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am 29 and have never got anywhere in life. Just drifted. I am not too homely, but no raving beauty. Most people ignore me except one man who wants to marry me. He is a fine chap, but he is one of the perpetual boys who will never be adult. He has no purpose in life. Shuns responsibility. Feels sorry for the fellows who carry the weight of the world on their shoul- ders. He is four years older than I, and, although he has worked since gradua- tion, he has nothing to show for it, not even anything that he has bought. His money just dribbles through his fingers without his knowing where it goes. In me he sees something really different and beautiful from what I actually am, and he could be happy with me all of his life, but what of me? Shall I marry him because I feel there is no way of finding another husband; because I feel old and frustrated myself; because, maybe, in my small way, I can help him, since we are both so much alike? GERTRUDE.

ANSWER:

The Peter Pans who never grow up are very fascinating in fiction, but when you have to deal with them in real life they shed their glamor and become the most exasperating of human beings. Childishness has its strict age limit, and the irresponsibility, the credulity that believes in Santa Claus, the lack of worldly wisdom and sophistication, the stopping of any task to play that are enchanting in the 5-year-old youngster are the traits of a moron at 50.

This is a hard and practical world, Gertrude, in which there is far more work than singing in the sun. Somebody has to shoulder responsibilities. Somebody has to bear bur- dens. Somebody has to look ahead and provide food and shelter and sustenance for every family. So I should NOT advise you to marry a man who in his thirties has still the heart and mind of a boy. That is, unless you have a bad case of the mother complex and want a child whom you can keep tied to your apron strings and lead by the hand. If you feel that way about it, go to it, and you will get your reward in his always loving you and looking up to you and depending upon you.

But don't think you can change the man. He is even as nature made him. He will never be metamorphosed into a sturdy oak. He will always be a broken reed to lean upon. You will never be able to sew up the holes in his pockets. He will always be an easy mark for all the chiselers. He will always be a weakling. And you can do nothing for him ex- cept to love him and take care of him. You can't supply him with a backbone. But he will always have his elfin, boyish charm for you—if it doesn't sour on you after years of pet- ting and coddling a six-foot infant.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX — I have been keeping steady company with a young lady and care a great deal for her, but she has a persistent habit of bragging of her conquests. She raves continually about her former boy friends; the gifts they gave her; places they took her; how crazy they were about her. She still sees them on certain occasions and tells me about it. Often when we are out together and a good-looking chap passes by she will say that she could go for him in a big way and try to attract his attention. Yet she says she loves me. Do you think it advisable to marry her under these existing conditions? STEADY.

ANSWER:

The young lady shows lack of both good taste and good sportsmanship. Also she displays an abysmal lack of know- ledge of men.

When a girl brags of her conquests to a man she is try- ing to build herself up with him and to whet his desire for her by making him believe that there are dozens of other men just dying to marry her. That if he doesn't grab her and rush with her to the altar one of her former lovers will snatch her away from him. Discount the number of pro- posals that any girl tells you she has had by 99 per cent., then you will probably guess one too many.

Girls make a great mistake when they think that they make a hit with men when they tell them of their former sweethearts. It scares them off, for every man knows that his scalp will be the next she will display, and it makes him get away from her as fast as he can stumble on his frozen feet.

Making a man jealous is neither the best way to win him or to hold him, and a man takes a great risk in marrying a girl who is always throwing some other man in his teeth.

DEAR MISS DIX—I have a married son whose wife has never called me "Mother," which hurts me very much. She treats me well, but never says the one little word that would make me feel so happy and have a different feeling toward her. She expects to be a mother soon and what worries me is that after the child is able to talk I know she will call me Grandma herself, and I don't want that. I want her to call me Mother. My son calls her mother "Mom" and other girls call their mothers-in-law "Mother." How can I get her to do it? MOTHER.

ANSWER:

Perhaps if she reads your letter and knows how much stress you put upon her calling you Mother she will do so. Certainly it is a little thing to do if it will make happy the woman who has given her a good husband.

It is queer that brides who call their fathers-in-law "Dad" or "Pop" or "the Governor" or whatever their hus- bands call their fathers seem to find an embarrassment in calling their mothers-in-law "Mother" or "Mamma." Cer- tainly this betrays no ill-will on their part or lack of affec- tion. It is some vocal hurdle that they don't seem able to take. I have known dozens of young women who simply called their mothers-in-law "you," or waited to catch their eyes before speaking to them until their first child was born and they could take refuge in "grandma."

It is a small matter, but I think many other women be- sides the one who writes this letter would like to have their daughters-in-law claim kin with them, and the fact that their daughters-in-law always call them "Mrs." keeps them from ever having a real mother feeling toward them.

New tobacco shade in Havana- brown woollen makes this popular "monastic" silhouette dress with slim buttoned-down-the-front clos- ing, nipped-in waistline and wide full skirt. The little girl collar is yellow wool. A self-fabric belt holds the fullness in at the waistline of this one-piece circular dress. A con- trasting yellow suede belt to match the collar would also be smart. GOODNIGHT STORY

NOW THE only way I have for knowing that this story is true is that Knarf, the shadow-boy, told me so. Perhaps it is, perhaps it isn't. You'll have to decide that for your- self.

It was the night before Christ- mas. Sure enough, not a single crea- ture was stirring, not even a mouse. All except Knarf. He made up his mind to slip quietly down-stairs and have another look at the Christmas tree. So he glanced in the bed where the little boy he belonged to was sleeping. He had a smile on his face (for he was just then dreaming of Santa Claus and of all the fine presents he was to bring to him be- fore the morning). Then the shadow glided without a sound out of the room, and down the steps until he reached the big room where the Christmas tree was standing.

Knarf was admiring the tree when all at once his attention was attract- ed by three little stockings hanging from the mantel over the fireplace. One stocking belonged to Dinah and the other belonged to her brother, Frank. But the third was a very old stocking and had a big hole in the toe and didn't seem to belong to anybody.

Knarf crept very close. He heard two little voices. The first two stock- ings were talking to each other.

The first stocking said: "I'm wait- ing here for Santa Claus to come down the chimney and fill me up with presents for my little mistress."

"I'm waiting here for Santa Claus, too," answered the second stocking. "Santa is going to fill me up with presents for the little boy who owns me."

At this the third stocking, which was hanging a little apart from the other two, said eagerly: "I'm also waiting for Santa Claus. But I'm not sure whether he'll put a present in me. I hope he does."

"Humph!" said the first stocking. "It's plain to me that he won't. You've got a big hole in your toe."

The little torn stocking sighed. "I'm afraid you're right. Oh!—that will be terrible if I'm found empty tomorrow morning."

"Whose stocking are you anyway?" the second stocking asked.

"Just the furnace-man's little girl. I'm the only stocking she had left over to hang up for Santa Claus. How disappointed she'll be to find I have no present for her on Christ- mas morning." And it sighed again.

Then the moon went away and the room was in darkness. Knarf couldn't see the stockings any more. So he went upstairs very sadly, for he couldn't help wondering what Santa would do when he saw the torn stocking.

So the first thing in the morning, just as the sun came up, he rushed downstairs. And what do you sup- pose he found in the torn stocking? A kitten! And the kitten's tail was sticking right through the hole in the toe.

Christmas Finds British Troopers Holding Christ's Birthplace

(By the Canadian Press)

The Holy Land of Christianity faced the anniversary of the birth of Jesus tonight was the promise of the peace for which He lived and died apparently still remote.

The cables from Bethlehem, where Christ was born nearly 20 centuries ago, and from Jerusalem, told of the sputtering of airplane motor, the presence of 20,000 British soldiers, equipped with machine-guns, rifles, tanks on the alert for outbreaks of terrorism or disorders.

It was the third successive Christmas on which Palestine's celebration of the holiday was troubled by strife between Jews and Arabs, both claiming the country as their homeland—with Great Britain seeking to act as policeman and mediator under its League of Nations mandate.

This year the depression and sadness in the Holy Land have become increasingly acute with the advent of Christmas. Because of the bloodshed and racial strife, there is an almost complete absence of pilgrims and tourists, placing many agencies on the verge of bankruptcy. Thousands are in need, and the general feeling about the future is pessimistic.

Leaders of both the Arab and Jewish causes look with hope to the projected Anglo-Arab-Jewish conference to be held in London next month but fear it may provide no conclusion to the story of arson, pillage, assassination, kidnapping, bombing and guerrilla warfare that has been unfolding in Palestine for nearly three years.

No More Jews.

Arab leaders are holding out for a full stop to Jewish immigration into Palestine and have refused to alter their stand, despite the persecution of Jews in Germany and Central Europe. The Arabs also seek nullification of the Balfour declaration which promised creation in Palestine of a homeland for the Jews.

Prominent Jews declare that if the London conference is to be attended by any degree of success it must begin with acceptance of the Balfour declaration and permit an increased flow of Jews into Palestine.

Nearly 2,000 years ago, the three Wise Men of the East left Jerusalem for the birthplace of Jesus at Bethlehem carrying gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh to lay at the feet of the Prince of Peace. Over the same road tomorrow will travel truckloads of British soldiers to guard against any disturbance on the Holy Night.

In Bethlehem, the effigy of the new-born Christ will be carried from the convent of St. Catherine to the site of the manger in the Church of the Nativity, while the ancient ceremony is being performed, khaki-clad troops will be garrisoned in the cloisters of the adjoining church.

THE ROAD TO BETHLEHEM

United Church of Canada.
By the Right Rev. John W. Woodside, D.D., Moderator.

When the shepherds in the Judaean fields first heard the glad tidings and listened to the angels' song, they took God at His word. In swift and glorious decision they said one to another, "Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass." The generations have been following that shining trail. The artists, the poets and the story-tellers, the philosophers and the theologians, the common folk and the children have been journeying to Bethlehem in expectant faith.

And yet there have been times in which Christians must have found it well-nigh impossible to make that pilgrimage, moods in which they must have felt that if they went at all it would be with clouded vision and heavy hearts. For many of us the present may appear to be one of these. We seem just now to be "in the bleak midwinter"—the midwinter of disillusion and discontent. Fears of the unknown make life miserable for millions of people in all lands today. The stark tragedy of war leaves its horrible trail of death and suffering even across the road to Bethlehem. Hymns of hate too often take the place of the angels' song. Class is being incited against class, race against race, in a discouraging and degrading spectacle.

But we who believe in God know that there is another side to the picture even at this moment. We know that the spirit and ideal revealed to the shepherds at Bethlehem is alive and active, and steadily gaining ground in our day. We know that over again the man-made tide that threatens to overwhelm all the finer things of life there is a tide of God, deep and strong, which will surely carry this distracted world out of the darkness into the realms of amity and peace.

We see in the Divine Child who came to Bethlehem an incarnation of the Good Will which lies back of all the frightening, changing scenes in which we play our part. And if the men ask a reason for the faith that is in us, we have convincing proof of our belief. The trends of the world are towards unity. Beyond any doubt it is dawning on the mind of humanity that there is no hope or prospect of stability or prosperity which is not based on a common loyalty embracing all mankind. War is not inevitable; nor is violent overthrow of the social order. The "home-sickness of the muan soul for justice, liberty and brotherhood" is not merely the sign of a universal demand for far-reaching changes; it is also the sign of a hope and a belief that the changes may be brought about in an atmosphere of peace and not of strife.

The friendly way in which the various Churches are drawing closer to each other is expressive of the deepening faith and widening purpose that will unite more firmly all the forces making for righteousness. As never before, the Churches are coming to have one conscience; and that conscience is uneasy over everything in our social or political systems that injures human personality.

Beyond all questioning, deep and strong tides of goodwill are surging in the heart of humanity. People want to be friendly, to live and let live. No one will ever persuade us that the majority of the citizens, even in any of the militaristic states, really want war. We know that they do not. Nor will any one persuade us to believe that all rich men want to grind the faces of the poor, or that the poor are but waiting the opportunity to despoil their more fortunate neighbours. The wininng forces in the world today are not greed and selfishness, working by brute force. Goodwill and friendliness, "the trade-winds of the universe," are stronger than any of us have yet begun to realize.

And so, in the Advent season of 1938 we take the road to Bethlehem again, the white road marked by the fotsteps of the faithful through the ages. And we go, not with clouded vision or heavy hearts, but with confidence and joyous elation, affirming our ideal of a world kingdom of peace and goodwill and acclaiming our share in its realization. We believe in humanity because we believe in God. And we believe in God because of what the shepherds heard on the Judaean plains and saw in the manger at Bethlehem. The lack of goodwill is the ultimate heresy; its cultivation and flowering is the only kind of religion that will count at the Judgment Day.

Cordova School Presents Concert

CORDOVA MINES, Dec. 24—A very enjoyable evening was spent Wednesday night when the school put on their annual concert. Plays and songs composed mostly by the pupils in each grade, made the entertainment more pleasing. The hall was packed to the doors.

A goodly number from Marmora were present, also many from Havelock. The program was as follows: Opening chorus, senior room; welcome address by Don McQuigge; welcome recitation, Doreen Woodbeck; play by junior room; orchestra; play by Grade V, "Cosette"; play by Grade VI, "Rabbitt's Trick"; reading by B. Ysereef; play by Grade VI. "Mad Tea Party"; dialogue, junior room "Waiting for Santa"; play by Grade VII, "The Travelling Man"; a teddy bear drill by senior room; play by Grade IX, "Queen Catharine Par"; play by Grade VIII, "Scrooge's Christmas"; gymnastics by boys of the school. Besides several musical numbers were played by Mr. Cliff Briggs and John Edwards, Don Plunkett and dancing by two Havelock girls. Community singing was enjoyed after which teachers made a few remarks. "Silent Night" by the junior room chorus.

Santa Claus arrived on the scene with all his little admirers yelling heartily.

Shag Dancer Branded On Verge Of Insanity

DETROIT, Dec. 24 — (CP). — Scientists tossed up their hands in dismay, baffled in their attempts to determine if a jitterbug is feebleminded, insane or merely someone who likes to dance.

Kenneth Drurie, hailed by Benny Goodman, orchestra leader, as the fastest shag dancer in the world, appeared in court here facing 14 traffic violations. Judge George T. Murphy ordered a mental examination.

The report on Drurie's mental condition held he was a "border-line feeble-minded boy," but not insane.

"The only hope that we can have relative to keeping him out of trouble is by allowing him to give vent to his exhibitionistic compensations by means of his dancing," the report continued.

"As long as he is so egocentric, inferior, infantile, excitable and undependable, every effort should be made to keep him out of a motor car."

Bonarlaw Pupils Enjoy Concert

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BONARLAW, DEC. 24. — It has been a number of years since the old 12th Line school-house has enjoyed such a grand concert as took place there Tuesday night, when the school was packed to the doors with people from Belleville, Madoc, Campbellford and Stirling. The teacher, Mr. Lorne Johnson, is to be congratulated, as the program was one everybody enjoyed.

The Rev. Canon Swayne acted as chairman, and in his usual jovial manner spoke of the great work of the teacher and pupils. The music teacher, Mr. Morris of Toronto, was present for the first part of the evening and he spoke of the great advantage of having music taught in the school at large.

The Christmas tree was heavily laden with beautiful things for the children who anxiously awaited the arrival of old St. Nick.

Mr. Johnson spoke in a very appropriate manner. This is Mr. John's first year as teacher and all feel that he has a splendid future ahead of him and wish him every success.

Concert Is Presented In Victoria Church

HAVELOCK, Dec. 24.—The pupils of Victoria School, S.S. No. 3, Belmont, their parents and friends assembled in the Victoria Methodist church, Tuesday evening for the annual Christmas concert. Gaily decorated for the occasion, a great Christmas tree occupied a prominent spot in front of the room, which itself was bedecked in appropriate Christmas colors. To the joyous shouts of the boys and girls, good old Kris Kringle appeared during the evening to hand out a goodly number of presents.

Numbers which the pupils have been busy practising for quite some time unde rthe direction of their teacher, Mr. James Weir, were presented as follows: Recitation, Roy Dafoe; song, Happy Greeting; dialogue, "Fooling Aunt Julia"; recitation, Alfred Aulthouse; dialogue, "Disappointing Dinah"; recitation, Reta Dafoe, "Advice to the Lovelorn" song, "Christmas Time"; recitation, Reta Quackenbush"; musical selections, Randall and Bernice Ellis; dialogue, "The Party Line"; recitation, Annie Quackenbush; dialogue, "An Unpractical Joke"; recitation, Mildred King; dialogue, "Jimmy's Unlucky Morning"; recitation, Bernice Ellis; carol, "Away in a Manger."

Out For Christmas

VANCOUVER, Dec. 24 — (CP.)— A young infantile paralysis victim who has spent several months in a Vancouver hospital's iron lung, will be out of the apparatus for Christmas dinner on Sunday. The young man, whose name was withheld, was 21 in September. He's looking forward to turkey with all the trimminds during the four hours he can spend out of the machine.

Dominion's Guardians Of Health Keep Sharp Eye On All Foods

OTTAWA, Dec. 24—(CP). — The Dominion Department of Agriculture has an eye on your stomach. Guardians of the public health, the department's inspectors keep a close watch on the food that makes its way to the nation's dining room table.

White-coated inspectors maintain hawk-eyed vigilance in slaughter houses to make sure that victims of the butcher's knife were healthy animals and birds and free from the taint of tuberculosis or other diseases. The rubber stamp on the flesh "Canada approved" is a gilt-edge guarantee of healthy meat.

The official eye pries ceaselessly into shipments of fruits and vegetables moving from one province to another or across the Dominion's borders bound for Canadian markets. The fruits and vegetables must pass rigid tests. And the grade or quality must be clearly marked for all consumers to read.

Agents of the department in foreign countries scrutinize inspection services there and make their own investigations before such countries are permitted to ship food to Canada. It is not a matter of red tape but a most thorough system of protection of the health of hungry Canadians.

Canned foods come under rigid inspection for purity, quality and grading. Jams for instance, must contain certain percentages of pure fruit with the pectin, or apple frure, used to provide bulk. Jam labelled "pure jam," however, must be canned in their own juice without addition of water.

Size Also Checked

The canned goods are regulated as to size as well as purity, and the department sees that manufacturers live up to regulations. Department employees make purchases from time to time at corner groceries, chain stores and markets, and dip into large shipments for samples. Contents of tins are inspected and weighed, and if weight and quality do not conform to regulations there is swift action.

There is little prosecution in the courts. The department has a deadlier weapon—whole shipments are held up until they conform to regulations. This last year the department held up some 300,000 cases of canned foods for a variety of infractions, and there were heavy losses for the offending shippers.

Ethical manufacturers, of course, realize the marketing advantage of rigid inspection and uniform standards of size and quality and are ready to co-operate.

The department is out to protect the public, and does a thorough job Grading of foods is perhaps almost as important as purity from the consumer's standpoint. Housewives can tell just what they are buying by looking at the department's grading stamp.

Fear Seabiscuit Has Gone The Way Of All Good Handicap Horses

COLUMBIA, S.C., Dec. 24—(AP)—The Columbia State said last night Seabiscuit, quartered here, had "gone the way of all handicap horses — the lame way."

"He's through," the newspaper said. "His age and the youth of his two closest competitors, Stagehand and The Admiral (War Admiral), have combined to bring about frustration of his owner's ambition, namely, to make the 'Biscuit the champion money winner of all time.

"He's probably got enough left in him to win a prep race or two, but when it comes to the big-time contests, where he has youth weight, age and lameness to contend with, he won't make the grade."

Meanwhile Seabiscuit, in his stall at the Buxton brothers' winter training quarters here, had his legs swathed in bandages. The fore legs were bound almost to his shoulders, but Trainer Tom Smith would not talk. When asked why his charge's legs were so completely wrapped, he replied facetiously that "they're broken, all four of 'em."

Jolly Fairview Event Fills Hall

(Examiner Correspondence.)

FAIRVIEW, Dec. 24.—The annual community Christmas concert was held in Fairview church Thursday evening and given by the pupils of S.S. No. 11 and 4. The church was packed to the door and the audience witnessed a program of very high order, with much credit due the teachers, Misses Anne Franks and Olive Day.

The most pleasing feature at the close of the program just before Santa Claus arrived to distribute the presents from the tree was when the chairman, Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, asked the pupils of S.S. No. 4 and their teacher, Miss Annie Franks to take the platform.

Miss Franks, who has resigned her duties as teacher of No. 4 for the past nine and one half years to take up a new sphere of life, was asked to come forward and an address was read by Mr. George Lockington stating the stirling qualities of Miss Franks and her great success as a teacher. Two pupils, Meryl Cockburn and Ross McNaughton, presented their teacher with a beautiful walnut Chesterfield table on behalf of Section 4.

Miss Franks, though completely taken by surprise, thanked everyone for the lovely gift and for their kindness to her during her term of teaching.

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—(CP)—The youngsters at the Loyal True Blue and Orange Home at Richmond Hill, Ont., 20 miles north of Toronto, won't have their usual big, gay and noisy Christmas party this year... It was enough to shatter the children's faith in Santa when a minor outbreak of measles and scarlet fever forced attending physicians to place the home under quarantine...

Each year the children are hosts to friends and relatives for the party ...This time 115 youngsters will have a quiet party among themselves...

Christmas falls on Sunday for the first time since 1932 ..and for the first time since then Canada's morning newspapermen will have a holiday. Christmas-Eve night...About 2,000 reporters, printers and deskmen on 20 morning dailies get the break...

But policemen in the larger cities have no such luck...Officials have waged the strongest campaign ever to reduce holiday accidents and extra policemen will patrol streets to keep a stern eye on traffic violators ...Financially, Sunday Christmas isn't so good for churches...Instead of two services and two collections, one donation will take care of both days...

Canada's guests of the government in prison will get special Christmas dinners...But no turkey...Young pork with all the trimmings will be the main dish...Pity the poor National Hockey League players who must toil Christmas night...Three games are scheduled with Canadiens, Detroit, Chicago, Americans, Rangers and Boston trying to celebrate with victories...

Toronto storekeepers report more expensive gifts are being bought this year...One wealthy Torontonian bought three members of hisf amily an auto each...And the cars were in the high-price list...Christmas color scheme will be predominantly green...Only parts of Ontario and the Maritimes seem likely to have sufficient snow to make it a white Christmas...

White or green it will be a merrier Christmas for Canadians than citizens of most European countries will be able to enjoy...

"The Authority on Authorities"

A WELCOME PRESENT

There is no more welcome present to a bridge player than getting doubled at a contract which he can redouble and make. One splendid way to invite such gifts is to bid for a no trump game when holding a long solid minor suit which you have never shown to the opponents. That is, of course, only when you believe the other suits are probably well enough stopped to keep the enemy from a long run before your get into the lead.

Some interesting didoes were cut on this deal, submitted by Harry Adler of Trenton, New Jersey. After East opened with 1-Club, South disdained to reveal his suit with some number of diamonds, but doubled instead. West, apparently hoping to lure South into some kind of a spade bid, made a weakness call over the double, 1-Heart. After North and East passed this, South doubled again.

This time West decided to bid his spades at one, whereupon North got into it with a double, which East passed. South's next call of 3-No Trump would have shocked many players if they had been kibitzing, but it was not as unfounded as may appear.

North's double of spades had surely shown them stopped, plus something else in his hand. The something else could not very well be in hearts in view of West's bid and South's own holding. Likewise it could not possibly be in diamonds. It must be in clubs.

That's the way it turned out. East saw fit to double the 3-No Trumps, but South redoubled and a club was led, producing nine consecutive tricks for the declarer.

WHERE CREDIT IS DUE

IT IS NOT merely kind to give the opponents credit when credit is due them. It is also winning bridge, much more profitable in the long run than berating yourself and partner for not achieving the maximum result on a deal and thereby upsetting your side's morale. On many an occasion the bidding done by the other fellows makes it impossible for you to send as many messages across the table as you would like to.

This deal, furnished by C. B. Malchow of the Kearsarge Inn at Warner, New Hampshire, was put into the boards of a New York City duplicate game to see if anybody would arrive at the grand slam contract in spades which can be made by North and South against any defense. Not one pair—among them some very fine players—arrived at even 6-Spades.

In all cases East opened with 1-Heart, and subsequent bidding varied only slightly. Usually South overcalled with 1-Spade, West bid 2-Hearts, North 3-Clubs, East 3-Hearts, South 3-Spades, West 4-Hearts and North 4-Spades, which became the contract.

North might have figured that, with the splendid fit shown by the opponents in hearts, his own four cards there guaranteed that his partner had one or none. He might have read that for his overcall his partner might have had the club ace, but that would have been rather presumptive. However, of course seven were made, by ruffing one diamond and discarding two of them on the clubs.

Tomorrow's Problem

If West leads the heart K, switches to the club 2 to the A, and East returns the heart Q, how should South play for 5-Diamonds?

MORE ABOUT—

Vote On New Year's

seven of those nominated were present and one of them William S. Johnson declined to speak.

Ald. Herbert Bradburn, the first speaker, said that he had decided to stand for re-election and that he felt the experience he had gained during the present year had been of some benefit to him and would enable him to serve the citizens more fully and satisfactorily if he were re-elected.

"It will be my aim," said the speaker, "to see that the tax rate is kept as low as possible. I am sure no one is in a frame of mind to want to go ahead with large expenditures."

Ald. Bradburn said that while his year's experience had taught him that it was not so easy as he had thought to secure new industries he felt that Peterborough had many natural advantages for manufacturers and with the co-operation of all the council and the citizens generally progress should be made. Ald. Bradburn expressed himself as heartily in favor of the foot bridge over the Quaker Oats dam.

Thomas Littlefair

Thomas Littlefair said that he was standing for election at the request of many south end residents. "We have felt," said he. "that the south ward and the east ward have not been fully represented in council and that it is not a good thing to have all the aldermen living in one or two wards."

Mr. Littlefair expressed himself strongly in favor of a return to the ward system. "Aldermen have no monopoly on brains," he said as he went on to advocate paving being done by the municipality instead of being laid under the contract system, and to urge municipal ownership in general. "We have to be federal-minded and provincial-minded but I think first we should be municipal-minded," the speaker added.

W. Gordon Powell

"We have just had another sunshine budget," said W. Gordon Powell. "They tell us about keeping down the tax rate but they fail to tell us about increasing the restaurant licenses by 100 per cent and even regulating and licensing garages. Before long it may be necessary to regulate and license the legal profession."

Arguing that democratic administration could only come from a representative group Mr. Powell said that the present council was not in touch with everyday life. He paid his respects to "a person who sends men snooping around merchants on Sunday to tempt men to break the law so that he may condemn them publicly afterward."

"If there is to be a change in the chairmanship of the relief committee and you are elected to council," asked Charles Holland, "Would you accept that chairmanship?"

Mr. Powell replied that in his opinion the wisest course was to retain what was best of the old with what was desirable in the new. A new comer to the council might be diffident about accepting such a position but he felt that a progressive voice in any body would always be heard.

Ald. Herb. McCannan

Ald. Herb. McCannan said that for several reasons and none of them for selfish purposes he had decided to stand for re-election. Thanks to the co-operation given him as chairman by the members of the property committee that committee was finishing the year $2,000 under its appropriation for the year and at the same time a lowered garbage tax had been made possible.

He was in favor of paying-as-you-go and avoiding the issuing of new debentures. Ald. McCannan pointed out that there were 700 vacant lots in Peterborough that had sewer and water service and stressed what it would mean to the city to have those lots built upon.

"I favor placing enough in the estimates to pay the salary of an industrial commissioner," said Ald. McCannan, "and I believe I know the man for the job."

"I do not wish to reflect in any way on the good work which has been done by past councils in securing new industries but at the present time it is more difficult to land new concerns and for this reason a greater effort should be made to secure them.

"In regard to building the bridge over the Quaker Oats Co. dam, I am whole-heartedly behind this project as I believe it to be a necessity and if I am chosen again as one of your councillors will do all in my power to bring about its completion.

"I do not wish to say anything more at the present time other than if I am re-elected I will strive in every way possible to reduce taxes by lowering the mill rate and to bring about conditions such as will aid employment and improve the general welfare of our city.

"I should also like to congratulate James Hamilton on being elected Mayor of Peterborough by acclamation for a second term and may I add, he is the same good natured fellow to work with as was his late father, Peter Hamilton, who I believe was a member of the Board of Education for 25 years and for whom I worked when a boy for a period of six years, serving my time as machinist with the Peter Hamilton Company.

"There are many other things I might speak about in connection with the council work, but I do not think it necessary at the present time so will conclude wishing one and all a very merry Christmas and happy New Year."

F. H. Kearney

Francis H. Kearney announced his intention of allowing his name to go on the ballots. "We in Ashburnham," he said, "deplore the lack of a representative in council. I think we should have one." Mr. Kearney said that if he were elected he would do his utmost to serve the whole city, to keep the tax rate down and to support every good measure. "It is not necessary for me to say that I favor the footbridge," he said.

Fred Dainton asked the speaker how many people the footbridge would benefit.

"The whole city," replied Mr. Kearney.

"What if the C.N.R. denies us passage over their property?" Mr. Dainton asked.

"The property at the Ashburnham side of the dam belongs to the Quaker Oats Company." The C.N.R. doesn't own a foot of it," returned the Ashburnham nominee.

James S. Matthews

James S. Matthews, the last speaker began by stating he was not going to make any promises. "I am not going to answer any questions,' he added amid laughter. "I am not going to criticize the present administration—openly. I am not sure whether I can qualify but if I can and I decide to run I will hand in my qualifications.

"—and on earth peace, good will toward men."

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And, lo, the Angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

And the Angel said unto them, fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the City of David a saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; ye shall find the Babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the Angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the Angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary and Joseph, and the Babe lying in a manger. —Luke II:8-16.

incomes may be considerable, but they will get home for Christmas.

There is not another day in the year which possesses that same urge to go home; the journey may be long and travelling conditions tiresome; the time left to remain at home may be short, but they will be able to say as they have said in other years "I was home for Christmas," and the mother and father will be able to repeat "The children were home for Christmas."

There's something in it which proclaims in indelible though unwritten letters that the heart beats happy and the home ties have not been severed.

1939 to eliminate the dump ground nuisance.

"I suggested the nominations be held in this court room but I guess the bright lights of George street stole our crowd," he said.

He reviewed the work which had been accomplished during the year by the Peterborough County Council on roads, during which time he was chairman of the Road Committee. He voiced approval of mulch paving contending the saving in upkeep and the added comfort to users of the road justified any extra expense in construction as against gravel roads.

John Barnes said the council had worked efficiently and in harmony during the past year. He promised the same rigid policy of economy would guide them in 1939.

W. J. Grady introduced by Bruce Johnston as one of the two junior members on the council said it was evident the ratepayers were satisfied with the work done.

"We were fortunate in having two tight fisted Scots on the Council who were as careful with the ratepayers money as they are with their own, and as a result a great deal was done at little cost," he said.

"It is the aim of the Council to have every ratepayer a satisfied customer at the end of the year," said Mr. Grady. He described the paving as a sound investment and added that every resident on the streets which had been given a mulch surface were happy because the dust nuisance had been done away with and a very good road provided. He expressed the hope conditions would permit a little of this being done every years.

"We are in a happy position in having a man like Bruce Johnston as clerk," said Alex Archibald to the other member of the Council. "Time and again he has checked us up when we attempted to spend more than we should, and I feel the Council owes him a hearty vote of thanks."

Mr. Archibald approved of the idea of employing a full time police officer in the township. He said having a man on part time work had been a decided improvement over the old system but he felt further improvement might be made if a police officer were on full time. He said further that he had been able to convince his fellow members on the Council that poll tax should be abolished.

"We need men like Reeve Milby and deputy-reeve Johnston in municipal life today. These two men are careful with the taxpayers' money.

Yuletide Toll Takes 11 Ontario Lives

Safety Campaign Gets Major Credit For Holiday Decrease

TORONTO, Dec. 27 — (CP). — Lowest number of Yuletide fatalities in several years, 11 persons died in traffic accidents throughout Ontario during the long holiday week-end. A campaign to reduce accidents at the Christmas holiday season was given much credit for the decrease. Snow, cold and poor visibility combined to make driving dangerous in some sections of the province.

Three of the victims were Detroit residents. They died in the flaming wreckage of an automobile at Maidstone, 12 miles east of Windsor, Saturday night.

A New York Central Railway flyer struck the rear end of the auto as it crossed the tracks. The car caught fire and exploded. Victims were Mrs. Evelyn Gillespie, 31; her 12-year-old son, Donald, and John Rubin Dean, 34.

The vigorous campaign waged in Toronto to reduce traffic acidents resulted in one death compared to three in 1937. Robert Bird, 15-year-old messenger boy, was killed when he was knocked from his bicycle, and crushed beneath wheels of a wagon cart Sunday.

There were 56 accidents reported to Toronto police Saturday and Sunday, compared to 107 last year, and the number of injured was 24 compared to 79 in 1937.

Two Victims of Radial.

Only traffic deaths Monday were reported from Welland where Charles E. H. Thomas, 53-year-old master at Ridley College, St. Catharines, and his wife were killed when their car was struck by a radial car. The Thomas' 16-year-old son Roy escaped with minor injuries.

Other deaths:

Leamington—David Radekop was killed when struck by car while walking on wrong side of street Christmas eve.

Cornwall—Hugh O'Reilly, 37, killed when the car he was riding in somersaulted over a 12-foot bank on the ice of Black River.

Owen Sound—John Blair, 60, received injuries Saturday night that led to his death shortly after he and a companion who suffered cuts and bruises were struck by a car.

MERRITTON—Mrs. Fred Trowbridge killed when struck by car as she was crossing a street with her husband, who suffered head injuries.

Falls down stairs and monoxide poisoning accounted for four more deaths. A post mortem examination showed Hiram W. Morris, 87, and his 52-year-old daughter, Margaret, whose bodies were found in their London home Sunday, died from carbon monoxide gas poisoning. A faulty furnace was blamed.

Mrs. Bessie Woodhouse, 78, of Forest and Joseph Serunas, 42, of St. Thomas died after falls.

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)

FAITHFUL MARY, who backslid 17 months ago and called Father Divine "Jes' a foolish old man who ain't no more God than a bobtailed puppy" has been reconciled with the little self-proclaimed messiah of Harlem.

Mary, known as Viola Wilson before she became the ace angel of the No. 1 heaven, tried to run a rival heaven of her own when she abandoned Father Divine, but it was never much of a go.

Next Sunday, in a robe of spotless white, Mary will make public confession at a meeting of the angels and others who follow Father Divine in the great "peace, brother" movement.

Missed By Guide Indians Die Safety At Hand

WINNIPEG, Dec. 27.—(CP)— Details of a grim battle against a northland blizzard, fought on the south shore of Hudson Bay, 500 miles from Sioux Lookout, Ont., were related by R. C. Carson, young Hudson's Bay Company factor, of Weenusk who arrived here today.

Trapped by the sudden storm, four Indians—two women and two children—members of a party of nine, perished on the ice almost in sight of the little trading post to which they were headed for Christmas celebrations.

Short of food, the Indians had started for the trading post earlier than usual from their camp 75 miles distant. For several days they had little to eat. A camp was established and Ben Matthews, an Indian trapper heading the party, pushed on ahead with dog team to secure supplies at the post.

Shortly after Matthews left on the return journey, Carson said, the blizzard came up. That was December 13.

"Like the snap of a finger, the storm whipped over the Bay," added the factor. "Matthews was travelling with it and made camp safely but his party had left."

Heading into the blizzard, the Indian trapper had made camp in 12-hours, carrying a two weeks' supply of provisions.

Finds Wife, Family frozen

He faced back along the train and eight miles from Weenusk discovered the tragedy Dec. 15.

He found his young wife, two children and his mother-in-law dead. Nearby were huddled his 60-year-old father-in-law, David Kataquabet, exhausted, suffering from frost bites and exposure, and the four other children—three girls and a boy. The children were unharmed by the icy blasts, protected by a canvass shelter which the aged Kataquabet had erected.

The two children, both girls, one two years old; the other six, died in their mother's arms. She had huddled them close to her body before death ended their suffering.

Matthews brought word of the tragedy to Factor Carson and an Indian rescue party was sent to the scene, the survivors were brought to Weenusk and later the victims' bodies were brought in.

French Fear Attack On Djibouti

Paris Warns Invasion Will Send Poilus After Tripoli

Paris, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Dispatches from North Africa today reported Italy was massing troops on the frontiers of French Somaliland.

French Colonial officials expressed fears this might be the start of a campaign to threaten Djibouti, French Somaliland port on the Red Sea which is the only rail outlet for Italy's Ethiopian Empire.

Travellers reaching Egypt from Djibouti, said dispatches to the French press, reported the governor of Djibouti had demanded and obtained troops and naval reinforcements from France.

Foreign office officials said they were unable to confirm or deny these reports. Previously the political commentator Pertinax had published reports that seasoned Italian troops had replaced native levies in that part of Ethiopia bordering on French Somaliland.

French To Show Teeth.

The fears for Djibouti were reported to have inspired a plan to show Premier Mussolini what formidable forces France can muster in Tunisia, bordering on his own Libya.

The French general staff, informed sources said, has arranged a powerful display of fast French motorized forces for an inspection trip next month by Premier Edouard Daladier in Tunisia, French North African protectorate.

These units, military sources said, should serve to remind the Italian premier that he must count on the defence of Tripoli, capital of Italian Libya, should he threaten Djibouti, Sed Sea port in French Somaliland and terminus of the railway to Italian Ethiopia.

A large part of the French Mediterranean fleet is scheduled to greet the premier with thunderous salutes when he goes to Corsica, French Mediterranean island department, and Tunisia early in January.

Reports that the Italian leader was considering a quick military move to seize Djibouti in hopes he could get it without war were published by Pertinax, political commentator, in the newspaper L'Orde.

Veterans Replace Tribesmen.

He cited reports from Ethiopia that the Italians there were conducting a violent anti-French campaign among the natives and also published reports that veteran troops had relieved untrained tribesmen who heretofore have mounted guard in Western Ethiopia.

The French press recently has united in pointing out that Djibout is almost defenceless against the superior Italian military strength in Eritrea and Ethiopia.

The French general staff, however, was believed to count on the superior French strength in Tunisia, Algeria and Morocco to show Mussolini that Djibouti would prove to be a poor exchange for Tripoli.

Something The General Did Not See

When General Viscount Gort, chief of the British Imperial general staff, inspected the gentlemen cadets of the Royal Military Academy at Woodwich recently, here's something he didn't see. While the great man was at the other end of the line of gentlemen soldiers, the cadet at this end, overcome by stage fright, staged an old-fashioned swoon. The other well-trained gentlemen never batted an eye, leaving it to the end man to haul away the swooner before General Gort would have to step over him.

Chicken Fancier Tries Showgirl As Bride Takes Her Honeymooning After Leopards

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)

FAR FROM the noisy Broadway night club haunts that once hailed him, Phil Plant, the Connecticut chicken fancier, is taking his bride of a week to Africa for a quiet honeymoon hunting leopards.

The one-time playboy heir to a $15,000,000 fortune and the former Marjorie King, showgirl — now the third Mrs. Plant — are going to do the veldt in style. They will "rough it" in a trailer equipped with electric refrigeration.

Plant said monkeys and leopards collected by him and his wife on the expedition would be used to complete the late Carl Ackley's collection in the American Museum of Natural History. They sailed yesterday on the Normandie.

Gales Pile Snow Across Province Plug Roads, Cut Power, More Cold, Blizzards On Way

TORONTO, Dec. 27 (CP)—The worst snowstorm of the winter, born by winds of near gale velocity, blew over Ontario today leaving in its wake snow-blocked highways and railways, crippled communication and power systems and minor property damage. The forecast was for "much colder" weather and continued gales.

Almost every section of the province was hit. From the east came reports of a six-inch snowfall that turned to rain. Blizzards blew over most of western Ontario and in the north, necessitating the calling out of highway and railway snowploughs. A 40-mile gale and intermittent blizzards blew down the Niagara peninsula.

Industry was halted in Owen Sound when a terrific sleet storm cut off the city's power supply from the Eugenia Falls power plant 30 miles distant. Factories closed shortly after re-opening after the extended Christmas week-end. The city was without electricity for lighting or other purposes.

The 50-mile-an-hour wind blew down telegraph wires leading into Owen Sound and the city's only communication with other centres was by telephone. Telegraph wires also were blown down at Niagara Falls and other peninsula cities. Many automobiles were struck in snowdrifts.

Hits Christmas Traffic

The storm struck last night when the flow of homeward bound Christmas highway traffic was at its heaviest. It continued today with no indication of an immediate let-up. Numerous highway accidents were reported. The storm was blamed for a collision near Welland between a radial car and a motor-car in which Mr. and Mrs. C. Thomas were killed.

Heavy winds—but no snow—blew over Toronto during the night and early today. First reports indi-

Two Babies Are Born On Christmas Day In Nicholls Hospital

CHRISTMAS MORN saw two Peterborough babies brought into the world at Nicholls Hospital and both of them were boys, both big, husky, healthy fellows.

Before the crack of dawn on Sunday morning an eight-pound, four-ounce baby boy was born at Nicholls Hospital to Mrs. Goldie Drain, R.R. No. 2, Lakefield, and at noon in the same hospital another boy was born, this time to Mrs. William Sheridan of Burleigh Falls. He is a big fellow too, weighing eight pounds and thirteen ounces. Yes, they're all doing fine, thank you.

The nearest St. Joseph's Hospital could come to the record rung up at Nicholls' was the arrival on Monday of another baby boy. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Pacey of Birdsall.

Twice Wed Heiress Tries Ex-Chauffeur

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 27.—(AP). — The marriage of Barbara Guggenheim Wettach of the wealthy Guggenheim family to Henri Obre, described by the Daily News as her former chauffeur, became known today.

They were married here about a week ago, spent a short honeymoon in Nassau and then left for California. Their whereabouts there was not known here.

The bride and Fred Wattach, the polo players, recently were divorced. Her first marriage to Lionel Johnson, also ended in divorce.

15 Accidents Reported On City Streets

Although 15 accidents were reported over the Christmas week-end, Peterborough escaped very happily the hazards of heavy holiday traffic and slippery streets as no one was injured in any of these crashes. Motorists were evidently on their good behaviour for there were no arrests for drunken driving and police say that the chief cause of the accidents that did occur was the icy condition of the streets.

Skids Into Train.

W. Simmons, Orpington Avenue, had a narrow escape from serious injury Saturday afternoon when his car skidded on the icy surface of Aylmer Street and slid down the grade into the side of a westbound C. P. passenger train striking the mail coach. Simmons was unhurt but his car was damaged and the door jammed so that the driver had to be released by Maurice Tobin who was first on the scene. The train was held up for a few minutes until the train crew investigated the accident. The train had just left the station and was moving slowly at the time of the crash.

$200 Damages.

Damage amounting to around $200 was done when automobiles driven by Ned Vitarelli, Peterborough hockey player who is a member of the Baltimore Orioles this season and Herbert Martin, 400 Monaghan Road collided at the

Scared To Death

DAVIE, Fla., Dec. 27 — (AP). — Chickens are emotional creatures, Carl Rabenau said in a letter asking the Miami operators of a blimp not to fly over his farm. "After you flew over last time," he said, "I found five of my White Leghorns dead—scared to death."

Keen Contests Expected In Many Townships As Candidates Qualify

Ratepayers of rural Peterborough, including the three villages, held their municipal nominations Monday afternoon and evening with acclamations in some of the municipalities and definite prospects of contests in others. The nominees have until nine o'clock tonight to decide whether they are going to lock horns with opponents or retire from the field.

Three of the members of the County Council have already withdrawn from the administrative arena, Warden McDonald of Dummer, Reeve John Clark of Galway-Cavendish, dean of the council, and Reeve Roy Brown of Burleigh-Anstruther.

Dummer Township.

The ratepayers of Dummer township avoided the expense of an election in reconstituting the council for 1939 with only one change, Robert Martin a new member succeeding Warden E. M. McDonald in the reeveship. The personnel of the council for next year follows:—Reeve Robt. Martin, Councillors Percy Bell, Stuart Clysdale, Earl Ivey and George Parsons.

Proponents for the reeveship who retired in favor of Mr. Martin were Warden McDonald, Mr. Bell and Mr. Parsons. George Barr was proposed for council but declined to cause an election. With his retirement from the active administration of the affairs of Dummer Warden McDonald has concluded a long and effective service in his municipality, especially as the Dummer representative in county council where his views and proposals were always received with respect. The four Councillors were all members of 1938 council.

Ennismore.

Nominations for Ennismore township council which were held in the community hall Monday afternoon resulted in the present council for 1939 as follows:— Reeve James A. Gifford, Councillors Thomas Cavanagh, Maurice O'Connor, Edward O'Donoghue and Frank Young.

Douro Township.

Martin Coughlin was re-elected reeve of Douro Monday by acclamation but there may be an election for the council. The following were nominated for councillors:—Michael Whibbs, Robert Bolton, William Hayes, Robert Tedford, Albert Darling and M. Moher.

Election in Burleigh.

Burleigh and Anstruther is sure of an election both for reeve and for places as councillors. For reeve Norman Lean, former reeve for six years and absent from municipal circles for 12 or 13 years, Herbert Tucker, of this year's council and a member of the municipal body for ten years and Norman Bolton, also a councillor this year, his fourth, were all nominated and

Barlow Ordered To Probe Ontario Justice

TORONTO, Dec. 27—(CP).—F. H. Barlow, K.C., master of the supreme Court of Ontario, had received a commission from the Ontario government to open an investigation into the administration of justice in the province.

Mr. Barlow said today the investigation would likely not begin until February. The commission would sit mostly in Toronto, but would visit Port Arthur and other important western and northern points.

Point of investigation was to see if any flaws were discernible in the present legal procedure in the province.

80-Year-Old's Leap Saves Boy's Life

WIARTON, Ont., Dec. 27.—(CP)—Age was willing to pay sacrifice here Christmas eve, that youth might live.

Henry Spragg, 30, was walking down the icy street. He smiled as he saw a small boy coming toward him. His smile disappeared as he saw the child endangered by an automobile bearing down on him.

Mr. Spragg's years dropped from him like a discarded cloak as he leaped into action. A few quick steps and he was at the child's side. A sudden sweep of an arm and the boy was thrown to safety—as the car hit his rescuer.

By standers picked up Mr. Spragg, bleeding and bruised, but without serious injuries.

England In Lead 135 Runs For One

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 27—(CP Cable).—At the close of the third day's play in the initial cricket test match between England and South Africa to-day the touring team held a 135-run lead with one wicket down in its second innings. In an exciting battle for a first-innings lead the Springboks were dismissed for 390 runs, 32 less than their opponents, who then ran up a second innings total of 103 for one wicket before the close of play.

Eleven Qualify For Aldermen

With eleven candidates qualifying for the aldermanic race, Peterborough will have an election on New Year's Day, even although the Mayoralty and the vacancies on the Board of Education and Utilities Commission were filled by acclamation.

The candidates who will ask for the support of the electors are the five members of this year's Council who are seeking re-election, Ald. James Dutton, Malcolm McIntyre, E. R. Wilson, Herbert Bradburn, and Herbert McCannan; Fred T. Tuggey, a former alderman; and Francis H. Kearney, W. Gordon Powell, W. S. Johnson, Thomas Littlefair, and James Matthews, new aspirants for Council.

Fire, Hurricane And Seasick Crew Give Skipper 22, Lively 24 Hours

By Tom Horgan
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Dec. 27 — (AP)—Fire at sea, a hurricane and a seasick, landlubber crew produced an action-packed 24 hours aboard the little brigantine Florence C. Robinson on her way to Tahiti last month—and 22-year-old Captain Sterling Hayden has written a fast-moving account of it.

Essentially a note from one good sailor man to another, it was sent to Captain Ben Pine, racing skipper of the Gloucesterman Schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud, recent unsuccessful challenger for International Fishermen's trophy, aboard which the six-foot-four Hayden won unanimous praise as Thebaud's navigator in its series of races with the Bluenose of Lunenbergk, N.S. Now Hayden is sailing the little brigantine down among the attols which bewitched Stevenson, Gauguin and O'Brien.

The following, somewhat disconnected, are excerpts:

"I watched the glass do down all night and was tempted to take in some sail, but did not as I wanted to get across the gulf stream as soon as possible, but the next morning she started howling and we hove to under storm tri-sail. I think the wind was blowing 70 in the puffs, and you know what kind of a sea was running. I thought she would stand on end, but she turned out to be quite an able little vessel, though she got thrown down to leeward something awful. But there wasn't much to do

A Pretty Sight

NEW YORK, Dec. 27 (AP)—Violent deaths marred the three-day Christmas celebration in the United States with a total cost of more than 500 lives. A country-wide survey placed the figure today at 508.

The toll was approximately the same as that for last year, but in 1937 Christmas fell on Saturday and there was only a two-day observance.

The automobile was the biggest single death factor, accounting for at least 395 fatalities.

Twenty-two persons were killed by fire; 19 died by suicide; 12 in railroad crossing crashes, and six drowned. Homicides and miscellaneous accidents were responsible for the remainder.

Ohio led the death parade with 42 other large state tolls included Texas 40, New York 39, Pennsylvania, and California 35 each, Michigan 28 and Illinois 22.

Five states—Nabraska, Nevada, Rhode Island, Vermont and Wyoming — and the District of Columbus, reported no violent deaths.

Japs Courting Britain And States For Aid With Chinese Currency

TOKYO, Dec. 27—(AP).—Japan is offering Great Britain and United States certain important assurances concerning their interests in China in return for Anglo-American co-operation in reorganizing the Chinese currency situation. It was reported here today.

Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita had long talks yesterday with the British ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, and Joseph Grew the United States envoy.

Well-informed sources said Japan is seeking a way out of the currency crisis in China, caused by the extreme depreciation of the Chinese dollar and the issue of scrip by the Japanese army which cannot be exchanged even into Japanese yen.

These sources said Japan is proposing to offer certain guarantees for foreign interests threatened by the events of the last two years to win foreign collaboration in monetary matters.

There were other versions, however, of the envoys' interviews with the foreign minister. Sir Robert Craigie, it was said, urged on Arita rapid solution of issues which have arisen in connection with British concessions in the conquered territory. Mr. Grew, it was reported, made a vigorous protest over 10 Japanese air attacks on American property in China.

Super-Super Service

EAST MOLINE, Ill., Dec. 27—(AP).—Super-super service is what one person asked of the East Moline postoffice. And he got it. During the Christmas holidays two 1½ cent stamps were found in a mail box, with a note directing that they be attached to two stampless envelopes previously mailed. A clerk granted the "needle-in-the-haystack" request—after a diligent search.

Alderman On Roof

Alderman Herbert Bradburn was looking down on the city this morning from the altitude of the west eve of the Bradburn Block on George street. He climbed up to the wind swept roof and cleared away the snow that had blown into involutions along the edge. In fact he was so close to it that the few people abroad at 11 a.m. stopped with a sense of danger for the young alderman.

Hitler Guard Mouthpiece Takes U.S. Example, Demands "Jim Crow" Cars For Jews

BERLIN, Dec. 27 (AP)—"Jim Crow" cars for the segregation of travelling Jews were demanded today by Das Schwarze Korps, organ of Chancellor Hitler's elite guard, which pointed to the example of southern sections of the United States where Negroes and whites are thus separated.

Turning to asserted precedents for such a step, Das Schwarze Korps said: "In the freest lands on earth, where even presidents storm against the devilish invention of race consciousness, it is not permitted for Negro citizens equally to sit or to lie next a white person in a train even if the white person may only be a sewer cleaner and the Negro a world champion boxer or otherwise a national hero. The democratic example shows us all how we have to solve the problem of travelling foreign Jews."

No Election Expected For Millbrook

MILLBROOK, Dec. 27. — The village municipal nominations on Monday were as follows: For Reeve —W. E. Ball, who is the present Reeve, proposed by J. R. Eakins and A. H. Jeffrey; and P. I. Bentley, proposed by P. Stinson and H. C. Blair.

For four places on the Council—A. H. Jeffrey, D. Sheppard, R. A. Ford, and H. D. Bigelow, who have been this year's councillors, also J. R. Eakins, M. C. Chapman, and R. H. Edmunds. It will not be known until to-night whether an election will be necessary, but street comment has suggested the probability that there will be no change in the Council.

Three School Trustees were given acclamations, J. E. Allen, G. C. Ellsworth, and Dr. J. W. Wright.

Millbrook elected by acclamation its first Hydro-Electric Commission at the holiday nominations. The two commissioners-elect are William T. Wood, former Warden of the United Counties, and George E. Burnham, one for two years and the other for one year. It is understood that they will determine by lot which commissioner assumes the two-year term. The Reeve is the third member of the Commission.

Cavan Township.

Cavan Township nominations here on Monday gave no indication as to whether there would be an election next Monday, but there was some feeling that it might not be necessary.

For Council—Henry A. Fallis, John Smith, and W. W. Brown, this year's councillors, and F. Ballantyne, Fred Hooton, and Harold Cathcart.

Manvers Township.

Re-election of last year's Council by acclamation seemed likely here, although the period for nominees to qualify, expiring at 9 o'clock to-night, might yet produce enough condidates to require recourse to ba..ots next week. Reeve J. C. Cummiskey was nominated again, and with him Fred S. Gray, who had not qualified up to the noon hour. Deputy-Reeve W. J. 'Rock Crusher' Fades When Prof Really Grabs Hold

Zero Wave Nips Eastward Across States

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—(AP)— The most severe cold wave of the season advanced across the northern half of the United States today. Temperatures ranging to 10 below zero prevailed from the Pacific Northwest to the Great Lakes region as the frigid blasts moved eastward.

Weather observers predicted the full force of the cold wave would reach the Atlantic seaboard tonight or tomorrow and that the bitter weather would stay for several days.

Snow and sleet accompanied the Arctic winds into the midwest and northwest. The cold dipped into Oklahoma and forecasters said it would be felt as far south as Florida.

Sub-zero weather plagued the Dakotas, Minnesota, Montana and Wyoming, with lower temperatures in prospect. Snow, rain and stiff winds heralded the approach of the cold wave in the east.

Storm warnings were displayed on Lake Michigan and from Cape Hatteras to Eastport, Me., on the Atlantic coast. Several hundred motorists were stranded from three to four hours in Western Pennsylvania last night by snow and sleet.

Wind Cuts Power Lines.

A windstorm in Western Pennsylvania and South-west Virginia unroofed buildings, uprooted trees, and disrupted power and communication lines. Part of a hospital roof at Latrobe, Pa., was torn away and 75 patients were left in darkness for more than a half an hour when power lines snapped.

Several inches of snow fell in Western North Carolina and Southwest Virginia. A heavy rain hit New York City, while upstate New York received a heavy fall of snow. Many fatal automobile accidents in Ohio were attributed to heavy, wet snow and rain.

A 50-mile north wind scattered a haze of dust in Central and Northern Oklahoma and shattered windows in Oklahoma City. Two women were injured by falling glass. Temperatures throughout the state dropped below freezing.

The temperature fell 30 degrees overnight in Chicago. A low of 12 above zero was forecast for the city.

Slush in Vancouver.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 27 — (CP).— Rising temperatures and rain last night turned Vancouver downtown streets ankle deep with slush after the city's first snowfall of the year. The four-inch blanket of snow which came just 24 hours too late to give Vancouver a white Christmas, was melted on downtown streets, but still cobered suburban districts.

about it and we just let her blow.

The Sail Goes.

"The fore-topsail got loose and in about 10 minutes there wasn't enough left to make a deck chair. With all that sail adrift she lay right in the trough and took it green over both rails."

Then, relates Hayden, the foresail blew out of its gaskets and he and Arthur Hansen, Boston (Herald-Traveler) newspaper photographer, the only non-seasick members of the company, went aloft to secure it, and Hayden was blown from the yard, but miraculously saved his life by sliding down the rigging.

"We were both blown right off the yard like a shot out of a gun. I remember going by Art and yelling at him to hold on. Then I saw a wire ahead of me, so gaffed onto it on the way by and slid down the deck just as fast as Angus used to shift ballast."

Hayden gave a vivid idea of conditions below in the following:

"All the boys were in a bad way as the save was washed out and we had nothing hot to eat." The galley stove backfired and set the place afire. Hayden wrote, but the crew doused it with a fire extinguisher.

"We caught a walloping big shark and nailed his tail to the jib boom end, hoping for wind, and sure enough, about half an hour later, she freshened, and we finally picked up the trades. That first 24 hours we ran 218 miles."

And that perhaps, gives you some idea of what Masefield was talking about when he wrote "I must go down to the sea again."

Charles Franklin McIntyre, retired foreman of the Wire Department of the Canadian General Electric company, died at his home at 471 Gilmour street this morning. He was in his 70th year, and had been ill for less than two weeks.

He has been employed at the C.G.E. for 47 years before retiring on pension last July. Well known and highly respected in this city, he had a wide circle of friends to whom his passing was a severe shock.

Mr. McIntyre was born in Bay City, Michigan, and had resided in Peterborough most of his life. He was a member of George Street United church. Surviving are his sorrowing wife, one daughter, Mrs. William E. Folley, and one son, Cecil C. Intyre of this city.

The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence, Rev. M. C. Parr of George Street United church officiating. Interment will be at Little Lake cemetery.

JOSEPH GREER.

Death came to Joseph Greer in his 84th year on Monday at his home at 477 Mark Street after an illness of only two weeks' duration.

A farmer for many years in Otonabee Township, he retired twenty years ago to live in Peterborough at the home of a relative, Mrs. H. Conway. Failing eyesight made it impossible for him to live an active life and his participation in affairs outside the home was impossible. He was born in Otonabee Township and had lived there until he came to this city, where he was a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock from the home of Mrs. H. Conway, 477 Mark Street, Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church officiating. Interment will be at Little Lake Cemetery.

MISS JANE HENDERSON.

The death of Miss Jane Henderson, 265 Burnham Street, occurred unexpectedly at her residence on Monday. She was in her 82nd year, and although she had been a semi-invalid for a considerable time her death was not anticipated.

A resident of this city for the past quarter of a century, she was born in Otonabee Township and had lived there all her life prior to moving to Peterborough. She was a daughter of the late David Henderson and Susannah Emmerson, who were among the first settlers in Otonabee. She lived on the old homestead, which was more than a century old, until she moved to Peterborough with a brother, now deceased, and her sister, in 1913.

Of a family of 13 children, only one sister now remains to mourn her loss. She is Miss Margaret Henderson, with whom she made her home.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the late residence, Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church officiating. Interment will be at the Lower Cemetery, Keene.

MRS. FRANCIS RODDY.

YOUNG'S POINT, Dec. 27.—The death of Mrs. Francis Roddy occurred at St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, following an illness that lasted for six weeks.

Formerly Mary Isobel Buchanan, she was the daughter of the late John Buchanan of Peterborough, and Mrs. Walter Young of Young's Point. She leaves to mourn her loss her sorrowing husband, Francis Roddy of Grafton, Ontario, to whom she had been married only ten weeks prior to her death; also her mother, Mrs. Walter Young of Young's Point.

Preceding June of 1937, she had been a most successful and beloved teacher in the Separate School at Grafton. Possessing a truly beautiful and charming character, the young woman had, during her twenty-seven years of life, gathered about herself a host of sincere friends. This was attested to by the many spiritual and floral offerings. Solemn Mass of Requiem was celebrated in St. Mary's Church, Young's Point, by a cousin, Rev. C. J. Carroll, pastor of St. Paul's Church, Norwood, with Rev. P. J. Galvin, pastor of Grafton, as deacon of the Mass, and Rev. J. V. McAuley, pastor of Campbellford, as subdeacon.

Present in the sanctuary were Rev. V. J. Corkery of St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, and Rev. K. Malane of Lakefield. Rev. J. J. Garvey of Lakefield delivered a most inspiring and consoling sermon. Interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery, Young's Point, with prayers said at the graveside by Rev. Father Garvey.

Relatives from a distance included Mrs. Arthur Harran of Walkerville, an aunt of Mrs. Roddy; and Rev. Sister Marie Stella of St. Joseph's Hospital, Parry Sound, a cousin. Present at the largely attended funeral were friends and relatives from Peterborough, Grafton, Colborne, Norwood, Lakefield and Ennismore.

12 Nominated For 5 Seats Smith Council

An election in Smith township on January 2nd is only a possibility although 12 men were nominated for the five seats at the annual nomination meeting in the court house here Monday afternoon. At ten-thirty Monday night only the five members of the 1938 council had qualified and the remainder have until 9 o'clock Tuesday night to make up their minds.

Reeve Allan B. Mann and George Mullen, former reeve were both nominated for the reeveship, while Harry Fowler, Sr., deputy reeve in 1938 and W. A. Roseborough were nominated for the position of deputy-reeve.

The three councillors of the 1938 council were nominated again, and are as follows, Milton Clark, Gilbert McIlmoyl and William J. Tedford. Others named were Gordon Hancock, Eric Pearson, Ernest A. Scott, Allan T. Brown, and Harold Lewis. Gordon Hancock withdrew his name and Allan T. Brown was not present at the meeting.

Tribute to Late Clerk.

Reeve Allan B. Mann in giving an account of his stewardship, first paid tribute to the late Percy T. Udy, clerk of the township for 14 years and to the late William Brown, former member of the township council, both of whom died during the last few months. He said many new and perplexing problems had come before the council in 1938 and he lauded his colleagues for the fine spirit of cooperation they had shown to him during the year. He spoke highly of the new clerk, A. I. Edmison, remarking that his parents were pioneers of the district and that Mr. Edmison has been township auditor for 14 years, had been school trustee and also held office of treasurer for the Central Smith Cheese factory at one time.

He explained that school costs over which the council had little control had been responsible in a large measure for the tax increase in 1938 and said that the new school section created on the outskirts of the city in Smith township had also contributed to the increase. He said both he and Deputy-Reeve Fowler had fought against having the Lily Lake bridge returned to the township at the last session of the County Council opposing the by-law throughout but had been outvoted.

Fire Destroys House In Chandos Township

(Examiner Correspondence.)

APSLEY, Dec. 27.—Fire broke out on Friday morning in the home of George Johnson of Chandos. Awakened by the passing of a car on the little frequented road, Mr. Johnson got up and made up the fire about midnight. At 2 a.m. he awakened again to find the roof well afire. He was alone in the house, and before neighbors could arrive the fire had made too much headway. It was insured.

MORE ABOUT—

cated no damage was caused. In the east, 4¼ inches of snow, the heaviest of the season, fell upon Ottawa while Kingston reported a six-inch fall. Sideroads in that district were blocked.

Power-line poles were snapped at Welland by a 40-mile-an-hour wind and highways throughout the peninsula were rendered dangerous by a heavy coating of ice. Temperatures dropped 12 degrees during the night to far below freezing. Several automobiles skidded into ditches.

Foot of Snow at Brantford

Snowploughs were called out at Stratford following the worst storm of the season. Six ploughs were needed to open blocked highways there after a five-inch snowfall. Nearly a foot of snow fell at Brantford and more than four inches at Galt. Drifts two feet deep in places resulted in many cars being stalled.

At London, a heavy all-night snowfall turned to light rain by morning, leaving streets and sidewalks coated with ice. The stiff wind made roads nearly impassable in places. Strong north-westerly gales blew light snow over Windsor.

In Northern Ontario, railway snowploughs were called out for the first time this season as a blinding snowstorm swept that area.

More than 10 young couples were forced to abandon their cars between Hastings and Campbellford in Eastern Ontario and seek shelter in nearby farm houses. They were returning from a dance at Hastings. Deep wet snow made passage impossible.

Tugs working in Toronto harbor were forced to abandon their work because of heavy seas, which motorists along the lakefront said were splashing as high as the top of the lookouthouse at the western gap. Driving was so bad that cars took four and five hours to make 10 miles between Campbellford and Hastings.

About 50 passengers on a Lake Erie and Northern Radial car and Galt, were stranded in total darkness for two hours because of a short circuit, believed caused by the storm. A number of distress flares failed to attract attention. Five miles west of Guelph a westbound Gray Coach Lines bus slid into the ditch and 16 passengers were held up two hours and 55 minutes. A southbound bus slid into the ditch opposite St. Andrew's College on North Yonge St. and passengers were transferred to a following bus.

Cozens—Lankester

St. Luke's Church, Burlington, was the setting for a pretty wedding on Monday, December 26, when Mary Lankester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Lankester, Burlington, was married to Mr. Reginald A. Couzens of Lindsay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Cozens, Burlington. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. G. W. Tebbs, rector of the church, with Miss Phyllis Donkin playing the weding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was gowned in white chiffon over taffeta with floor-length veil arranged over a halo headdress. She carried a bridal bouquet of Talisman roses. Miss Gwen Muldrew, maid of honor, wore a pretty dress of blue chiffon, pink taffeta hat with contrasting flowers and shoulder-length veil. Her flowers were pink carnations. Miss May Lankester, sister of the bride, was flower girl in a frock of pink taffeta with old-fashioned nosegay. Mr. Frank Brown was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Arthur Lakester, brother of the bride, and Mr. Raymond Guthrie.

Receiving with the bridal party were the mothers of the bride and bridegroom. Mr. Reginald Cozens was formerly on the staff of Appleby School, Oakville, and is now on the staff of the Lindsay Collegiate.

Supper Meeting Is Followed By Concert

A supper meeting for the members of the Women's Class of St. Andrew's Church, of which Mr. F. E. Kerr, B.A., is teacher, was given prior to the Christmas week-end with Mrs. B. F. McNeeley in charge of arrangements.

At the concert which followed the meeting Miss Margaret Rodney directed the program, when Christmas plays, readings, Highland dances by Miss Jean Millard, and other interesting items were presented. Dr. C. M. Scott, superintendent of the Sunday School, presided during the program, which was held in the Sunday School room of the church.

A large attendance of parents and friends of the children were present, and candy was distributed by Santa Claus, who was impersonated by Gordon Johnson. Gifts were also given to the children of the primary departments.

We Noticed

....At that delightful annual affair, the Major Bennett Ball—lovely girls in lovely gowns reminiscent of the gay and romantic period of the '90's, with clusters of flowers or graceful ostrich feathers in their hair, and bewitching smiles that would stagger any stag line!

....One brunette wore a cluster of deep purple flowers atop her head to match the blossoms that outlined the off-the-shoulder bodice of her quaint lavender frock . . . combining two pretty shades, a wrap of rich cerise velvet reached to the hem of a graceful little frock fashioned of turquoise net and several charming gowns had bouffant skirts and ruffled necklines of pastel shaded net over swishing, flower-sprigged taffeta.

Major Bennett Ball Is Gay Social Event

A happy and successful finale to the holiday week-end was last night's Major Bennett Chapter I.O.D.E. Ball, when over three hundred young people swung out to the music of Hal. MacFarlane's orchestra and had a grand time doing it.

There was a merry lilt to the music and a swing-time tempo about all the arrangements which made the party just a little better and a little gayer than ever before. The lovely gowns of the ladies, many in the style of the gay '90's, and fashioned of swish taffeta, rich velvet or crisp moire, blended with the paste ishade of the streamers that decked the walls of the Legion Hall, where the affair was held.

Myriad colored streamers tossed about the dancers added to the kaleidoscope of color, and Lambeth Walkers laughingly pelted each other with cotton snowballs and ended up in a merry whirl of tangled ribbons and the noise of horns and other fun-makers which had been handed out as favors to brighten a party that needed no brightening. Prizes for spot dances were awarded to Miss Doris Ackford and Mr. Oscar Sloan, and to Miss Dorothy Morrow and Mr Russell Rowan.

Lending their patronage to the affair were Mr. and Mrs. George A. Macdonald, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Clarke, and Lieut.-Col. W. Gordon Hall and Mrs. Hall.

Miss Anna MacKenzie, Regent, was general convener; members of the decorating committee included Miss MacKenzie, Miss Betty Lytle, Miss Dorothy Lipsett, Miss Phyllis Cruthers and Miss Bertha Inch; invitations were in charge of Miss Margaret Preston, and prizes for spot dances were donated by Miss Greta Giles and The Smart Set Shop. DOROTHY DIX

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—Will you please tell me what you think a husband owes his wife. I am going to be married and I want to know what I have a right to expect from my husband. MARY.

ANSWER:

Well, I think that the most important thing that a wife has a right to expect from her husband is love that expresses itself in both words and deeds. No man should marry a woman unless he is very sure that he has an affection for her that will stand the shock of finding out that she is not an angel, but a very human woman with plenty of faults and weaknesses, and that will endure through all the trials of marriage that they will have to go through together.

Every wife has a right to expect her husband to treat her as a Lady Love and not as a piece of domestic machinery. She has a right to expect him to continue to show her some of the little attentions that he did during their courtship and not to drop all love-making at the altar. She has a right to expect some thanks and appreciation for the sacrifices she makes for him and the trouble she takes to make him comfortable.

A wife has a right to expect her husband to be a fireside companion to her. No man should marry until a home looks better than a night club to him, and until he is ready to settle down and give up wandering and philandering. It is a cruel thing to take a girl out of a happy home and dump her down in a two-by-four flat and leave her to spend her evenings by her lonesome.

A wife has a right to expect her husband to make a definite effort to make her happy, and not to think that just being married to him is all the fun any girl can ask. A wife has a right to expect her husband to take her out to some place of amusement once or twice a week if he can afford it, and at least to be a cheerful and interesting companion.

A wife has a right to expect her husband to make her a real sharer in his life, to talk to her about his plans and hopes and interests, and to enter into her plans and hopes and aspirations with sympathy and understanding instead of derision and scorn. A wife has a right to expect her husband to help her make theirs a mutual life instead of one in which he goes one way and she the other; in which he is absorbed in his business and she in her home, her clubs and her children.

A wife has a right to expect her husband to do his share in making a happy home instead of a place where he brings all of his nerves and temper and irritability. No woman can make a happy home alone, though she smiles like a Cheshire cat, and cooks like a French chef, and pinches pennies like a miser, if her husband is a grouch who never says a pleasant word and if his very presence in the house is ... blanket over it. A wife has a right to expect her husband to be fair with her about money matters and to give ... allowance on which to run the house and for her personal expenses, instead of expecting her to come to ... like a beggar for every nickel. She earns at least the ... of half-a-dozen servants and is worthy of its hire of Every wife has a right to expect her husband to help her ... be a good wife. She has a right to expect him to teach ... how to keep a budget, how to spend money wisely, how ... keep in step with him by studying and reading the things ... does, and by helping her, through love and kindness, to correct any faults she has that get upon his nerves.

* * * * * *

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—Who should handle the money when a couple get married? I intend to continue working after we are married so that we may save and some day own our own home, and I think my husband should bring his pay envelope home, take out of it what he needs and let me handle the rest. After I paid the bills, I would put what was left in a joint bank account. He wants me to handle my pay and let him handle his, and both pay half the expenses of everything. What each of us had left would be put in our individual bank accounts. He says he will never let me know how much he makes because it is his own business. That looks too much like a business proposition to me. More like being friends than husband and wife. I think when a couple get married they should work together, save together, and confide in each other. MISS X.

ANSWER:

Your fiance seems to be taking a pretty hard-boiled attitude on the money question. Evidently he is going to skip that part of the marriage service in which the bridegroom says to the bride "with all my worldly goods I thee endow." He is not going to tell you how much he has for fear you will make a claim on some of his possessions.

I don't like that spirit in him, nor do I like his idea of making you pay half of the running expenses of the home. Supporting the home is the man's job and he should do it without any help from his wife if he possibly can. Anyway, to expect the wife to bring home her part of the bacon as well as fry it is asking too much of her. She has earned her board and keep by her work in the home.

So, as your fiance seems to have a grasping hand, I should certainly advise you to hang on to your own pay envelope. You will doubtless need it because you are not likely to get much from him. But I don't think any wife should ask her husband to turn over his earnings to her and let her give him back just what she thinks he needs, unless he is one of the kind of men who have holes in their pockets and who can never keep a dollar in them. It puts the man in an inferior position in his family for the wife to be the purse-bearer.

DEAR MISS DIX—I have been married for seven years to a husband who shows me that I am only tolerated and makes me feel that I am distinctly his inferior, socially and intellectually. He tells me that if he had known about my family he would never have married me. I work very hard and the strain of the work and my unhappiness are so great that I no longer feel able to keep on with my job, yet my husband will not let me stop. We have no children, nor does he want any. What should I do? I am only 28.

UNDECIDED.

ANSWER:

Even a dog leaves a house when it is kicked out of the door. You are young enough to make over your life. Why hang on to a man who is trying to get rid of you and who will eventually do so?

Women's Groups Grew Larger As Year Passed

By MOLLIE McGEE
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

LONDON, Dec. 27.—(CP).—Women in England have added admirably to their record of achievements in the professions, arts, politics and sports during 1938.

Pioneers who have worked a lifetime in small groups suddenly found themselves swept into great organizations. Though there must have been many heart breaks at the loss of individual authority and prestige, the resulting efficiency meant progress few had even hoped to see

Into the women's new Territorial Army were amalgamated the Women's Transport Corps, who have worked so valiantly since their days in the Great War, and seven smaller volunteer groups whose leaders were called to the War Office. Now officered by women with past experience, correctly uniformed and adequately trained, thousands of women will be able to serve their country on an equal footing with men, in tasks considered just as essential as that of shouldering arms.

The large army of women now in charge of air raid precautions and first aid under the guidance of Lady Reading, is composed of hundreds of small volunteer societies throughout the country. They have not been formed suddenly, they were ready. Town groups, village groups have taken examinations and kept together "just in case something happens." Now in one great association they are a force on which any country might be proud to rely.

The request made by women who volunteered for the Air Guard that they should not be grouped separately from the men has resulted in their acceptance on an equal basis of work and efficiency. Mrs. J. Miller, airplane designer, is on the Air Board as a woman member, not as the woman leader.

In Parliament.

Women in politics—so frequently accused of apathy—have given rousing accounts of themselves from the doughty Duchess of Atholl who went back to her constituents to re-elect her as an individual expressing her own, rather than party views, to Dr. Edith Summerskill and Mrs. Jenny Adamson who arrived to swell the number of women in parliament to a lucky 13.

There was disappointment that no women K.C.'s or judges have as yet been appointed, but Miss H. M. Cross became the first woman member of the General Bar Council.

In the Civil Service, women of Whitehall are forging ahead. They have won their fight for the right of equality with men in even the higher executive positions, and seem on the verge of winning the war for equal pay. They have managed to persuade authorities that married women may need jobs and that mere marriage is not a definite disqualification.

The nurses' struggle against overwork and out-of-date conditions has aroused the attention of press and public to such an extent that hospital authorities are now making efforts to bring about a reform that may be in effect even before the nurses have time to assemble a union or charter.

The domestic servants have had a tremendously successful year. They formed a union, they found a leader, Miss Beatrice Bezzant, and they have a charter, to say nothing of at least half-a-dozen new clubs to which they can take boy friends on Sundays.

The great advance in social service was in the women's prisons. From March 1, the prisoners were paid from five cents to 25 cents a week for work, the name of the place they occupied changed from "cell" to "room," after six months they were provided with clothing made to measure, and convicts were even able to have an occasional cup of tea together. The "dark dungeon" atmosphere has vanished.

The centenary of Octavia Hill brought to the fore the good housing work to which she devoted her life and now carried on by Miss Elizabeth Denby and her co-workers who are becoming world famous.

Thousands of women throughout the country are anxiously awaiting the time when the spinster's demand for pensions at 50 shall be granted. This year it made much progress in parliament.

Dodie Smith upheld the women playwright's laurels with "Dear Octopus; Miss Gracie Fields, comedienne, with Miss Harriet Cohen, the pianist, received decorations of the Order of the British Empire.

The first great Women's Fair was held at Olympia, stressing in its various sections advancement in housekeeping, hygiene and fashion knowledge and application.

But the list of women's achievements this year in England is lengthy, for women are at last receiving acknowledgment for long years of efforts that started before the days of the suffragettes.

Do You Know?

A piece of bread kept in your cake tin will keep cakes fresh for a longer time?

Loops on children's clothes break frequently and cause unnecessary work. Try rolling a strip of kid, cut from an old glove, round a piece of strong string, sewing the edges of the kid together. This loop will last longer than the garment.

Ever tried a crisp, hot sandwich? Cut some bread rather more thickly than usual, slice some cheese and put between the bread. Have butter ready melted in a pan; put in your sandwich and fry till it is crisp. Take out, then pepper and salt freely.

By MARY MOORE

SUNDAY (New Year's Dinner)
Chilled Fruit Cup
Deep Beefsteak and Oyster Pie
New Geen Peas Potato Rosettes
Endive and Avocado Salad with French Dressing
Mince Pie with or without Ice Cream
Coffee Salted Pecans

The reason the above dinner seems a little different than tradition dictates is because the Deep Beefsteak pie is one of the most delicious morsels I ever tasted and need a very important occasion to do it justice. It can be made the day before needed, and reheated with buttered brown paper.

Deep Beefsteak and Oyster Pie

Two pound tender beefsteak, ½ pint oysters, ½ lb. mushrooms, salt and cayenne, 2 hard cooked eggs, ½ cup cold water, rich pastry. Cut steak into 2-inch squares. Place in bottom of deep casserole, and sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika. Cover with enough cold water to moisten meat well and make gravy as pie bakes, about 3 or 4 cups. Cut the mushrooms in halves or quarters according to their size and mix them and the oysters and their liquor with the meat. Slice the hard cooked eggs and place them in a layer over the meat. Roll out very rich pastry to ¼-inch thickness, and insert funnel in centre of pie, or an inverted egg cup will do.

Cover top with pastry. Moisten edge of pastry and put on a band of pastry around outside edge of pie, press down edges flute edges. Brush paste with beaten egg to give good color when baked. Make one or two incisions in top of crust. Bake in very hot oven of 450 deg. Fahr. for one-half hour, lowering the heat to 350 for one more hour. This pie may be served cold—if any is left!

New Neckwear Makes Original Gift

If you haven't a lot of money in your New Year budget, you at least can exercise originality and imagination and buy something that doesn't cost a lot but goes a long way. No, it isn't a riddle, it's a new piece of this season's devastating neckwear. It will make mother's black dress look as fresh as a daisy, and wrapped in a gift box will be one present that will not be duplicated.

Paris predicts—Vogue features—little pique or organdie bandings for neck, sleeves and, believe it or not, the bottom of a short skirt, particularly nice if she is 16.

Neckwear doesn't mean just pique and batiste, organdie, etc. It now means ruchings, embroideries, stiff little Buster Brown collars, Irish lace collars and cuffs, little bows for your neck, your pocket. Neckwear may be in velvet decorated with mother-of-pearl flowers and jewels. It may be of grosgrain ribbon or chiffon. It may be of velvet ribbon or of taffeta, satin, lame or kid. It may be a little sequin jacket or it may be ruffled net. In any event, neckwear is a 1900 fashion, and as we revive all of the old customs and fashions of 1900, why not give mother a stunning 1900 lace jabot, a guimpe, collars and cuffs or even little dainty undersleeves or gilets?

As winter freshener-uppers these bits of femininity, the lingerie touches, can't be compared. When in doubt, give neckwear. You can't go wrong. One present she won't return!

Supper Meeting Is Followed By Concert

A supper meeting for the members of the Women's Class of St. Andrew's Church, of which Mr. F. E. Kerr, B.A., is teacher, was given prior to the Christmas week-end with Mrs. B. F. McNeeley in charge of arrangements.

At the concert which followed the meeting Miss Margaret Rodney directed the program, when Christmas plays, readings, Highland dances by Miss Jean Millard, and other interesting items were presented. Dr. C. M. Scott, superintendent of the Sunday School, presided during the program, which was held in the Sunday School room of the church.

A large attendance of parents and friends of the children were present, and candy was distributed by Santa Claus, who was impersonated by Gordon Johnson. Gifts were also given to the children of the primary departments.

We Noticed

....At that delightful annual affair, the Major Bennett Ball—lovely girls in lovely gowns reminiscent of the gay and romantic period of the '90's, with clusters of flowers or graceful ostrich feathers in their hair, and bewitching smiles that would stagger any stag line!

....One brunette wore a cluster of deep purple flowers atop her head to match the blossoms that outlined the off-the-shoulder bodice of her quaint lavender frock . . . combining two pretty shades, a wrap of rich cerise velvet reached to the hem of a graceful little frock fashioned of turquoise net and several charming gowns had bouffant skirts and ruffled necklines of pastel shaded net over swishing, flower-sprigged taffeta.

Major Bennett Ball Is Gay Social Event

A happy and successful finale to the holiday week-end was last night's Major Bennett Chapter I.O.D.E. Ball, when over three hundred young people swung out to the music of Hal. MacFarlane's orchestra and had a grand time doing it.

There was a merry lilt to the music and a swing-time tempo about all the arrangements which made the party just a little better and a little gayer than ever before. The lovely gowns of the ladies, many in the style of the gay '90's, and fashioned of swish taffeta, rich velvet or crisp moire, blended with the paste lshade of the streamers that decked the walls of the Legion Hall, where the affair was held.

Myriad colored streamers tossed about the dancers added to the kaleidoscope of color, and Lambeth Walkers laughingly pelted each other with cotton snowballs and ended up in a merry whirl of tangled ribbons and the noise of horns and other fun-makers which had been handed out as favors to brighten a party that needed no brightening. Prizes for spot dances were awarded to Miss Doris Ackford and Mr. Oscar Sloan, and to Miss Dorothy Morrow and Mr Russell Rowan.

Lending their patronage to the affair were Mr. and Mrs. George A. Macdonald, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Clarke, and Lieut.-Col. W. Gordon Hall and Mrs. Hall.

Miss Anna MacKenzie, Regent, was general convener; members of the decorating committee included Miss MacKenzie, Miss Betty Lytle, Miss Dorothy Lipsett, Miss Phyllis Cruthers and Miss Bertha Inch; invitations were in charge of Miss Margaret Preston, and prizes for spot dances were donated by Miss Greta Giles and The Smart Set Shop. (It is regretted that the guest list is not available.)

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—Will you please tell me what you think a husband owes his wife. I am going to be married and I want to know what I have a right to expect from my husband. MARY.

ANSWER:

Well, I think that the most important thing that a wife has a right to expect from her husband is love that expresses itself in both words and deeds. No man should marry a woman unless he is very sure that he has an affection for her that will stand the shock of finding out that she is not an angel, but a very human woman with plenty of faults and weaknesses, and that will endure through all the trials of marriage that they will have to go through together.

Every wife has a right to expect her husband to treat her as a Lady Love and not as a piece of domestic machinery. She has a right to expect him to continue to show her some of the little attentions that he did during their courtship and not to drop all love-making at the altar. She has a right to expect some thanks and appreciation for the sacrifices she makes for him and the trouble she takes to make him comfortable.

A wife has a right to expect her husband to be a fireside companion to her. No man should marry until a home looks better than a night club to him, and until he is ready to settle down and give up wandering and philandering. It is a cruel thing to take a girl out of a happy home and dump her down in a two-by-four flat and leave her to spend her evenings by her lonesome.

A wife has a right to expect her husband to make a definite effort to make her happy, and not to think that just being married to him is all the fun any girl can ask. A wife has a right to expect her husband to take her out to some place of amusement once or twice a week if he can afford it, and at least to be a cheerful and interesting companion.

A wife has a right to expect her husband to make her a real sharer in his life, to talk to her about his plans and hopes and interests, and to enter into her plans and hopes and aspirations with sympathy and understanding instead of derision and scorn. A wife has a right to expect her husband to help her make theirs a mutual life instead of one in which he goes one way and she the other; in which he is absorbed in his business and she in her home, her clubs and her children.

A wife has a right to expect her husband to do his share in making a happy home instead of a place where he brings all of his nerves and temper and irritability. No woman can make a happy home alone, though she smiles like a Cheshire cat, and cooks like a French chef, and pinches pennies like a miser, if her husband is a grouch who never says a pleasant word and if his very presence in the house is a wet blanket over it. A wife has a right to expect her husband to be fair with her about money matters and to give her an allowance on which to run the house and for her own personal expenses, instead of expecting her to come to him like a beggar for every nickel. She earns at least the wages of half-a-dozen servants and is worthy of its hire of one.

Every wife has a right to expect her husband to help her to be a good wife. She has a right to expect him to teach her how to keep a budget, how to spend money wisely, how to keep in step with him by studying and reading the things he does, and by helping her, through love and kindness, to correct any faults she has that get upon his nerves.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—Who should handle the money when a couple get married? I intend to continue working after we are married so that we may save and some day own our own home, and I think my husband should bring his pay envelope home, take out of it what he needs and let me handle the rest. After I paid the bills, I would put what was left in a joint bank account. He wants me to handle my pay and let him handle his, and both pay half the expenses of everything. What each of us had left would be put in our individual bank accounts. He says he will never let me know how much he makes because it is his own business. That looks too much like a business proposition to me. More like being friends than husband and wife. I think when a couple get married they should work together, save together, and confide in each other. MISS X.

ANSWER:

Your fiance seems to be taking a pretty hard-boiled attitude on the money question. Evidently he is going to skip that part of the marriage service in which the bridegroom says to the bride "with all my worldly goods I thee endow." He is not going to tell you how much he has for fear you will make a claim on some of his possessions.

I don't like that spirit in him, nor do I like his idea of making you pay half of the running expenses of the home. Supporting the home is the man's job and he should do it without any help from his wife if he possibly can. Anyway, to expect the wife to bring home her part of the bacon as well as fry it is asking too much of her. She has earned her board and keep by her work in the home.

So, as your fiance seems to have a grasping hand, I should certainly advise you to hang on to your own pay envelope. You will doubtless need it because you are not likely to get much from him. But I don't think any wife should ask her husband to turn over his earnings to her and let her give him back just what she thinks he needs, unless he is one of the kind of men who have holes in their pockets and who can never keep a dollar in them. It puts the man in an inferior position in his family for the wife to be the purse-bearer.

DEAR MISS DIX—I have been married for seven years to a husband who shows me that I am only tolerated and makes me feel that I am distinctly his inferior, socially and intellectually. He tells me that if he had known about my family he would never have married me. I work very hard and the strain of the work and my unhappiness are so great that I no longer feel able to keep on with my job, yet my husband will not let me stop. We have no children, nor does he want any. What should I do? I am only 28.

UNDECIDED.

ANSWER:

Even a dog leaves a house when it is kicked out of the door. You are young enough to make over your life. Why hang on to a man who is trying to get rid of you and who will eventually do so?

Women's Groups Grew Larger As Year Passed

By MOLLIE McGEE
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

LONDON, Dec. 27.—(CP).—Women in England have added admirably to their record of achievements in the professions, arts, politics and sports during 1938.

Pioneers who have worked a lifetime in small groups suddenly found themselves swept into great organizations. Though there must have been many heart breaks at the loss of individual authority and prestige, the resulting efficiency meant progress few had even hoped to see

Into the women's new Territorial Army were amalgamated the Women's Transport Corps, who have worked so valiantly since their days in the Great War, and seven smaller volunteer groups whose leaders were called to the War Office. Now officered by women with past experience, correctly uniformed and adequately trained, thousands of women will be able to serve their country on an equal footing with men, in tasks considered just as essntial as that of shouldering arms.

The large army of women now in charge of air raid precautions and first aid under the guidance of Lady Reading, is composed of hundreds of small volunteer societies throughout the country. They have not been formed suddenly, they were ready. Town groups, village groups have taken examinations and kept together "just in case something happens." Now in one great association they are a force on which any country might be proud to rely.

The request made by women who volunteered for the Air Guard that they should not be grouped separately from the men has resulted in their acceptance on an equal basis of work and efficiency. Mrs. J. Miller, airplane designer, is on the Air Board as a woman member, not as the woman leader.

In Parliament.

Women in politics—so frequently accused of apathy—have given rousing accounts of themselves from the doughty Duchess of Atholl who went back to her constituents to re-elect her as an individual expressing her own, rather than party views, to Dr. Edith Summerskill and Mrs. Jenny Adamson who arrived to swell the number of women in parliament to a lucky 13.

There was disappointment that no women K.C.'s or judges have as yet been appointed, but Miss H. M. Cross became the first woman member of the General Bar Council.

In the Civil Service, women of Whitehall are forging ahead. They have won their fight for the right of equality with men in even the higher executive positions, and seem on the verge of winning the war for equal pay. They have managed to persuade authorities that married women may need jobs and that mere marriage is not a definite disqualification.

The nurses' struggle against overwork and out-of-date conditions has aroused the attention of press and public to such an extent that hospital authorities are now making efforts to bring about a reform that may be in effect even before the nurses have time to assemble a union or charter.

The domestic servants have had a tremendously successful year. They formed a union, they found a leader, Miss Beatrice Bezzant, and they have a charter, to say nothing of at least half-a-dozen new clubs to which they can take boy friends on Sundays.

The great advance in social service was in the women's prisons. From March 1, the prisoners were paid from five cents to 25 cents a week for work, the name of the place they occupied changed from "cell" to "room," after six months they were provided with clothing made to measure, and convicts were even able to have an occasional cup of tea together. The "dark dungeon" atmosphere has vanished.

The centenary of Octavia Hill brought to the fore the good housing work to which she devoted her life and now carried on by Miss Elizabeth Denby and her co-workers who are becoming world famous.

Thousands of women throughout the country are anxiously awaiting the time when the spinster's demand for pensions at 50 shall be granted. This year it made much progress in parliament.

Dodie Smith upheld the women playwright's laurels with "Dear Octopus; Miss Gracie Fields, comedienne, with Miss Harriet Cohen, the pianist, received decorations of the Order of the British Empire.

The first great Women's Fair was held at Olympia, stressing in its various sections advancement in housekeeping, hygiene and fashion knowledge and application.

But the list of women's achievements this year in England is lengthy, for women are at last receiving acknowledgment for long years of efforts that started before the days of the suffragettes.

Do You Know?

A piece of bread kept in your cake tin will keep cakes fresh for a longer time?

Loops on children's clothes break frequently and cause unnecessary work. Try rolling a strip of kid, cut from an old glove, round a piece of strong string, sewing the edges of the kid together. This loop will last longer than the garment.

Ever tried a crisp, hot sandwich? Cut some bread rather more thickly than usual, slice some cheese and put between the bread. Have butter ready melted in a pan; put in your sandwich and fry till it is crisp. Take out, then pepper and salt freely.

SUNDAY (New Year's Dinner)
Chilled Fruit Cup
Deep Beefsteak and Oyster Pie
New Geen Peas Potato Rosettes
Endive and Avocado Salad with French Dressing
Mince Pie with or without Ice Cream
Coffee Salted Pecans

The reason the above dinner seems a little different than tradition dictates is because the Deep Beefsteak pie is one of the most delicious morsels I ever tasted and need a very important occasion to do it justice. It can be made the day before needed, and reheated with buttered brown paper.

Deep Beefsteak and Oyster Pie

Two pound tender beefsteak, ½ pint oysters, ½ lb. mushrooms, salt and cayenne, 2 hard cooked eggs, ½ cup cold water, rich pastry. Cut steak into 2-inch squares. Place in bottom of deep casserole, and sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika. Cover with enough cold water to moisten meat well and make gravy as pie bakes, about 3 or 4 cups. Cut the mushrooms in halves or quarters according to their size and mix them and the oysters and their liquor with the meat. Slice the hard cooked eggs and place them in a layer over the meat. Roll out very rich pastry to ¼-inch thickness, and insert funnel in centre of pie, or an inverted egg cup will do.

Cover top with pastry. Moisten edge of pastry and put on a band of pastry around outside edge of pie, press down edges flute edges. Brush paste with beaten egg to give good color when baked. Make one or two incisions in top of crust. Bake in very hot oven of 450 deg. Fahr. for one-half hour, lowering the heat to 350 for one more hour. This pie may be served cold—if any is left!

New Neckwear Makes Original Gift

If you haven't a lot of money in your New Year budget, you at least can exercise originality and imagination and buy something that doesn't cost a lot but goes a long way. No, it isn't a riddle, it's a new piece of this season's devastating neckwear. It will make mother's black dress look as fresh as a daisy, and wrapped in a gift box will be one present that will not be duplicated.

Paris predicts—Vogue features—little pique or organdie bandings for neck, sleeves and, believe it or not, the bottom of a short skirt, particularly nice if she is 16.

Neckwear doesn't mean just pique and batiste, organdie, etc. It now means ruchings, embroideries, stiff, little Buster Brown collars, Irish lace collars and cuffs, little bows for your neck, your pocket. Neckwear may be in velvet decorated with mother-of-pearl flowers and jewels. It may be of grosgrain ribbon or chiffon. It may be of velvet ribbon or of taffeta, satin, lame or kid. It may be a little sequin jacket or it may be ruffled net. In any event, neckwear is a 1900 fashion, and as we revive all of the old customs and fashions of 1900, why not give mother a stunning 1900 lace jabot, a guimpe, collars and cuffs or even little dainty undersleeves or gilets?

As winter freshener-uppers these bits of femininity, the lingerie touches, can't be compared. When in doubt, give neckwear. You can't go wrong. One present she won't return!

We Have An Election

It remained for the vacancies at the aldermanic board in Peterborough to bring about an election. We need five aldermen and there are 11 aspirants for the places. Five of the candidates are in the 1938 council.

It has been stated several times that we did not need an election at present. The argument was based on the fact that the Mayor, members of the Board of Education and Utilities Commission went in by acclamation, and if the Council could be filled in the same way we would save some money.

But that view is not strong enough. The Examiner considers it evidence of a better condition of public mind to have 11 candidates trying for places at the aldermanic board than that the existing vacancies should be filled by acclamation. It is better for those who are in and better for those who want to get in to know that the position of alderman is one not readily obtainable. If interest in seeking such positions is evidence of a healthy municipal state than our municipal health is registering well.

The fact that there will be a vote and with a good selection from which to choose is a desirable development. Much better than to have the seats go by acclamation.

Not a Normal Desire

Several newspapers followed the old idea of printing letters to Santa Claus. Looking over some of these request appeals it does seem that some of the little folk have been asking for a great deal, and the letter represents a formidable shopping list which could be dealt with by only an equally formidable purse.

There is something which is not childish at all creeping into several of the requests. One lad wanted a G-Man outfit; he wanted a machine gun and a black cartridge holder also a two-gun set with belt and a field glass. Unfortunately—we think—a somewhat similar idea ran through several letters. It may be only a passing fancy and possibly the boys will "grow out of it," but in the meantime there is mischief being done. The stories he has been reading or the pictures at which he has been looking have gone to his head, and to that extent he has ceased to be just a normal lad of tender years.

A Young Man's Problem

A young man has written to the Examiner protesting that the amount of wages he was offered when he found a place of employment was too low. So low in fact that he could not consider going to work there. He tells it this way:

> "I have what I consider a good education and I have made a good many inquiries regarding work. I thought I had something worth while a few weeks ago but again I was disappointed because there was only $8 per week in it for the first year. It would have been just about the same as learning a trade, something for which I do not think I am suited. The hours were all right but working for $8 per week in this age seems to be plain ridiculous. That is what is making young men discontented and starting them to talk red and they begin to wonder after all if there is any opportunity for them in their own land. The man who offered me that amount is pretty well off and he lives in a good way but he is taking it out of those whom he employs."

If there is anything wrong with the man who offered this young man $8 per week, then there may be something wrong with the young man who refused it. He may be losing sight of one rather important thing. Just this—he is probaby worth no more than that to the man who has offered to employ him. Likely he knows nothing at all about the business, and some person will have to spend time—which costs money—to show him what to do and explain how it should be done. That period may last for some time, and during that interval it is not likely the employer will make anything at all out of the young man.

During that period the young man would be learning something just as surely as he must have learned something during his school days. The difference is that during school days there was nothing coming in; money was being paid for him. Now he has the opportunity to complete his education in a practical way and get paid for it and he refuses to accept.

We believe it might be well for this young man to stop for a few moments and ask himself a very plain question: "Why should any person engage me? What qualifications have I that others do not possess?" If he were quite honest with himself he would find he might have some difficulty in answering such a question to his own satisfaction. If he still has the chance to start and learn something useful and draw $8 per week while doing it we would advise him to lost no time at all, but hurry away to the prospective employer and tell him he is ready to go to work. There are plenty of adult men in Peterborough and every other community who did not make more than that in a month when they started.

It Simply Must Be Done

One thing is abundantly plain — the mugs who use revolvers in hold-ups are running wild in this country. The score in Toronto alone has passed the 200 mark for 1938.

One of the latest victims rode his bicycle to a bank to cash his pay check and was followed on the way home by two men in a car. They put a gun on him and forced him to enter the car. And that was in day-time.

If it is necessary for police in Toronto or elsewhere to raid houses or blocks to find these weapons, then they should do it. Taking the guns away from those who have no right to possess them is about as effective a way as we know to reduce the average thug to the status of an ineffective coward. If he had no gun he would attack no person.

The forces of law and order are under stern compulsion to come out on top in this struggle about concealed weapons, and there can be no other answer to it.

Law abiding people who go about their own business and mind their own affairs are entitled to all the protection police can give them, but they are not getting it until the guns are taken away from the mugs.

Should Have a Book Of Rules

Perhaps is one looked around and asked sufficient questions reward might come by way of locating a book of rules on how to carve a turkey or a goose. The average man does such a job so infrequently that he never has opportunity to became an expert. He knows how to remove sections from a roast of beef and he can do fairly well when confronted with a leg of lamb, but when he faces turkey or goose his week-day technique is not sufficient.

As a rule he is called upon to perform in the presence of all members of the family and perhaps a few guests. Seldom is he granted the mild privilege of taking the bird apart on the kitchen table and then bearing the fruits of his vivisection to the head of the table. He has to work like a man in a show window on the main street, and all the folk at the table look at him.

We believe most men will tackle the legs first, probably because they stick out at the side and appear to be the logical point of attack, and the mental arithmetic in which he indulges tells him that two legs equal two dinners as far as he is concerned. If he could snip off wings with the deft touch of his hand on the morning razor; if he could reduce to attractive proportions the white meat by adopting the same rugged style he uses when rattling the furnace grates, all would be well. But when he finally starts excavating in the dark recess of the fowl to try and bring forth dressing he approaches the point of exhaustion. There he is, the cynosure of all eyes; if the folk would look elsewhere and talk of merry things it would help much, but for the most part they sit and gaze at the man who wields the carving set and who sits in the one arm chair at the table. We believe a book of rules on how to carve a bird might have quite a ready sale during the festive season.

It Cannot Be Done

Dr. T. F. Donnelly is member of parliament for Wood Mountain riding in Saskatchewan, and as well as being a physician he is a farmer. Within recent times he has been talking about the wheat bonus and clearly he did not think it works as it should. The Government pays to the grower of wheat in the West the difference between the market price and the fixed price of 80 cents, and in that way the farmer with the greatest amount of wheat receives the greatest amount of bonus. A farmer who has had a crop failure might be in the position of being able to collect nothing at all in the way of bonus.

By way of correcting such a situation Dr. Donnelly suggests the bonus should be paid on the basis of acreage so that in case of crop failure the farmer would be able to draw sufficient to pay for his expenses.

As one who lives close to the situation Dr. Donnelly should be in a position to offer suggestions, but the poor part is the belief that the bonus system in terms of bushels or acres is here to stay. It will not be known for some months yet how much the bonus system has cost us this year, but officials have given out the figure of $65,000,000, and we have not $65,000,000 on hand to settle that account. It is anticipated our fiscal year will show a deficit of $35,000,000, and shortly after our wheat year will add 65 more millions, making in all $100,000,000. Dr. Donnelly, as a member of parliament since 1925, is as familiar with these figures as he is with the manner in which the wheat bonus works, and he must realize we cannot—when we have not even balanced our national budget—keep on handling a wheat crop which may any year run up to 400,000,000 bushels on the basis of paying a bonus in order to sell it.

We Have No Document

At the last meeting of the Canadian Cabinet at Ottawa before the Christmas vacation a five-man commission was named to study the proposed 2,500-mile Alaska highway. There is more to it than that because United States has also named a similar commission, and the republic is probably more interested than is Canada in having the highway built because it will form a land connection with Alaska, in the north-west corner of our country, a property which United States secured from Russia.

United States admits, and similar admission comes from Ottawa, that the highway has strategic military importance as well as aiding in tourist development on the west coast and that military advantage is just as much concern to United States as it is to Canada. And probably more so.

It is the outworking of a strange yet persistent development in relations between Canada and United States. It is openly admitted that good airports in our country are considered advantageous to United States because in case of foreign invasion bent on attacking United States from Europe, planes from the republic would be able to land here and be ready for the attack. It is believed such attacking planes would on their way from Europe pass over Canadian territory first.

And yet there is not a line in the way of a treaty between Canada and United States regarding mutual action for the purposes of defence; nothing at all in the way of documentary understanding or official pledges bearing official signatures. All there is is common understanding and a good deal of plain horse sense based on the good neighbor theory. And that in turn means if a neighbor saw the house next to him on fire he would go and try to aid as best he could, and if he saw robbers on the premises he would be willing to lend assistance to defeat them. And that is the best kind of agreement for two bordering nations to have—better than clauses and articles in any written agreement.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A new telescope has been made which can read the dial of a small watch at two miles. With such a thing in existence people in the neighborhood would do well to walk carefully and act wisely.

One jockey in United States has ridden 232 winning races. If a man is inclined to bet it would look safer to put money on that jockey than any horse on the circuit.

A farmer whose premises had been raided in other years for Christmas trees had a sign painted which read: "Beware of the Bull." There were no trees touched this year.

Man in New Orleans ran his truck part way into a canal by the highway and a junk dealer passing by offered him $5 for it. The sale was made and the junk man probably knew what the average man thought of his car at the moment of an accident.

When prisoners were released from the county jail in Reading, Pa., the last man on the list asked if he might stay, stating he would get a good dinner in jail and have some person to talk to. He had no place else to go. Just what would it have meant if some person had wished him a Merry Christmas.

We have several millions of pounds of good butter in this country in excess of our normal needs, and the suggestion is made that we get rid of it by eating more. Putting good butter on thicker is easier than remedies which have been suggested for other of our national problems.

Man in London convicted of bigamy made his second marriage so he could be eligible for relief. In court he asked the magistrate if he expected him to starve, and the cadi replied he would see he did not starve for at least two years in Kingston. So there does seem to be that solution to the problem of getting board and meals.

NO SKILL

¶ I find I'm not so very smart, at fixing things that come apart, I am both wrong and slow; and I am ready to admit, I don't know how the pieces fit, or how the thing should go.

¶ When toys were broke long years gone back, I used to seem to have the knack, it all seemed very clear; for I could take an iron train then, and fix it so 'twould run again, or mend a horse's ear.

¶ But things are complicated now, there is no patient horse or cow, carved from a wooden block; and things aren't simple any more, like when we pulled them on the floor; they fly or else they walk.

¶ Wee Angus has a wind-up train, it was a beauty when it came, 'twould scoot across the floor; and on its final quickened dash, it ended up with quite a smash, and it will run no more.

¶ I took the engine all apart, to find just why it would not start, located trouble too; I had a pile of nuts and springs all sorts of scientific things, I figured what I'd do.

¶ I stuffed them back where they should go, I watched the stuffing grow and grow, then tried it in the hall; I thought I'd ease Wee Angus' mind, but then it was I came to find—it wouldn't run at all.

THE ALASKAN PURCHASE

LONG-SECRET documents, pertaining to the sale of Alaska by Russia to the United States, were made public recently. The American embassy secured permission from the Soviet government to see the papers after a whole year of repeated requests. Practically all of the documents were in French, which was the language of the Russian Court at the time of the sale.

Privy Councilor Edouard de Stoeckl, of the Russian court, was entrusted, along with the Russian Minister, to sell Alaska for $5,000,000. William H. Seward, who was then Secretary of State, was eager to conclude the purchase in order to bolster up his declining political reputation. He offered Russia the sum of $5,000,000 for the territory, but Stoeckl, sensing his eagerness, raised the price to $7,000,000. This price Seward paid, in addition to $200,000 extra as the exchange difference between the value of the dollar in New York and London.

Negotiations for the sale of Alaska were started in 1853, instead of some years later as is generally supposed.

Stoeckl was a worn out man after he had completed the sale of Alaska. For his great work—he even succeeded in making Seward pay the bill of $9,000 for cables to St. Petersburg—he received the comparatively trifling sum of $10,000 from the Russian government.

Up to the time of the Civil War, Alaska had been run by the out-of-date Russian - American Company, molded after the Hudson Bay Company. The territory was a source of great discomfort to Russia. There was always the fear that American filibusterers might take it, or still worse, that some European power might seize it. Stoeckl even feared the Mormons might adopt Alaska as their home, and in this way force Russia to provide an army of defence, which Russia could ill-afford to do. Russia was as a matter of fact only too glad to get rid of Alaska.

Curiously, at the time of th transaction, no one considered the possibility of Alaska's containing any minerals. The only resources of the territory were thought to be furs, forests, coal, shipping and ice.

VALUE OF CHORES.

(St. Marys Journal-Argus)

THE FARM CHORE was glorified by Dr. John Dearness, oldest living graduate of the University of Western Ontario, who addressed the assembly of students and faculty at the annual prize day exercises. Speaking on "Student Responsibilities," Dr. Dearness emphasized the fact that a sense of responsibility brought boys and girls from the little red school houses of Canada to prominent positions in public life. "From definition, observation and experience," Dr. Dearness said, "blessed be chores!"

• Farmers Must "Think" It Out

IF during the winter months the farmers of this province, and of other provinces as well, would devote one hour daily to a consideration of their own business and the farming industry in general, the whole picture of Canadian agriculture would soon be changed.

We do not imply, says the Farmer's Advocate, that farmers give no thought to their own affairs. The suggestion is, that producers in addition to the customary trials and worries devote a full hour of quiet, careful study to the bigger program as it relates to production and marketing. The conclusions reached could then be carried into a study club or discussion hour, and out of it all would come the kind of decisions that would enable farm organizations to effect the needed reforms.

One trouble is, that we are trying to carry on in an economy of plenty the same policies and programs that worked under an economy of scarcity. Since the world war, surpluses have been accumulating, importing European nations have thrown up barriers which the export countries cannot climb. Markets still open to us have reached the saturation point and have established quotas beyond which we cannot go. It is suicidal to go on producing in still greater volume while the markets to which we cater are taking less. It is suicidal also for exporting countries to compete one against the other in the desperate attempt to dominate any market. The inevitable result of such competition is bankruptcy or a desperately low standard of living.

Careful study and discussion of the agricultural problem in Canada will reveal the fact that the great multiplicity of organizations should be narrowed down and united into a single body through which the farmers of Canada could speak loud enough to be heard.

• Says Land Not the Remedy

(Letter in Globe and Mail)

TO THE EDITOR of The Globe and Mail: Relative to your editorial in the Dec. 15 issue, under the caption "The Land as the Remedy" in which you, like Henry Ford, recommend "back to the land" as a cure for unemployment. I wonder what all the new farmers would do with their surplus produce. You might say "Sell it." But do you know that for a number of years the farmers who now follow that occupation have not realized — owing to over-production —a decent profit after paying the costs of producing and marketing their products?

Mr. Ford says that no man need be out of work, that he can work producing vegetables, etc., for himself and his family—that he would be self-supporting in that respect. But supposing that each one of these new farmers undertook at the same time to produce his own car, radio, washing machine, clothes, etc. That would not be so good for the manufacturers of those items. It would affect them in the same manner that individual growing of vegetables, etc., on a large scale, for personal use and most probably sale of friends and relatives, would affect the farmers who cannot now find a profitable outlet for their produce.

If you could put 100,000 now unemployed Ontario men out on small farms the volume of produce thrown on the market would be so great the farmer would not be able to give it away, and those now employed in retailing produce in cities and towns would soon be out of work. I suppose these also could take up farming. Furthermore, the greater number of these unemployed men have not and could not get the necessary funds to build lodging houses or buy the seed or equipment necessary to start farm work.

In bygone years families have made a living from working small farms because the market was close to home and distribution costs low. The horse which earned its keep on the farm was hitched to the buggy for the trip to market where butter, eggs, etc., were exchanged for other food and clothing. Or perhaps the produce was sold to the then prosperous, but now almost extinct, blacksmith, wagonmaker, cooper, harnessmaker, tailor or shoemaker. Now the horse has been supplanted by a car and butter and egg money goes to buy gasoline and pay repair bills.

Another contributing factor to the glutted farmers' market was the disposing of thousands of what were termed "buggy horses," each one of which consumed about 100 bushels of oats, two tons or more of hay, along with straw and vegetables, yearly. If we are going to get back to or up to that "fine and greatly economic condition" referred to in your editorial we've got to apply some remedy other than "get back to the land." H. L. Bailey.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

(Portland Oregonian)

TRUE it is that mere membership in a church does not make a man or women religious or spiritually conscious or good. Neither does membership in a church make one better per se than his neighbor. All depends upon how far one carries his religion into his daily living, for "Faith without works is dead." But his membership in a church does not indicate that the individual has experienced the urge for better things and that he recognizes the church as the way and the voice.

He who will join the church—any church—and walk thereafter according to its teachings will attain thereby a better life and find therein something of peace for the spirit. No such peace can be attained except through right conduct toward one's fellow man, and it is in the churches that we find the leadership toward that course. So it is good news when statistics show that half of our population are church members.

APPEASEMENT, BUT—

(Buffalo Courier-Express)

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN, prime minister of Great Britain, still belives in "appeasement" of the dictators and all that sort of thing. But—

Speaking at a House of Commons luncheon, Mr. Chamberlain said: "We may take it that when German statesmen—I will not say the German people—reflect on the possible consequences of a conflict, if ever a countries, they think not only of our conflict should arise between our two armaments but of our great financial resources, which in a war of long duration might well prove to be a deciding factor."

Yes, "appeasement" is grand, not to say swell. Neville Chamberlain still believes in it. • But—

AN OLD ARGUMENT.

(Winnipeg Tribune)

VANCOUVER went to the polls last Wednesday and cast 42,232 votes in what appears to have been one of the liveliest mayoral contests in recent years. There were five candidates, and Dr. J. Lyle Telford, a C.C.F. member of the British Columbia legislature, emerged victorious.

Vancouver tells the world from time to time that it is the third city in Canada, but if that is the case it is a little hard to understand why only 42,232 votes were cast when in Winnipeg a couple of weeks before 61,125 votes were cast in a similar election.

Vancouver may be the third city, but if so how does it come about that it casts only two-thirds as many votes for five mayoral candidates as Winnipeg does for three?

WHEAT AND AUTOS.

(Moose Jaw Times-Herald)

WHAT GOOD CROPS and new money for wheat mean to Eastern Canada is exemplified in a press despatch which tells of Southern Alberta automobile shopping parties to Ontario. Parties of from eight to twenty are being made up bound for eastern automotive centres to take delivery of new cars. One major automobile company's officials tell of the innovation in car merchandising. The purchases are put through the local agent, the old cars turned in and the machines taken over at the factory. The Alberta buyers save the freight, and as one of them said: "The boys get a holiday, see a hockey game or two and a bit of the world." They get a holiday free and leave a lot of wheat money for work and wages in Windsor and Oshawa.

NOT SERIOUS.

(Farmer's Advocate)

THE FEUD between the Federal Prime Minister and Mr. Hepburn, Premier of Ontario, is not a serious matter so long as it is confined to the political arena. Such problems find their own solution as did the break between Rt. Honorable Mr. Bennett and Hon. H. H. Stevens.

The dangerous aspect of the situation is that large numbers of people, already dissatisfied for economic rather than political reasons, will see in the controversy only another example of weakness common to the democratic form of government, and they will think at once of those five words that have long been used with telling effect: "Nero fiddled while Rome bushed."

FIGHT FOR FIDO.

(New York World-Telegram)

THERE'S hardly been a shortage of things to worry about lately, but the issue raised in the divorce case of Mr. and Mrs. William Hurd, at San Francisco, seems to us to demand attention. They couldn't agree what should be done with their dog. So finally the judge awarded custody of the animal to Mrs. Hurd on week days and to Mr. Hurd on Sundays. Whether this is satisfactory to the Hurds is not made clear. More important, we think, is whether it is satisfactory to the dog.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

AND in the thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah began Ahab the son of Omri to reign over Israel ....And Ahab the son of Omri did evil in the sight of the Lord above all that were before him.

And Elijah the Tishbite, who was of the inhabitants of Gilead, said unto Ahab, As the Lord God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word.

And the word of the Lord came unto him, saying, Get thee hence, and turn thee eastward, and hide thyself by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan. And it shall be, that thou shalt drink of the brook; and I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there.

And so he went and did according unto the word of the Lord: for he went and dwelt by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan. And the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening; and he drank of the brook.—I Kings xvi, 29, 30; xvii, 1-6.

SHE WON HER BET.

(Toronto Telegram)

WE KNOW a woman who has just won 25 cents from her husband by her proficiency to back a car into a tight parking place. She told us the acid test was the culmination of months of irritation.

She had been fretting at the way newspapers headline petty accident stories with "Woman Driver...." and their neglect to give similar publicity to men drivers. So recently she was in the car with her husband and they were looking for a place to park. They did find a spot, too, tucked in behind a double row of cars, and friend husband scoffed at the idea that anyone could thread their way in without scraping fenders coming and going. "Move out," said his wife, and seized the wheel. Of course it took a lot of effort. And there was a gallery on the sidewalk as she went forward one inch and back one inch, slowly but surely easing the car into the tiny vacancy. But she did it. Without any fenders being scraped.

Husband gallantly paid her the quarter. And a truck driver waiting nearby doffed his hat to her when she somewhat wearily staggered out of the car.

DOESN'T NEED TO GO.

(Brockville Recorder and Times)

IT IS REALLY not necessary for Mr. Hepburn to go to Australia to find out about that Commonwealth's financing. The Finance Department at Ottawa can tell him all that he wishes to know about it, and so can the Statistics Branch.

But the public ought to know that, under orthodox and voluntary methods, the average rate of interest on Canada's public debt, and that the interest charges on Canada's larger public debt are less than those resting upon the Australian public debt.

Under ordinary refunding methods we have brought down our average rate of interest farther than Australia was able to do under a conversion that was partly compulsory, and if, as Mr. Hepburn seems to think we should do, we should now turn to partial reduction of our obligations to those who have invested in our securities, there would be most damaging effect, upon our not unsuccessful efforts to attract capital from other parts of the world.

A Bit of Nonsense

Passivity

"Does yo' take this woman for yo' lawfully wedded wife?" asked the colored parson, glancing at the diminutive, watery-eyed, bow-legged bridegroom, who stood shrinking behind fifteen stones of femininity.

"Ah takes nothing," responded the bridegroom. "Ah's bein' took!"

ROMANCE INC.

BY OREN ARNOLD

CHAPTER 35

IT SEEMED like an hour or two that Dr. Holgate stood there, moving his chin, but uttering nothing sensible, staring at the boor who had forced Sara Sue onto the dance floor. He saw her now, trying to push away from the huge fellow, who was grinning. Then a man touched Dr. Holgate's elbow.

"Wasn't that the girl you brang?" queried Mr. White, Leila's husband.

Mr. White, a ship's carpenter, had mentioned earlier that he was proud to know Thornton.

"Why—yes! Yes, it is!" Thornton still seemed frozen, immobile.

"Well, I'd of smacked him over the fo'cas'le, m'self. Whyn't you do it?"

"Ah. Yes! Yes, I shall, Mr. White!"

Thornton came to life, and when he did so he walked onto the dance floor. Sara Sue almost bumped into him then. She had struggled free, but Mr. Duke O'Reilly was still grinning and pursuing her.

Whereupon Dr. Thornton Holgate, who was accustomed to swimming, and who played a very good game of tennis on occasions, drew back his right arm.

SPLAT!

It didn't make an awful lot of noise, but everybody seemed to hear it.

Mr. O'Reilly, amply warned, had tried to duck too late. Now he seemed to fold up, knees and midships, and he dropped in a heap on the floor.

"Wham!" said some bystander, enthusiastically. "What'd he do, Mister?"

A circle of people had formed. The music stopped. And at that juncture Mr. White, Leila's husband, stepped forward, fists up.

"Well, if O'Reilly's got a gang here, where are ye? Me an' Holgate here's achin' for more exercise. Ain't we, Holgate?"

"Why, ah—yes! Yes, just come on! One does not dare insult ladies in this assembly! I—that is, we—will—will smack them over the fo'cas'le. I am with you, White, one hundred percent."

Nobody thought it funny. In fact, it wasn't funny—unless one could have known the old Thornton Holgate intimately and been peeking in. A man in a tuxedo had knocked out a sailor, and another sailor had stood up for the man in the tux. Who wants to fight now?

Nobody did, and the dance went on. Some fellows dragged Duke O'Reilly out and revived him, but by that time Sara Sue and Thornton were on their way home.

"I am proud to know you," Mr. White repeated, bidding them goodby. "I'd thank you to come and see me and Leila some time. I want she should know folk better than me. I'm just a sailor. She married beneath her station, and—"

"I am sure she did not, Mr. White," Thornton declared, shaking hands, "even though she is a charming lady. We certainly hope to see you both again. I enjoyed the evening. I am grateful for your assistance in the little—ah—difficulty, also."

She had refused both Bob Towne and T. J. Sanders when they had asked her for church dates this morning, and now she was doubly glad. She wanted to be alone. Or at least to be with her own private affairs. She soon found herself talking with black Cleo.

"Uhm uhm, you sho keeps yo'self busy, ma'am," Cleo was saying. "You got more love business than you 'magined you'd have, I expect."

"I surely have, Cleo!"

There had been the upsetting episode of the Gurleys. The Gurleys, man and wife now! Youngsters still in their teens. Sara Sue sometimes had moments of conscience about that. Should she have stopped their marriage—or tried to—instead of aiding it? Well, they'd both be 18 in a few days, and if ever she saw a perfect match, this was it. Moreover, they would have eloped anyway; Marcia's own father, who had flown to Houston when he got the news, admitted that. Sara Sue had been instrumental in keeping them both in Rice.

She had "lectured" Worthington's father. "World conditions today are not like they were 20 years ago, Mr. Gurley. Maybe your son acted for the best, after all. He will keep his chin up, whatever you do; he has pride. And he has friends, I can assure you. I hope you don't be too hard on him."

Mr. Gurley, Sr., had mumbled and rumbled a lot, and ended up by giving the married kids his blessing. He said it would cramp his bank account, but he would at least keep Worthington in school. And Marcia promptly found herself a spare-time job—and stayed in school, too!

"Anyway, I have that romance settled," Sara Sue told Cleo. "At least for a while. I think it will stick, too. They really love each other."

"Yes'm, they does," Cleo agreed. "You settles things well. Other people's troubles, I mean. But—Miss Sara Sue, ma'am—"

"What, Cleo?"

"How 'bout your own love affairs, ma'am? Is you happy your own self?"

"Uhm. No'm, you ain't You cain't fool old black Cleo!"

You couldn't indeed, fool old black Cleo. Sagacious, observant, wise in a race-old wisdom that was better than any literacy of the whites, Cleo knew!

"Miss Sara Sue, when you tol' me all about M'stuh Dr. Holgate, ma'am, your eyes just shine all over the place, and have a far-away look in 'em. Tell your ol' colored frien', ma-am, is everything perfectly all right?"

"Certainly, Cleo." The white girl was a trifle embarrassed.

"He a fine looking gentlemun. Calc'lus say he powerful smart."

"He is smart. He's a professor."

"Calc'lus say he been setting' up to Miss Peaches Pomeroy."

"Yes, he is love with—why Cleo! That's a secret! Don't you ever mention that to anyone. You hear me?" Sara Sue was astounded at the thought of having broken a confidence.

"You knows I don't tell nothin', nevuh! But that don't mean I don't know nothi'! That ain't all I knows, eithuh."

Sara Sue looked at her cook. "What else do you know, Cleo? I ought to discharge you at once! Maybe I will!"

"No'm, you won't. You's my baby, and you thinks a heap of me, and you knows you do, heh-heh. Ah has to keep a close look-out over you, all the time. You knows you ain't talkin' with no stranguh, honey."

Sara Sue knew it, truly. She loved Cleo, in a very real way. No more loyal servant ever lived; no better friend, in her earnest way. Their relationship was not a rare one down south. Sara Sue smiled sweetly at her, feeling almost like a little child, like the baby that Cleo called her.

"Peoples awful proud of you, honey. You see yourself in the paper that day? Law, Miss Sara Sue, ma'am, a million peoples calls here about that! They proud of you. So is we all. And I betcha so is M'stuh Professuh Holgate, ma'am."

"He's a real hero, Cleo. He saved two lives, and last night he—"

Sara Sue was off again, talking, opening her heart. She told Cleo the whole story of his evening at the dance hall, told it with enthusiasm. But she finished rather lamely.

"I—I took him out there," she tried to explain, "to get the experience at dancing. He has been taking private dancing lessons, and I wanted a good place for him to practice. Then he can—can go to dances better with—Peaches."

"Um, yassum. But Miss Sara Sue, honey—". The old woman spoke with infinite tenderness now. "You ain't telling nobody nothing. The truth is, honey, you been awful busy helping othuh peoples with they love business, but you ain't done right by your own self. You coulda already made marriage with Mistuh Bob, I bets. And Mistuh T. J.—lawdy, he worships the groun' you walks on! But you is yearnin' your heart for anothuh man. Now ain't you, honey?"

Slowly, Sara Sue nodded, staring out a window. Tears were glistening in her eyes.

Cleo put a fat arm around her "baby" and petted her a bit. Then she moved away. "I brews you a cuppa tea, honey. It perks you up, quick." Cleo had deliberately changed the subject. The truth was, she had choked with emotion herself, "her own self" she would have expressed it. Tears dimmed her own eyes.

Sara Sue drank the tea gratefully, talking little but thinking much. It was true. She fully realized it now. Realized what she had tried desperately to keep a secret even from herself. Sipping from the steaming cup, she admitted now that she loved Thornton Holgate more than anything else in all the world.

And she was pledged to help him make love to another girl, one whom—how cruel is circumstance sometimes!—she knew to be thoroughly unworthy of him, but for whom he had admitted his own devotion.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, December 27

THE LUNAR transits for this day indicate a rapid movement of events, with the forces and faculties under extremely high pressure. This may apply with notable effect to the promotion of new projects in which large issues are at stake. It probably will call for the assistance of employers, superiors or those in places of prestige and power, and these will be found ready and willing. Speculative matters also thrive but let not little peculiarities of the mind prove of detriment.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of great activity and high pressure in important new projects, with the assured co-operation of those in place and power. Seek these if plans are practical and well-developed, but be careful as to peculiar mental slants.

A child born on this day may be enterprising, aggressive and practical, with probably a leaning to sound inventions. This should advance it in standing and favor with superiors.

For Wednesday, December 28

THE SPIRIT of Christmas still abides with surprising force and joyousness, fostered by most benefic planetary auspices. Social, domestic and romantic activities still hold the interest, largely because of some subtle and fascinating events that spell intrigue, secrecy or undercover attachments. But these carry a menace of malice, gossip or deep hostility that should be guarded against.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves engulfed in a year in which the sentimental, romantic, social and artistic engage the attention, relegating more sordid activities into the background unless they partake of this more alluring quality. Intrigues and secrecy abound in this connection, calling for discretion and wariness against gossip, slander and bitter attack. Friends, especially women, may be appealed to for support.

A child born on this day may be devoted to the cultural, mystical, romantic and probably the curious and unusual, rather than the practical and sordid. It may have an out-of-the-ordinary gift for fine creative art expression, or devote its life to altruism or social betterment.

11 Mayors, 65 Reeves Given Acclamation

TORONTO, Dec. 27 — (C.P.). — Clearing the way for municipal elections next Monday, hundreds of candidates in all parts of Ontario will qualify to-day. Nominations were filed yesterday as a clean-up, many centres having held elections on December 5 last.

Acclamations mounted steadily as nominees withdrew. Mayors were elected in at least 11 towns and cities and about 65 reeves gained posts by acclamation. J. R. Joyce was named Mayor in Welland after T. J. Hardy declined to stand for office.

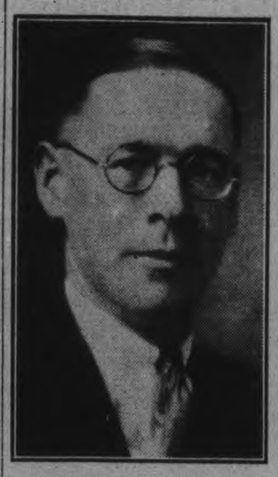
Indications were that competition will be keen in many centres, should favorites nominated allow their names to go before the voters. In Mount Brydges, recently the scene of a bank robbery, however, the situation was different.

No one wants the job of governing the Western Ontario police village. No names were forwarded yesterday for the three-man board of trustees. Arrangement will be made for another nomination meeting shortly.

Mayors were acclaimed in Ridgetown, Campbellford, Copper Cliff, Coniston, Blenheim, Welland, Palmerston, Burlington, Uxbridge, Preston, and Bothwell. No women were named in the Maycralty field, but a small number were nominated for other positions.

The Nickel Belt towns of Copper Cliff and Coniston returned their 1938 Councils. Mayor E. A. Collins will serve his tenth term in Copper Cliff, while it will be the fifth term for Mayor E. T. Austin of Coniston. Alexander McNiven, Copper Cliff councillor, will serve his 21st year as a civic father.

Reeve Retires



Reeve Roy Brown of Burleigh and Anstruther, a former warden of Peterborough county, who withdrew his name as a candidate for the reeveship for 1939, ending for the time being at least a successful municipal career. He was a valued member of the county council, was known as one of its most keen men.

Looking Back On This Date

One hundred years ago today (Dec. 27, 1838), the trails began at London, Ont., of the raiders upon Windsor on Dec. 4. Forty-four in all were indicted. Five of them turned Queen's evidence. All those arraigned were given fair trails, found guilty and sentenced to be hanged. But only six were executed—Joshua G. Doan of Sugar Loaf, Upper Canada; Amos (or Thomas) Perley, Saint John, N. B.; Hiram B. Lynn of Middlesex, Daniel D. Bedford, Hope township, U. C.; Albert Clark, New Hampshire; and Cornelius Cunningham, Beachville.

The informers were recommended to mercy and released within a year; 18 of those who had been most prominent in the raid were transported to Van Dieman's Land, while the others were in time pardoned and sent to their homes. Those transported were kept in jails at Toronto and Kingston until the following October when they were shipped from Quebec.

Lynn was hanged Jan. 7; Bedford, Jan. 11; Clark, Jan. 14; Cunningham, Feb. 14; and Doan and Perley, Feb. 6. The latter made an address from the scaffold in which he said: "The cause that led me to my present unhappy fate was the false and wicked misrepresentations of your own citizens. A conviction of this should rest on the minds of the disaffected and disloyal and speak in a voice of thunder to them to beware of the same sin. You can accomplish the object for which you are contending much sooner by reform than by revolution and correct the abuses of which you complain by petitioning and through the ballot box and restore peace once more to your unhappy country, with all its attendant blessings."

These Reformers are regarded by many people in Western Ontario as political martyrs; their graves in North Norwich and Sparta are carefully tended and often decorated by Canadians of the present day, and doubtless they will not be neglected when the centenaries of their deaths arrive next January and February.

Distributed Baskets

MARMORA, Dec. 27. — Santa Claus's farewell to the streets of Marmora was taken on Christmas eve when after an hour spent in visiting the stores, in the company of local Legionnaires, he visited several local homes with gifts of provisions for the needy made possible through the donations of individuals and the Women's Institute for whom the local branch of the Legion assumed the responsibilities of distribution.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

WHEN KNARF and Hanid came into the room where Mother always did the sewing, they found the kitten had climbed up in the chair. It was peering into the sewing basket.

Knarf said: "What are you doing in that chair, kitten?"

"I'm just looking in the sewing basket."

"What are you looking for?"

"Oh! I'm just looking."

"There isnt anything to eat in that basket," Hanid put in. "If you're looking for a saucer of cream, you'll never find it in that sewing basket."

"I'm not looking for a saucer of cream, thank you. I've just had a saucer of cream." But it kept right on looking in the sewing basket.

Kitten Tells Why

Then Knarf said in a loud voice: "Now I know very well you are looking at something in that sewing basket! Tell us what it is. You'd better be truthful, too. It isn't nice of kittens to go on pretending like this."

"Well," said the kitten, looking a little ashamed. "It's the spool of thread—the spool of blue thread. Isn't it beautiful?"

Knarf and Hanid looked at the kitten for a moment without speaking. Then Knarf began to laugh.

"Oh! You're very funny, kitten. What would you do with that spool of blue thread? You can't sew."

"I was going to roll it over the floor. I was going to chase it round and round, under the chairs, under the sofa and all around the plant stand."

"And what do you think would happen to the blue thread if you did

"I was going to roll it."

that?" Hanid said sternly.

"I guess it would come off—that's what would happen to it," the kitten answered in a quiet voice. "But I wouldn't mind that. I'd let it come off as much as it wanted too."

Then Knarf and Hanid burst out laughing. "You wouldn't mind a bit—but mother would. Oh! how she'd look at you if you took that spool out of the sewing basket and rolled it over the folro and got the rolled it over the floor and got the How she'd scold you and say: 'You naughty kitten—leave this room at once and hide yourself!' That's what she'd say."

"Oh!" said the kitten in surprise. "I guess I'd better not think of rolling the spool then." And it sprang off the chair and hurried out of the room. And if it hasnt stopped, I'm sure it's hurrying still.

Here Are 4 Proved Ways To Relieve Discomforts of Colds

1 Head-Cold Sniffles and Misery. Melt a spoonful of Vicks VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water, then inhale the steaming vapors. These medicated vapors loosen phlegm, clear air-passages, make breathing easier. Then, at bedtime, massage throat and chest with VapoRub; leave bed-covering loose around neck so the medicated vapors, released by body heat, can be inhaled freely during the night. VapoRub's direct action brings comfort—relieves local congestion—helps you relax into restful sleep. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

2 Coughing or Sore Throat due to the cold. Use steam treatment outlined above. Also put a small lump of VapoRub on the tongue. It melts, trickles slowly down—bathes the throat with soothing medication which brings comforting relief to the irritated membranes and checks tendency to cough.

3 Night Coughs due to colds—especially of children—can often be prevented by massaging VapoRub on throat and chest at bedtime.

4 Chest Colds. Thoroughly massage VapoRub on throat, chest and back. Then spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth. VapoRub goes right to work—two ways at once: (1) Direct through the skin like a poultice; (2) Direct on the irritated air-passages as its medicated vapors are inhaled with every breath. This direct double action loosens phlegm—eases coughing—clears the air-passages—eases muscular soreness or tightness—relieves local congestion.

Children's Colds are always a problem to mothers. Neglect is dangerous, because it often paves the way for more serious trouble. But constant internal dosing is risky, too. It often upsets a delicate little stomach, lowers resistance just when it is most needed to overcome the cold and ward off complications . . . It is for these reasons that most mothers depend on VapoRub to relieve the misery of their children's colds. With VapoRub there's no needless dosing, no risk of stomach upsets. It can be used freely; as often as needed, on even the youngest child.

Many Other Ways in which VapoRub can help you are described in the medically-approved directions folder that comes in each VapoRub package.

Hastings Gives 1938 Council An Acclamation

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Dec. 27.—A precedent for recent years was set here Monday when the town council was returned for a second term without a contest.

Reeve Lewis E. Kelly will return to office without defeat in nine consecutive years. He was a member of the council for seven years and is embarking on the second term in reeve's chair.

Fowlds May Drop Out.

Two nominees were named for a one man vacancy in the Hydro Commission for a two year period. They are Dr. W. E. Wilson, retiring member of the board and Walter M. Fowlds, former member. Mr. Fowlds told the meeting if Dr. Wilson wished to contest the seat, he would not oppose him. Each nominee indicated he would accept the seat if the other would relinquish his nomination. They left the meeting with the understanding they would settle the matter between themselves and assured those present there would be no election.

Those nominated, their mover and seconder were as follows:

Reeve—Lewis E. Kelley, proposed by Eden Bond, seconded by William McEachnie.

Council—William McEachnie, proposed by Stanley Stevenson, seconded by Charles Lynch; Charles Lynch, proposed by Stanley Stevenson, seconded by William McEachnie; Stanley Stevenson, proposed by Charles Lynch, seconded by William McEachnie; Iden Bond, Sr., proposed by Stanley Stevenson, seconded by William McEachnie.

Hydro Commissioner—Walter M. Fowlds, proposed by Iden Bond, seconded by William Lynch; Dr. W. E. Wilson, proposed by William Lynch, seconded by Otter Scriver.

In his address to the meeting, Dr. Wilson outlined activities of the hydro commission for the past year.

Rural Work

He told of a good deal of rural work done which gave employment to local men. The commission did not have to do this work but received 10 per cent on the labor and 16 per cent on work done by E. M. Hess, the linesman. He pointed out that criticism had been directed to the commission for not paying higher wages to the men for rural line labor. The men were paid 25 cents per hour where they could have been paid 35 cents, H.E.P.C. wages.

If 35 cents was paid for rural work the same must be paid in the village, according to information he received from the Ontario commission, Dr. Wilson said.

According to figures given by the speaker, street lighting for this municipality in 1931 under the old system was costing council approximately $2,200. In the past six years this municipality has saved $6,711 under the new system. This figure includes the addition of colored lights and more street lights.

Reeve Speaks

Reeve Lewis Kelley thanked the Women's Institute and church organizations for aiding the town needy families during the year. He thanked the council for its co-operation. "It was the best council I have sat with in the past eight years," he commented.

"Since our agreement with the counties regarding the forfeiting of county rebates had run out in 1937, they owe us the amount of $256," he said. The county engineer recommended to the reeve that Hastings paved strtets should be resurfaced in 1939. This would be done at an estimated cost of $600, and the county would pay for this work and charge it back to Hastings' rebates until the cost was provided for. Now that an agreement has been signed with the Department of Highways to take over the road from the southwest limits of town to the northeast limits as a connecting link, it will lessen the cost of resurfacing for a distance of more than a mile. The ratepayers have seen the new 4½ mill rate on their assessment bills to cover the cost of education for high school pupils attending out of town high schools. This was brought about by the new provincial schools act which cost this municipality $1.367 this year.

This amount is made up with cost per day per pupil attending high school. Under the previous system, high school costs were charged to every municipality in the county according to their equalized assessment.

The reeve pointed out that $500 had been paid off a $1,500 note and they expect to pay another $500 by the end of the year. "We have no able-bodied people here on relief," he said. "We have a woodlot to take care of those able to work."

Referring to the morale of the municipality he stated, "We have the finest town in Ontario. There was only one man fined here this year and he was from out of town.

One railway in England will renew 569 miles of track and 65 bridges in 1939.

French men Marvel At Strangely-Clad Visitors

A group of slightly puzzled young French soldiers cast curious eyes at an equally-puzzled group of American football players. The latter are part of the two teams taken to France by Jim Crowley, coach of Fordham University, to stage exhibition games of the gridiron sport for the edification of the citizens of "la belle France." The boys were getting in a little practice when the French lads wandered over, and after a look, probably reached the conclusion that the demonstration of "le rugby American" were clothed more suitably for warfare than they were themselves.

Deloro Returns Its Council

MARMORA, Dec. 27—At the nomination meeting of Deloro village council held on Monday acclamation was accorded last year's Reeve and council as follows: Reeve, T. B. Wright; council, F. A. Bapty, R. A. Elliott, N. A. McNally, W. Mumby.

Retiring public school trustees were H. R. Haacke and W. M. Regan. These were re-elected for two years and E. Bradley was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the lamented death last August of W. R. Reynolds. Other members of the School board serving a further year are D. Robertson, A. V. Yates and H. C. Barlow.

Fractures His Leg

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Dec. 27 — Hector (Huck) McArthur, Campbellford electrician, suffered a broken leg at T. J. Lynch's farm Friday. He was installing a radio aerial on the roof of the house when he fell a distance of ten feet to the ground, from a ladder. He lost his balance. Dr. W. N. Campbell attended the injured man, who was later removed to his home.

Keen Contests

all three have qualified. For the council the field consists of John Booth, the only member of this year's council to run for the council again, Vernal Windsor, former reeve, Archie Wilson, Joseph Church and Louis Blackwell.

South Monaghan.

The municipal meeting at Centreville Monday afternoon returned the South Monaghan council of 1938 by acclamation. No contentious question were mentioned in the addresses, and apparently the ratepayers of the township are well satisfied with the present administration. The members of the council are:— Reeve Roy Whittington and Councillors H. C. Barnard, Fred Barnard, Reg. Ferrin and Robert Thompson. Charles Fisher was also proposed but requested that his name be withdrawn.

Harvey Township.

Reeve Wallace Shearer and Charles Flynn were nominated for the reeveship of Harvey township Monday and both will stand. For the council the following were nominated Ernest Irwin, H. Brock, Charles Ireland, Arthur Haines and Gale Elliott.

Havelock Village

Havelock, traditional election hot spot named four men men for the reeveship and eleven for the four seats on the council. An election is assured at least for council as five had qualified for council at nine o'clock this morning.

E. W. Sweeney, E. J. Leeson, Fred Pollock and T. P. Lancaster were sponsored for the reeve's chair and E. J. Leeson was the first to qualify. For the council the following were named, the first four being the 1938 members, all of whom have qualified so far: James Wilde, Everett Chiles, J. L. Squires, and D. A. Ford. Kenneth Greene, one of the other nominees has qualified and the others named are Fred Pollock, Richard Sanderson, James W. Ketchen, E. J. Leeson, William Griffiths and Bruce A. Curtis.

Lakefield Village

Twelve were nominated for council in the village of Lakefield along with Charles Tanner, 1938 reeve and Gordon Scriver, both of whom were sponsored for the guiding position. Whether or not an election would result was difficult to determine today as Lakefield was enjoying a holiday and the nominees have until noon on Wednesday to qualify for office.

Those named for council are D. V. Miller, Gordon Scriver, W. J. Hendren, Charles Armstrong, the four members of the 1938 council, and also George Graham, Judson Hull, George Chartren, Earl Edwards, Alf Hudson, Melville Kingston, Ernie Allen, Wilbert Frankish.

For School Board the following were put forward, E. H. Northey, E. J. Millage, Charles Lake, Sam White, R. J. Knox, Melville Kingdon and Allan Clarke.

Norwood Village.

At Norwood an election is probable as four have been nominated for Reeve and nine for council. J. R. Thompson, reeve in 38 is nominated along with T. P. Rork, Charles Brown and W. H. Montgomery. For council the following men were sponsored, T. P. Rork, Bert Scott, Earl Cuthbertson and P. S. Lochead, the 1938 council along with D. A. Barton, Milden Hall, Rev. J. J. McIntosh, R. J. Tedford, and Harry Rogers. No nominee had qualified at 9 this morning.

The three members of the 1938 Board of Education were nominated indicating an acclamation but at 9 this morning none had qualified. They are M. W. Bailey, E. M. Lumsden and Wellington Burgess. A. F. Kempt was acclaimed member of the Hydro Commission.

ASPHODEL TOWNSHIP.

Opinion around Westwood this morning indicated the likelihood of an election in Asphodel Township with the report that six of the nominees for Council had stated that they intended to contest the four seats. There was also some intimation that Reeve John McColl might meet with opposition, but there was nothing definite in that respect. Those who were nominated yesterday were: For Reeve—Reeve John McColl, Sam Buck and Alexander Lealtch; for Council—James Healey, James Humphries, A. Lealtch, and Thomas Stevenson of this year's Council, and also Golden Andrews, R. G. Girven, David Walsh, William Buck, Edward Sargent, and George Renwick.

GALWAY-CAVENDISH.

With the retirement of Reeve John Clark in Galway-Cavendish at Monday's nominations, it was believed at Kinmount to-day that he would be succeeded by Councillor David Curtin, although James Allen has also been proposed for the Reeveship. The four Councillors have been elected by acclamation as follows: William Dudman, Peter Pearson, Frank Flaherty, and Ellsworth Jackson.

Il Duce To See

French notice that not an inch of France's territory in Africa or anywhere else would be ceded to Italy drew now attacks today in the Fascist press.

Il Messaggero asserted France herself had upset Mediterranean equilibrium in the negotiation of a yet unratified treaty with Syria which, the paper said, gave France "notable advantages and privileges of a military character." The treaty was designed to terminate France's Syrian mandate and establish Syria as an independent country.

The French ambassador sent a note to the foreign office yesterday refusing Italy further colonial grants. It was a reply to an Italian communication holding invalid the 1935 Italian-French agreement on positions in North Africa.

Il Popolo Di Roma said a part of the French press was leading "natural Italian aspirations" with "provocative language" to alarm British opinion.

Commenting on a statement made by a French writer in a London paper that the "fate of Djibouti (Red Sea port in French Somaliland) is the fate of Aden (seaport and British protectorate in southwest Arabia)," Il Popolo Di Roma said:

"Let it be said for the peace of this writer—who does not know or pretends not to know that the southern key of the Red Sea is the important island of Perim (Arabia) over which the British flag flies—that if Djibouti commanded the entrance the English would have taken it before the French."

Italians charged that Premier Edouard Daladier of France was trying to prevent Great Britain from seeking a settlement of Italian claims against France and described Daladier's forthcoming trip to Corsica and Tunisia as having a political and military character. Some editors asserted one of the premier's chief aims was to make more difficult the appeasement mission of Prime Minister Chamberlain when he comes to Rome Jan. 11.

WORK OR GET OUT

FREDERICTON—(CP). — Able-bodies inmates of the Fredericton Municipal Home must work or get out, Mayor C. Hedley Forbes declared at a city council meeting. As a matter of fact no able-bodied man should be admitted to the home, he contended.

Returned In Otonabee

Reeve William A. Anderson of Otonabee township, who was returned to office by acclamation at Monday's nomination meeting in Keene. A man of keen mind, exceptionally well versed in township and county affairs, he has been warden of the county and a member of provincial legislature.

Fight Assured For Seats On Seymour Council

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 27. — Strong exception to the bill for $265.00 presented by Percy township to Seymour was voiced at the nomination meeting held here on Monday afternoon. Referring to the matter Deputy Reeve Wiliam Ross who offered a brief review of the year's work complained that the township (Seymour) should be advised in advance when work involving such an amount is to be done on a boundary road. He felt that in future an arrangement similar to that of a farm line fence should be adopted. Mr. Ross, who was chief speaker in the absence, due to illness of Reeve R. W. Innes, also touched on the subject of school costs claiming the cost per pupil per day at Campbellford High school was 70.917 cents, a figure considerably in excess of such towns as Norwood 26.92c, Trenton, 36.79c, and Cobourg 47.83c. "This is something I can't understand," he declared.

Councillor J. H. Kelly revealed the cost of applying gravel, including crushing and labor, in the northwest section of the township was 76 cents per yard. The two most important road projects were the placing of fill at the approach to No. 30 Highway near the Woodland cheese factory and the cutting down of a hill on the 9th Line near Thos. Fry's. He said he would be in field for councillor again.

A total of 1,264 yards of crushed gravel had been placed on the township roads stated Wesley Stevens, reading from a statement given him by Reeve Robert Innes. Increasing relief costs, road maintenance and a larger number of sheep killed during the year accounted for an extra mill on the tax rate it was learned.

Councillor Robert Bateson, who dwelt at some length on the cost of repairing the boundary road stated he would again be in the field for councillor.

A new man on the council last year M. Wight of Trent River announced his intention to run again for the office.

Frank Lee said he would be a candidate for either the office of reeve or deputy reeve.

Nominated for both reeve and councillor William Rowe announced himself as a candidate for one of the two offices.

Percy Oddie did not say whether or not he would be in the field for councillor nor did Alfre Barnum make his intentions known.

Messrs. William McKenzie and Lindsay Anderson, two other nominated for council stated definitely they would not be in the field.

Following is a list of those nominated for the various offices with the asterik (*) denoting the present occupant of the seat during 1938.

For Reeve: William Rowe, William Duncan, Frank Lee, William Ross, Robest Innes*.

Deputy Reeve: Frank Lee, Robert Bateson, William Duncan, William J. Ross*.

and he added they were still seeking to have the county assume this bridge. A grant of $250 had been obtained through Alex L. Elliott, M.P.P., to be used for drainage on the roads, he said.

Reduced Sale In 1939.

Deputy-reeve Fowler, Councillors Tedford and Clark all claimed that it would be possible to make a reduction of two mills on the tax rate in 1939. Councillor McIlmoyl in a few remarks expressed the opinion that the county road rate of two mills had not been sufficient to maintain the roads in the condition demanded by the ratepayers today. He explained that several of the roads in the township had been allowed to fall into a bad state of disrepair and with a two mill rate it was impossible to put them in proper shape. In 1939 with a three mill rate he was certain a splendid job could be done on the roads.

Former Reeve Speaks.

George Mullen, former reeve of the township said he could not understand why the tax rate should be raised to the point it reached in 1938 and took exception to the figures put forward by Reeve Mann relative to school costs. At the conclusion of his talk he was invited by Reeve Mann to view the books of the township and he would find proof of all the statements made. He also stated the County should not have saddled the township with the maintenance costs of the Lily Lake bridge.

All of the members nominated spoke briefly and all with the exception of Gordon Hancock were undecided on whether they would stand or not. E. A. Scott said he would let his name stand but would not cause an election.

O. J. Hayward, one of those present who accepted the chairman's invitation to speak said "Relief is a bugbear. There is work for everyone who wants to work" and the gallery roundly applauded this statement. He criticised those who refused to vote on election day and expressed regret that young men and women were not taking a greater interest in the affairs of the municipality. He was definitely in favor of an acclamation and said everyone was talking economy, therefore an acclamation would be putting this gospel into practise. "We couldn't get a better council than we had in 1938", he remarked in closing.

G. H. Simpson of 224 Barnardo avenue explained that he had nominated Allan T. Brown because the Smith township residents living directly outside the northern boundary of the city felt their population was sufficient to warrant representation on the Council. He added however that the Council of 1938 had extended this section every consideration.

The nominations were as follows: For Reeve, Allan B. Mann, by C. E. Moore and J. H. Lewis; George Mullen, by William Bickell and Stanley Roseborough; For Deputy, Harry Fowler, by W. Telford and Harry Archer; W. A. Roseborough by Erle Tully and Hilliard Dunford. Councillors, Allan T. Brown by George H. Simpson and Orville Deyell; Harold Lewis by Lorne Reynolds and Erle Tully; Gordon Mancock by W. C. Mann and Reg. McMullen; Eric Pearson by Fred Armstrong and George E. Mullen; Ernest A. Scott by James Anderson and J. W. F. Hall; Milton Clark by Percy Kidd and Elmer Milburn; Gilbert McIlmoyle by Eli Bustin and Reginald Bell; William J. Tedford by William Bullock and Hilliard Dunford.

Aged Woman Dies Three Days After Son Buried

Only three days after her son had been buried, Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald died at her home on Lot 8, Concession 1, Douro township, on Sunday morning. She was in her 83rd year, and had been ill only a short time.

She died at the family residence, the same home in which her son, Fred Fitzgerald, died a week ago yesterday. Mrs. Fitzgerald was widely known through the district and her death, following so closely after that of her son, has cast sorrow over the area.

She was the widow of Patrick Fitzgerald and had spent all her life in the Douro district. She was the daughter of the late James Leahy and Margaret O'Leary.

She was a great church woman, active in all its phases, keenly concerned about its welfare. She was a member of St. Joseph's church, Douro, and of the Catholic Women's League and the Altar Society.

Surviving are one son, Thomas Fitzgerld, and three daughters, Mrs. Edward Clancy of Hastings, Mrs. Charles Whibbs of Peterborough, and Miss Margaret Fitzgerald, at home. He leaves to mourn his loss his aged grandmother, Mrs. S. Holland of Coe Hill; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holland, besides four brothers and three sisters, all at home.

Reeve Griffith And His Councillors To Get Red Hot Fight In Belmont

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Dec. 27 — Isaac Anderson, 34-year-old member of the Belmont and Methuen townships council definitely stated that he intended to oppose present Reeve William E. Griffith at the polls New Year's Day, for reeveship, at the nomination meeting held Monday afternoon at the Belmont township hall. Although the youngest of the councillors, Mr. Anderson is the oldest in point of experience having served for seven consecutive years on the council. Donald Plunkett also nominated for the reeveship, withdrew, but is standing for re-election to the council.

The hall was jammed to the very doors with enthusiastic ratepayers who listened with interest to the various speeches of the nominees as they were called to the platform by Clerk Grant Dafoe, who acted as chairman of the meeting.

Nominated for the council were Thomas Bannon, Eugene McLaughlin, Frank Sophie, McNeely, Roy McArthur, Floyd Steenburgh, Carl Purdy and ex-Reeve C. F. Steenburgh.

Sophie and McNeely, along with Plunkett all members of the present council announced their intention of seeking re-election, while among the newcomers expected to toss their hat in the ring before 9 o'clock this evening are McLaughlin, McArthur, Floyd Steenburg and Purdy.

From all appearances Belmont-Mthuen is practically assured a red-hot election with Anderson and Griffith fighting it out for reeveship and seven candidates making a bid for a seat on the council.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Wellington Burgess, treasurer, in addressing the ratepayers, drew their attention to the passing of three prominent township citizens during the past year in the persons of the late A. Wilde, F. Breckenridge, and James Russell, and one minute silence was observed in their honor.

Concert At Cavan Is Jolly Event

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, Dec. 27—On Thursday night the annual Sunday School entertainment and Christmas tree was held in the basement of the United church. A large crowd attended and a sizable sum was realized from the silver collection. The efficient chairman was the Rev. J. R. Trumpour.

The entertainment opened with a chorus "Joy to the World." Several recitations from the younger scholars followed. A short dialogue "Interviewing Servant Girls," was presented by Audrey Nill, Bernice Richards, Jean and Joyce Trumpour, Ruth Braithwaite and Norma Gillis, was well received. Chorus of Christmas hymns were sung by the primary class and by the teen-age boys' class. Mr. W. White gave an excellent reading and Fraser Carr sang a song.

An exceptionally well-sung costume trio was the "Three Old Maids of Lynn," whose parts were taken by Nan Fallis, Jean Gillis and Mary Richards.

The pantomine "Silent Night" was given by the Misses Norma Gillis, Bernice Richards, Bea Fallis, and Jean Trumpour.

After the program, Santa appeared, delighting each child with presents and candy from the well-loaded tree.

This Mascot Proved Lucky

"Yummy," the bulldog, shown in a life preserver of the S.S. American Farmer with Arthur Rhodeniser, LEFT, and Arthur Burns, proved to be a lucky mascot for the crew of the 483-ton fishing schooner, Fieldwood, which foundered about 500 miles east off Boston. The American Farmer went to the rescue and brought the crew of the doomed vessel to New York where this photo was made. Rhodeniser and Burns are crew members of the Fieldwood.

FIRST OF SEASON.

Last Monday night's heavy fall of wet snow gave the snow plough contractors their first work of the 1938-39 session and also brought out the city's scraper for the first winter activity this morning.

POLICE FARE WELL.

The police department fared well in the matter of cigars and cigarettes over the Christmas week-end, many gifts from merchants and other citizens having been received as a mark of appreciation of their services during the year.

BAD DRIVING CONDITIONS.

Magistrate E. A. Gee who motored down from Lindsay to preside at the police court here this morning, reported the road in bad condition, heavy snow and ruts making driving precarious. His Worship noticed several cars that had been ditched between Lindsay and here.

CRASH IN STORM.

A car driven by Charles Bolling of South Monaghan, struck the rear of a horse drawn vehicle in charge of J. Buck on the flat road in Otonabee during the snow storm Monday night but according to Provincial Constable David Silvester who investigated no damage was done and no one was hurt.

TOBACCO TAKEN.

The store of Orville Fallis, 405 George street south, was robbed of a quantity of tobacco and cigarettes in a week-end break-in. The place was all right when the police made their rounds but early in the morning a bus driver noticed the door open and reported to the police station.

PURSE IS STOLEN.

While Mrs. T. B. Giffin, 311 Louis street, was shopping in a George street meat market Saturday night a sneak thief stole her purse containing $11 in cash. The stolen purse was found later where the thief had tossed it in the hallway of the Water street branch of the Bank of Montreal, but the money was gone.

STOLEN CAR RECOVERED.

Peterborough police received a message from Toronto Sunday night telling them of the theft of a car in that city earlier in the evening. The stolen machine was recovered by Provincial Constable Gordon E. Broughton five miles east of here on Highway No. 7, Monday morning after it had been reported by a bus driver. The car markers had been changed but the vehicle was identified by the serial number.

POLICE STATION CHRISTMAS.

Seven unfortunate wayfarers had no other shelter Christmas eve than the police station spending the joyous occasion in the doubtful comfort of the cell block. However, the seven did not entirely miss the Christmas celebratiton, for thanks to the generosity of a local citizen they were provided with tickets enabling them to get a Christmas dinner at one of the local restaurants.

POST OFFICE NORMAL

Volume of mail has returned to normal at the Post Office this morning and only a stack of about 200 improperly addressed envelopes remain of the huge stack of Christmas mail which was handled without interruption. The letter carriers will scan the letters which remain and probably identify more than half, and the balance after being checked again by the general delivery clerk will be sent to the dead letter office. This year there will be a very small number which cannot be properly delivered. Despite the large quantity of mail the post office schedules were all maintained during the Christmas season.

CHEMONG'S FLOATING BRIDGE

A picture of the floating bridge at Chemong appeared recently in the Seattle Sunday Times. An editorial on bridges made this mention of the one over Chemong Lake: "But pontoon bridges persisted up to the very beginning of this century and one or two are still afloat. Probably the longest structure of this type in North America stretches across Chemong Lake at Peterborough, Ontario, Canada. A picture of this structure is shown herewith. Note that the photographer could not keep his camera in a horizontal position." Beneath the good reproduction of the floating bridge are these lines: "Funny looking structure that stretches across Chemong Lake at Peterborough, Ontario."

C.P.R. TRAFFIC HEAVY

The special C.P.R. train leaving Peterborough at 8.40 p.m. Monday carried more than 250 passengers for Toronto, Galt, Woodstock, London, Detroit and other western cities; and the regular afternoon train required three extra coaches for the holiday traffic which was nearly as heavy as a year ago.

SKIERS BUSY

Victoria Park was an ideal spot over the week-end for skiers, particularly those venturesome lads and lassies who still belong in the beginner's bracket. There was sufficient snow for good skiing and the slope is gentle so that bad spills are uncommon. Jackson Park, Armour Hill, Nassau and all of the other favorite skiing spots had their quota, while six of the veterans went to Bethany where conditions were ideal.

FREE RINKS CROWDED

Poverty Pond at the east end of the Hunter street bridge was crowded Monday night as the youngsters and adults donned Christmas skates and went for a spin. The ice was reported to be in first class condition. In other parts of the city where free rinks are located crowds took advantage of the good ice, and in several places the dressing rooms were taxed far beyond capacity, many skaters having to change their footwear out of doors.

OUTSTANDING DECORATION

Ernest Watson, 720 Stewart street where the Chemong road begins has a Chritsmas decoration on his verandah that is attracting many favorable comments. Suspended above the verandah is an illuminated star and directly below the star is a miniature stable of Bethlehem with the Babe in the manger, the Virgin Mary, the Three Wise Men and the shepherds and the stable is lighted by a brilliant spotlight set some distance away. A blue canopy of sky with clouds adds to the beauty of the layout.

Dial Telephones Being Placed In City Homes

The process of installing dial telephones in the premises of Peterborough telephone users, which commenced two weeks ago is, according to Manager C. B. Shaver of the Bell Telephone Company, one of many carefully scheduled activities necessary to pave the way for the conversion of the local telephone system to dial operation. It is expected that within six months all subscribers' telephones in Peterborough will be changed to the dial type.

"Before the actual change-over takes place some time in September," Mr. Shaver said, "a construction crew will be required to move poles, set conduit and place thousands of feet of cable containing the tiny wires. Installation experts will terminate these tiny wires on the intricate dial telephone equipment in the new central office, a new number for every subscriber will be carefully chosen for dial operation, a complete new set of information records will be compiled and special demonstrations and literature will be prepared for the purpose of instructing local users in correct dial telephone usage.

Change Hardly Noticeable.

"All these operations will be so carefully coordinated to fit in with the 'cutover' date," Mr. Shaver said, "that the actual change should be scarcely noticeable. The conversion will be accomplished, as if by a wave of a fairy hand, in about two minutes.

"The dial system," Mr. Shaver explained, "is a method of making local telephone connection by means of a dial which is mounted on the subscriber's telephone. As each figure is dialed, a series of electrical impulses is transmitted over the line to the automatic switching apparatus in the telephone office. This mechanism finds the line asked for electrically, and when the connection is made the bell of the called telephone rings. The ringing continues at regular intervals until the called telephone is answered or the call is abandoned. If the called line is in use, a busy signal—a sharp buzzing noise—is heard by the calling subscriber."

In conclusion, Mr. Shaver, emphasized the fact that it will be necessary to change existing telephone numbers. "Therefore," he said, "merchant sand other telephone users who have their telephone numbers printed on notepaper or in any way exhibit them on signs of vehicles will save unnecessary expense by waiting until they are assigned their new number before buying large additional supplies of stationery or advertising matter."

More than a dozen cars caught fire. Explosion of a gasoline tank car caused the wreck. No one was injured.

Percy's Reeve Ray Mallory Is Dropping Out

WARKWORTH, Dec. 27.—The retirement of Reeve Ray R. Mallory of Percy township from the administration of the affairs of the municipality was one of the surprises in the nominations throughout Northumberland Monday. He was one of the outstanding members of the counties council, and was worthy of high place among Percy reeves during recent years, including John McCubbin, W. H. Nelson, C. H. Curtis, Charles Boyce and several others. As chairman of the schools committee at Cobourg Mr. Mallory leaves a rather difficult position bulwarked by the November appointment of two advisory members whose experience will be available for the new committee of 1939. As the council decided, the two associate members are Mr. Mallory, appointed for three years, and Deputy-reeve Garnet Shields of Cavan for two years.

Deputy-reeve Harry Sirrett was returned by acclamation; and for the three seats in the council the following men were proposed: A. Chapman, Roy Darling, C. Peebles, Andrew Kemp, W. Heckbert, Lawrence Naish, George Gummer.

710 Long Distance Calls On Christmas

The joyful voices of Peterborough citizens were heard in far away places on Christmas Day—across a whole continent, even across the Atlantic Ocean.

Furthest call to be placed with the local office of the Bell Telephone Company was to Bradford, England, and there were dozens of others to places like Vancouver, Edmonton, Winnipeg, South Carolina, Chicago, the Maritimes, Montreal, Ottawa. Scarcely a town or city in all Ontario but was connected by telephone with Peterborough at one time or another during the holiday.

The number of telephone greetings that were disseminated from Peterborough to out-of-town points on Sunday topped previous marks for the Yuletide, according to long distance traffic tabulations made by the company. The total of 710 long distance calls for points near and far was, according to C. B. Shaver, manager, 280 calls higher than the December average of 430 and an increase of 57 calls over Christmas Day a year ago, when 653 connections were made.

The record-breaking pace started immediately after 7 o'clock on Christmas Eve, when a greatly augmented operating staff worked methodically to take care of a total of 47,542 calls. On Christmas Eve of 1937, 56,192 calls were handled.

FOUND $32 ON STREET

Here is a Christmas Day story with at least a couple of morals. Monday night as young Harry Webster 518 Water street was on his way home from attending a show he noticed a roll of bills in the snow near the corner of George and Charlotte streets and picking up the money hurried to the police station. There it was found the roll contained $32 and the youngster was warmly commended by the police for his honesty. Later a man reported the loss of $32 to the police, stating the money had dropped out of his pocket. The individual who lost the money had been begging on the street over the holiday week-end. —F.D.C.

Williams is manager, alarms from three chimney fires were run in from the homes of Max Floyd, Mrs. Etta Nicholson and Cliff Anderson in quick succession. Some of the firemen were detained to the threatening chimneys while Chief Williams kept the main force engaged at the B.-A. oil station where the damage was estimated at $800.

Two Traffic Officers Report Clear Holiday

Provincial Traffic Officers Lloyd A. McClure and George E. Broughton give the motorists of this district a clean bill of health so far as driving over the holiday weekend was concerned.

Officer McClure, whose patrol is the Peterborough-Port Hope section of Highway 28 had not a single accident to investigate. "I stopped a number of drivers as a test," he remarked to the Examiner to-day," and there was no smell of liquor on any of them."

Only one minor accident kept Officer Broughton from also reporting an absolutely clean sheet. The sections of Highway No. 7 and 28 under his supervision. This mishap occurred near the Keene turn on Highway 7 during Monday night's snow storm when a car driven by Robert Maybee of Campbellford left the road and plowed down an embankment. Fortunately however the machine did not upset and no damage was done, while the driver and his wife escaped unhurt.

Miss Main Streeters

Many of the main street stores were closed today and their regulars were missing from the familiar scene, lingering as they were along the winding road into the land of enchantment pictured on the Christmas gift wrapping paper. On their way back they were passing the Sweet Shop, the place where they heard the Carolers, the pine trees where they passed the man in the tall hat and the woman in the poke bonnet, Grandma's House, and all the beauty of that road now fading into dreams for another year.

Sixty-five varieties of flowers bloomed in a rectory garden in Norfolk, England, in November.

Mayor F. F. Long Acclaimed For Fifth Term

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 27. — Frank F. Long was given a fifth term as Mayor of the town of Campbellford when he received an acclamation at the annual nomination meeting held here on Monday. Both Reeve Charles Calver and Deputy-Reeve Percy M. Locke were also accorded an acclamation and although nine were nominated for six seats on the Council an election is generally regarded as unlikely. For the Water and Light Commission Charles Davidson was unopposed, and will return to his seat on the Commission for another year.

In his address Mayor Long declared that had it been necessary for him to face an election he could have done so with the utmost confidence since it was the first time in the history of the town of Campbellford that a financial statement disclosed a balance in the bank and nothing owing at the end of the year. Reviewing the progress of the current year he indicated that it had been the policy of the Council to do something each year to improve the appearance of the town. A new parking lot had been placed on the west side of the town and new street lights had been placed in most of the business section during the present year. Other notable work during the year had been the improvement made to the Cenotaph under the careful supervision of A. H. McKeel, the new sewer and water mains to the Separate School and extensive repairs to street pavements and sidewalks had also been made. "This has all been done on a pay-as-you-go basis," he asserted.

"There should be more streets paved and we should also have all of our municipal offices centralized, but lower taxes must come first."

A New Industry.

Making reference to the new industry which would commence operations here early in the spring, he urged electors to go to the polls and vote in favor of a fixed assessment "for we have everything to gain and nothing to lose." The old assessment on these lots was $400, and by granting a fixed assessment of $1,000 for a term of ten years, we will get this increase in revenue.

An Old Home Week in 1939 was regarded as a probability, and this would also serve to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of public ownership of the town's power plant. Concluding, he expressed his thanks to the members of the Water and Light Commission for their work in successfully negotiating to bring the town its first new industry in thirty years.

Up to Government.

"Hospitalization costs us a lot of money and is something the Provincial Government should assume a greater share of the expense in," was the feeling expressd by Reeve C. H. Calver, who will return to the County Council for his fourth successive year.

"There are eight more families on relief than last year," Deputy-Reeve P. M. Locke, chairman of the Relief Committee, stated. "This is due in a large measure to the lack of road work during tht current year."

Chairman of the Finance Committee, N. A. McColl gave an interesting review of the town's finances, tracing the gradual increase in taxation from the year 1934. He held out hope for a further reduction in taxes next year.

A saving if $1,335.74 was effected by the Road and Bridge Committee, claimed P. H. MacMillan, the chairman. This was the only department in which costs came far below the estimates for the year.

The report of the Utilities Commission was presented by Chairman J. O. Benor, who disclosed an increase in the output of power from 2,679,800 kilowatt hours in 1932 to 3,204,500 kilowatt hours in 1938. The distribution system is loaded to capacity as people use more and more power. Next year a number of new 220-volt meters will have to be purchased by the Department, he stated. Of the Waterworks Department he referred to the situation as being "not so bright" with the fact that some definite steps would have to be taken for water storage in the near future. "We are no longer able to pump raw water into our mains, and should anchor ice cripple the main pumping station, the town will be without fire protection," he warned.

School Board Report.

The report of the Board of Education was given by the chairman, F. C. Bonnycastle, and J. R. Battisby, chairman of the Police Committee, told citizens that the town had the best record in years, with not a single person injured in an automobile accident nor a death by drowning during the summer. He paid tribute to the work of the police in keeping the town's record clear.

Nominations for Council were as follows (with present members marked with an asterisk):

R. H. Cole, John O'Sullivan, J. R. Battisby*, N. A. McColl*, A. E. Burgiss*, James Dorie*, Harvey M. Donald*, P. H. McMillan*.

Victor Monaghan Dies Suddenly

Victor (Jimmy) Monaghan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jams F. Monaghan, 60½ Hunter street east, died in St. Joseph's Hospital about 4.30 o'clock Monday afternoon, shortly after having been admitted to the institution.

An autopsy was performed on the order of Coroner Dr. Herb. Young and certain organs will be sent to Toronto for analysis of the contents. It has not yet been definitely decided whether there will be an inquest.

Monaghan who was in his twenty-eighth year had been rooming for several weeks at the home of Daniel Donaghue, Rogers street. Monday afternoon he left the house for a short time and soon after his return went up stairs. A little later he complained that his legs were becoming numb and medical assistance was called and the young man removed to the hospital where death soon ensued.

Monaghan had been a resident of Peterborough for twenty years, coming here from Cordova Mines. He was born in North Bay. Surviving are his wife, a daughter Betty, aged 10 and a son Gordon, eight, his father and mother and two sisters, Ellen and Kay, at home.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock from the funeral home of D. Belleghem and Sons, Hunter street, to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. W. E. Rowland of Mark Street United Church will officiate.

Dispute Over Horse Results In Charge

Charged with assaulting Fred Steinkrauss in Smith township on Monday morning, causing actual bodily harm, Joseph Robertson of Peterborough, who operates a wood camp declined to elect this morning and asked Magistrate E. A. Gee for a week's adjournment to give him a chance to consult a lawyer.

The crown, through E. F. Borbridge, acting crown attorney, agreed to a week's remand, bail being fixed at $500.

Mr. Borbridge remarked that the only objection to not going ahead today was that the injuries sustained by Steinkrauss might have a much different appearance in a week.

Steinkrauss who was in court was asked to stand up and Magistrate Gee scrutinized his bandaged face.

The alleged assault, it is said, arose out of a dispute over a horse.

Terrier Makes Good

ROCKINGHAM, N.C., Dec. 27.—(AP).—A pet terrier owned by the M. L. Tuckers can have anything he wants as a reward. When the dog, highly excited, began tugging at her clothing, Mrs. Tucker followed him to a nearby pond. She found her three-year-old son clinging to a small bush in neck-deep water. The child was rescued and treated for exposure.

Brantford Man Injured On Hastings Street

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Dec. 27. — Severe scalp wounds were suffered by William Millar of Brantford and Betty Munro, aged 7, of Westwood, when the car in which they were riding crashed head-on with a car driven by Lloyd Fleming of Hastings, here on Sunday noon. Four occupants of Millar's car were on their way to a Christmas dinner three miles from here. The accident occurred near Dr. J. A. MacDonald's residence at the corner of Front and New Streets. Millar was said to have been proceeding south and was unable to stop at the stop street due to the slippery condition of the road. Fleming, accompanied by George Wilkins, who were uninjured, were proceeding west on Front Street, when both cars collided at the corner. Millar's car went across the road and crashed into a tree, causing additional injuries to its four occupants.

The injured were removed to Dr. J. A. MacDonald's office, where several stitches were required to close gaping wounds on the heads of the driver and little girl. They were taken back to Westwood. Neither driver was held. Damages to both cars would be about $250, police said.

Second Offender Takes Month In Jail

"All Wright this morning but all wrong last night," commented Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court this morning as Roy Wright, 41, pleaded guilty to being drunk on George street on Monday night. It was his second offence, the previous conviction having been made less than two weeks ago and accordingly Wright will spend the next month in jail as he was unable to pay the $50 fine imposed by Magistrate Gee.

"Questioned as to his religion Wright told the magistrate he was an attendant at the Salvation Army.

"Salvation Army people do not drink," said the Magistrate. "At least not the folk we see with red hat bands on the street. You had better stick to the Army."

He told Wright that the sentence would carry him over into the New Year and give him a chance to make some resolutions in regard to his drinking habits during 1939.

Heavy Wet Snow Falls In District

A wet snow, borne on a strong east wind pelted pedestrians returning from the theatre Monday night and started a business boom for taxi men throughout the city.

Before the storm was over three and a half inches of snow had fallen but a rise in temperature turned the streets into quagmires of slush by 8 o'clock this morning, and traffic churned the snow and slush into piles which made driving slow and tricky.

No interruptions in service were reported, all busses operating on schedule, bread trucks, and transports also arrived on time.

Taxi men report that throngs who attended the theatre were caught unawares by the heavy snow and for several hours the taxis were in demand, for the first time this fall.

EVERTON-DERBY COUNTY DRAW HIGHLIGHT OF ENGLISH SOCCER

Poor Weather Interferes With Football

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 27. — (CP Cable.)—Highlighted by the Everton-Derby County 2-2 draw on the former's grounds, English Football League Boxing Day matches were played in adverse weather conditions. Of the eighty-eight matches carded, ten were postponed owing to the frost and snow, and one contest abandoned after sixty-three minutes' play.

Two games were played in Scottish League—both in Glasgow. The league-leading Rangers entertained St. Mirren at Ibrox Park and won via the shutout route, 3-0. Clyde, at home to Falkirk, lost 4-2. Fog forced cancellation of these scheduled matches Saturday. Rangers' triumph now gives the Light Blues a five-point lead over Celtic and Hearts, tied in second place.

One of the biggest surprises of Monday's games was the overwhelming 8-0 defeat inflicted by Swindon Town over Newport County, leader of the third division, southern section. Before Monday's encounter, Newport played the tightest football of any team in England, having only ten goals scored against them in nineteen games.

In the first of home-and-away holiday games, Everton was host to Derby County, first division leader and played hears-up soccer to split points. The second-place club plays at Derby to-day.

Wolverhampton Wanderers, victoricus 4-2 at Grimsby, went into third place, five points behind Everton, and one up on Charlton Athletic. The Arsenal-Charlton match was postponed.

Blackburn Rovers split a first-place tie with the idle Newcastle United eleven in the second group with a hard-fought 1-0 victory at home over Bury. Sheffield United chalked up its eleventh triumph in twenty games—a 5-1 verdict at home over Southampton—to take over the runner-up spot, one point up on Newcastle.

Newport's lead in the southern section was cut to one point when Crystal Palace downed Aldershot 3-0. Up-to-date compilation shows Newport with 30 points and the Palace 29.

Victors 4-1 over Accrington Stanley, Barnsley held its five-point margin over Southport in the northern group. Southport defeated Rochdale 4-1 to break a second place deadlock with Doncaster Rovers, who were held to a 1-1 draw by Rotherham United.

Transmere Rovers, promoted from the third division, northern section, to the second league this year, suffered a serious blow when right-back McDowell fractured his right leg in the game with Manchester City. The Rovers, in last place, held the City to a 1-1 score until the accident occurred early in the first half. Manchester ran riot and ended ahead 9-3.

Joe Louis Tops In Mitt Year

NEW YORK, Dec. 27 — (CP). — Joseph Louis Barrow was ranked today as the boxer of the year.

The solemn, stolid heavyweight champion received the honor from Nat Fleischer, editor of the Ring Magazine, who since 1925 has ranked the boxers of the world in each division for his publication.

This year's ratings were the product of months of work on the records of 2,964 fighters. In the end all but 895 records were eliminated. All ratings are on the fighters' work in 1938 only.

After Louis, Fleischer placed in order Lou Nova, Max Baer, Bob Pastor, Tony Galento, Maxie Rosenbloom and John Henry Lewis in the heavyweight list.

Second only in prominence to Louis was Henry Armstrong, lightweight and welterweight king. Lou Ambers, whom Armstrong dethroned for the lightweight title, was named right after Armstrong in that class. In the welterweight division Fleischer placed Ceferina Garcia, who lost to Henry recently, as leading challenger.

Besides being ranked as a heavyweight, John Henry Lewis was ranked as czar of the light heavyweights and Fred Apostoli was named the choice of the middleweights.

In the featherweight division, Fleischer figured the title vacant, named Leo Rodak of Chicago and Pete Scalzo of New York as the two top rankers with Dave Castilloux of Montreal third.

LIGHTS FOR BOUTS

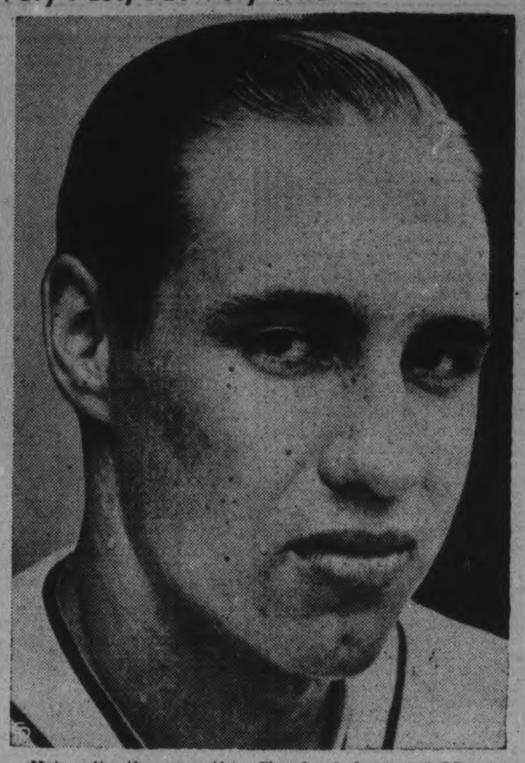
Very Fast, But Very Wild



Not quite the sensation Cleveland fans and Manager Oscar Vitt hoped he would be last season, Bob Feller, ABOVE, strikeout king of the majors, nevertheless had quite a year. In figures released by the American League on Sunday, it was disclosed that master Robert had set two new major league marks, one good, one bad. In the last game of the season he fanned 18 Detroit Tigers for a new single game record, while over the course of the season he handed out 208 free tickets to first, another new high. His 241 strikeouts for the year headed both majors, and gave him an average of 7.83 per game, a mark only previously exceeded in league history by the eccentric Rube Waddell, back in 1903.

German Fans Boo Own Players When Smoke Eaters Win, 9 to 1

BERLIN, Dec. 27—(CP-Havas). —Trail Smoke Eaters last night defeated a picked German hockey team, 9 to 1, in their second match in two days at the Sportpalast. Sunday night the Canadians won, 8-1.

Tommy Johnson and Jimmy Morris starred with efficient defence work as the Canadians were superior throughout the game that was hard-fought despite the one-sided score.

Many fans, disappointed by the showing of their team, booed and whistled throughout. The Germans scored their lone goal in the last period.

Joe Benoit, right wing, scored three for Trail. Dick Kowcinak and Jack McCreedy netted two and Tommy Johnson each scored one.

Before coming to Germany, the British Columbians opened their tour with two victories in the Netherlands. They now go to Hamburg, Keefeld, Munich, Vienna, Prague and other cities.

With The Boy Scouts

St. George's cubs and scouts held a joint Christmas party sponsored by the mothers' auxiliary on Friday night, with Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd as guests.

After supper games were played by the scouts and cubs under supervision of Scouter Siddall. One game was "Kicking the Moonshine." A recitation was given by Verne Pinn and one by Ronald Naish. Ab. Downer followed with a tap dance. Rev. Mr. Floyd gave an address on "whose birthday we celebrate on Christmas," after which carols were sung.

A first aid squad under Scouter Siddall demonstrated how to render help to persons suffering from a fractured forearm, a crushed hand, a fractured jaw, a scalp wound, a broken knee-cap, and a broken leg. Best demonstration of the night was of artificial respiration, given by a squad, and showing various steps taken in rescuing a person near death. Members of the squad were James and Andrew Brown, Tom Littlefair, and Ron Gynane. The patient was Gordon Riel.

Robert Siddall received his first aid badge; Raymond Titterington, his guide and house orderly badge; Adrien Langhorne, his guide badge. The badges were presented by Rev. Mr. Floyd.

Presents and candy were provided by the mothers' auxiliary and were distributed by Mr. Floyd. Tom Littlefair led the boys in three cheers for the auxiliary. Scouter George Houghton gave each scout a gift and won hearty applause, too.

The mothers' auxiliary has not been organized for long, but has done excellent work in helping cubs and scouts.

A meeting of cubs and scouts will be held on Friday evening. James Brown and Tom Littlefair provided the Christmas tree for the party.

At All Saints' the troop held a camp fire program, and a feature was a talk by Mr. Wheeler, the blind brother of Walter Wheeler who is a member of the troop.

No meetings of the troop or pack will be held this week.

At St. Paul's.

The members of the St. Paul's troop are requested to meet in front of the church at 9 a.m. Monday, January 2, to take part in a hike. Each member must bring food and cooking utensils to try for 1st and 2nd class cooking tests.

St. John's Cub Pack.

About forty persons sat down to the Christmas supper held by St. John's cub pack last Friday. Special guests for the evening were Scouter Fred Ford, Asst. Rover Leader Jack Collis, and Rev. R. T. F. Brain, who told the "Story of the Fir Tree" at the pack Redflower.

A pack meeting was held as usual after the supper was over.

The pack will meet next Friday, December 30, at 6.30 p.m., regardless of the holiday season being here.

St. John's pack wishes "Good Hunting" to all other groups during the New Year.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

And now that Christmas is over, we can settle away for a busy winter of hockey, bowling, curling, badminton, basketball, gym games and the rest of 'em. Athletes, and others, will have to hustle the next week or so to sweat—perspire to you, Algernon—off the extra poundage picked up over the long, lazy week-end around a groaning table. With a bulge on the waist-line and a dopey feeling in the noggin, we have little ambish at the moment (it's just in fun, boss, ha ha!) but will no doubt start rollin' within a day or two. And darned if we can dig up much sports chatter after the holiday week-end, not much stirring in the line of athletics. Ah, well, the feast and then the famine, or versa vice.

Comes a cheery note from the Lock Works here—technically and on letter heads known as the Peterborough Lock Mfg. Co. It has to do with their recent organization of the Social and Athletic Club at the plant—and sounds like an okay outfit. Here are the ossifers: Hon. President, E. H. Howson; Hon. Vice-Prexy, Chas. Westbrook; Hon. Members, F. H. Jobbitt and S. A. Archibald; president, W. L. Jordan; vice-president, Ed Prete; secretary-treasurer, L. M. Symonds; committee chairmen—social, G. MacDonald, athletic, H. Nicholls. If we're not mistaken, Nicholls is the same Nick who used to play third for the Petes in C.O.B.L. company a few seasons back.

A Right Fine Idea

The Scope—with a capital "S"—we're told is: Social—social evenings during seasonable periods to include cards and dancing, the annual picnic and an annual Christmas concert; Athletic—inter-department hockey, bowling, softball and a hoss-shoe pitching tournament. What, Nick, no baseball? All employees are eligible and urged to seek admission, annual fee being $2.60, while financial support has been provided by the company to aid the project. Such a club in a factory is a fine thing for the company and those working there. Several of the other shops in Peterborough—such as Quaker Oats, C.G.E., Westclox, Brinton Co., etc.—have similar organizations and they pay dividends.

We clip this from Walter Gilhooly's column in the Ottawa Journal: "One of the greatest halfbacks and defence players to wear the garnet and grey of Ottawa University died in New York on Wednesday in the person of Frank (Moose) Heffernan. He came here from Peterborough in 1911 and was a member of the team that was defeated for an Intercollegiate championship by Toronto University in a gridiron battle that left bitter recriminations in its wake. A referee's no-yard ruling, that Ottawa College players and their supporters ever after contended was grossly improper, cost Ottawa a touchdown and completely changed the whole complexion of the football game." Evidently they had screwy referees in those days, too.

A Grand Tribute!

Walter continues: "A picture of an athlete, Frank Heffernan was the most powerful plunging back on the field that day, as he had been on other afternoons for his school. Six feet tall and weighing 190 pounds, he was a tremendous ball carrier and one of the finest to tread an Intercollegiate gridiron. He was in addition a fine hockey player. After leaving here, he played with the T.R. and A.A. Club in the O.H.A. Later he turned professional with Toronto St. Pat's and was part owner of the club for a season, selling out his interest to Charlie Querrie. The news of his death is a shock to hundreds of Ottawa people who have vivid recollections of this magnificent athlete." This is a grand tribute to a Peterborough boy who made good in athletics in various fields. He was buried here last Saturday.

Coach Pete Vitarelli of the local junior Monarchs is calling a practice for tonight at eight in the Brock St. rink, all being welcome. This is open to boys under 18 years of age in the city—lads wanting to make a berth—and the team will be picked shortly. On account of Monarchs open their schedule and the O.H.A. season here this coming Friday eve against the Lindsay juniors. Provided the ice is good, this Friday fixture should draw well as goodness knows the fans have been awaiting long enough locally this winter to see a puck fray. There won't be another home tilt, after Friday, till Bowmanville plays the Colts on Jan. 6th, though Colts play in Port Hope on the 3rd and the Petes play Fliers in Belleville on Jan. 6th.

Back In Harness

Referee Chick Appel of Stratford is back handling O.H.A. scraps again. Badly beaten up in London several weeks ago by hostile home fans in a Mic.h-Ont. league tussle, Chick spent some time in a hospital. Loop authorities laid down the law then to the London club, forcing them to provide adequate police protection—and a tougher band of arbiters were appointed in the circuit. But a nice Xmas gesture was shown when some London fans collected $70, a turkey and big hamper of delicacies, and sent them to Appel the other day. There are usually only a few hoodlums at a game but they can give aclub a black eye—and the referee, too, when they outnumber him! We hope there will be nothing like that seen locally this puck season.

It is hinted that Dundas Bombers may return to the O.R.F.U. intermediate ranks next fall, having a poor financial season in 1938 rugby whilst belonging to the Interprovincial circuit. The Bombers beat our Orfuns in intermediate grid finals in 1937 and, when Peterborough got a senior rating the past season, the Dundas dudes were peeved and joined the Big Four body. But didn't do so well in gate receipts, though they won their group. They wanted a playoff with the O.R.F.U. intermediate winner, Cobourg Ghosts, but the clubs couldn't agree on money guarantees so nothing came of it. The Bombers will remain intermediates next year, while Peterborough Orfuns will get another crack at senior football competition.

Seabiscuit Race Thought Unlikely

COLUMBIA, S.C., Dec. 27.—(AP). —Chances for another meeting anytime soon between Seabiscuit and War Admiral appeared slim to-day when 'Biscuit's' trainer revealed he was taking his charge—the outstanding race horse of the year—back to California.

The decision to pass up the Florida race was made, trainer Tom Smith said, because of ligament trouble in Seabiscuit's left front ankle. "I want to be near home if anything happens," Smith said, although he explained that he expected the trouble to clear up in a short time.

Smith planned to ship Seabiscuit and the other horse to-morrow night. He said he doubted if the 'Biscuit would race in the Santa Anita Handicap but that, he explained, depended upon training developments.

Chestnut Bars Wins Race Straight Heats

TORONTO, Dec. 27. — Driver Clifford Chapman of Toronto was the cynosure of all eyes at Dufferin Park over the week-end, and he proved so successful at his chosen task of piloting winners during the holiday harness racing meet, he emerged as winner of the Fred Orpen prize for the leading driver at the track.

Chapman won four of eight heats raced on Saturday, and had three seconds. Yesterday he piloted Chestnut Bars to three straight victories in the Classified Pace, and that performance gave him the necessary points to shade Wilmer Hillock of Picton as winner of the drivers' contest. Harry Fields of Hamilton finished in third place.

Chestnut Bars, capably handled by Chapman, stepped out in fine fashion in scoring a straight heat victory in the Classified Pace, with times of 2.14¼, 2.14¼, and 2.16. Dorothy Direct provided the opposition in the first two heats, and Berry Direct made it close in the third heat.

The final heat will be raced off to-day, along with the remaining heats of the second and third events. There will be no admission fee. Best performance of the afternoon was turned in by Caroll Direct, which won the two heats, raced in the Free-for-All. The Fields-driven horse stepped the mile in 2.10¼ to take the first heat and won the second in 2.12. San Ton won two straight heats in the Pace and Trot.

Maple Leafs' Defensive Problems All Fixed Up?

There's a noticeable "upping" in the outlook around Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens these days, ever since the Leafs purchased Bucko McDonald from Detroit Red Wings...which wasn't so long ago. The Toronto squad had been seeking more defensive strength for some time and Bucko is expected to supply the answer to the problem. That's burly Bucko on the RIGHT in this picture, steaming down the ice with Reg. Hamilton, with whom he has been paired back of the blue line. Reginald had been playing the wrong side previously, and in addition to a big improvement in the play of McDonald, who is elated over his change of uniforms, Hamilton is being counted on for bigger and better things. More exact details will be furnished along about March.

Turk Broda Has Double Shutout As Leafs Take Wings, Rangers; Brimsek Slips, Bruins Lose 1-0

By Robert Clarke
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

There has been a lot of talk lately about the brilliant goal-tending of rookie Frankie Brimsek with Boston Bruins and with it all has come the complete overlooking of a fellow named Walter Broda, doing quite a job between the posts for the Toronto Maple Leafs.

The work of the Turk, as Broda is called, often has been considered too lightly because the Leafs always have stressed a wide-open attack that is bound to make the best of goalies look bad on occasion. Then, too, Broda isn't the stylist that some other National Hockey League netminders are and may look awkward at times.

Undoubtedly these reasons have had something to do with opinions that the Turk was the weak link in Toronto teams of the past few years. It's pretty hard, though, to find any fault with the way Broda has been going of late.

He goaled the Maple Leafs to a 2-0 decision last night over New York Rangers in the only N.H.L. game of the night as the Leafs went into a fourth place tie with the Stanley Cup holding Chicago Black Hawks. It was his second shutout in three days, as the Leafs had defeated Detroit Red Wings by the same score in Toronto Saturday night, and his fifth of the season.

Broda's five shutouts leave him one behind Brimsek, who has two strings of three straight shutouts to his crelit this season. Brimsek was after his fourth straight blanking when the Bruins lost a 1-0 decision Christmas night to Rangers on a goal by Phil Watson.

Metz and Parsons

Toronto's victory over Rangers was achieved on goals by Nick Metz and George parsons, with the former scoring in the first priod and Parsons in the final period. Parsons, an N.H.L. sophomore who played some of last season with Syracuse Stars of the International - American league, also figured in the first goal.

The loss left Rangers in second place in the standing two points behind Bruins. The Leafs climbed to a fourth place tie with Chicago.

While the Rangers were spoiling Brimsek's Christmas, New York Americans trounced the Hawks 5-1 as the veterans Nels Stewart and Lorne Carr each tallied twice and Johnny Sorrell scored once. Detroit Red Wings extended the Montreal Canadiens' losing streak to five straight games with a 4-1 victory over the Habitants.

Canadiens' loss brought an announcement from Manager Cecil Hart that Armand Mondou and Marcel Tremblay would be promoted from the Intam New Haven Eagles to play with the team tonight against the Hawks at Montreal. Mondou is an N.H.L. veteran, while Tremblay played amateur with Flin Flon Bombers last yeason, signin a pro contract after a good showing in early season workouts with Canadiens.

The only other game of the night brings together the Bruins and the Maple Leafs at Boston, giving Broda a chance to overtake Brimsek in the matter of shutouts. The Bruins have been beaten only three times this season and only once at home. Their loss the other night to Rangers was the first home defeat they had suffered since last Jan. 25.

They All Wore Different Uniforms in the N.H.L. Last Year

Striking photographic, but highly impractical poses in front of the Detroit goal are three Red Wings, to whom Manager Jack Adams hopes, before the season is over, it will be appropriate to apply the good old phrase, "potent trio." None of the three wore a Red Wing sweater last season, two of them not even starting the present campaign in the haberdashery they're disporting above. Dave Trottier toiled for Maroons (remember them?) last year, and for the first part of this season was on the sidelines, until purchased by the lowly Detroiters. Tiny Thompson, of course, has loomed large in the news this season, having started the schedule in the nets of Boston Bruins, only to be traded later, in the campaign's most sensational deal, to the Red Wings. Conacher is the famous instalment purchase from Toronto Maple Leafs, who has played but few games because of injuries, but is now back on the ice, as Adams hopes, bigger and better than ever.

Foxx Is Again Champ Hitter

CHICAGO, Dec. 27—(AP).—Jimmy Foxx of Boston won his second American Baseball League batting championship with as low an average as any which has captured the coveted crown in the last 30 years, official statistics showed to-day. The Red Sox first baseman took the mitting title with a mark of .349 in 149 games, meantime hitting 50 home runs.

In 1935, Buddy Myer of Washington won the title with a .349 average. Those identical marks are the lowest batting championship figures since the great Ty Cobb won the honor with .324 in 1908. Foxx took the title in 1933 with .356. The 1937 winner was Charles Gehringer of Detroit, with .371. This season he dropped to .306.

Cricketers Play Over Christmas

The idea of playing cricket here or in England at this time of year is fantastic but in the Empire the cricket sun never sets and with a cycle of Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, the West Indies and India the bat is ever swinging and the ball ever rolling.

This winter an English team is visiting South Africa and they will certainly not suffer from low temperatures. The visitors will be very much on their mettle as, when the South Africans visited England in 1935, they surprised the cricket world by winning their first match on English soil, and also winning the rubber. One has vivid recollection of playing the game over there some 35 years ago. On the Christmas day after peace was signed in the Boer war, the writer was stationed in Pretoria, Christmas dinner included for each man a quarter of a one-pound Xmas pudding which had been sent in tins from the Old Country for the troops on the great day.

After wards there was a cricket match against another unit of the garrison on a matting wicket on a playing field with not a sign of green in it. As a fact it was the race course where English prisoners, captured in the early part of the war, had been confined.

The heat and the dust were terrific, and a limited supply of warm beer, well "dusted" formed an unsatisfactory thirst quencher, whose only merit was that it was wet, but the game went on. That same year Darling's famous 1902 Australian team visited South Africa and the writer has a clear recollection of seeing the team get off their bus in front of the Transvaal Hotel in Pretoria and getting an eyeful of such giants of the game as Victor Trumper, Clem Hill, Montague Noble, Hugh Trumble and the rest. He later saw Trumper make a brilliant double century against the Transvaal.

This series of international matches began in the winter of 1888-89, when the first English team visited South Africa under the leadership of C. A. Smith, now so well known as Aubrey Smith, famous film actor.

In 1894 a South African team first visited England and two years later Lord Hawke "took out a strong team coinciding, as the trip did with the ill-fated Jameson raid the Englishmen had some curious experiences; they were hastily summoned to Johannesburg to distract local attention from the political situation. On their way they were held up by an armed posse of Boers. Presentation of a couple of bats to these "enemies" resulted in the friendliest relaton and the cricketers were permitted to depart in peace. Since then there have been regular interchanges of visits. The strength of South Africa waxed and waned, but on their visit to England in 1935, they, as stated, won the only test match played to a definite conclusion, which also won them the rubber. There have been played 59 matches between the two countries in which England has won 28, South Africa 12 (all but one in South Africa) and 19 have been drawn.

The first match in the present series began Dec. 24 on the famous Wanderers' ground in Johannesburg with "Wally" Hammond in charge of the English side while the South Africans are led for the first time by their new captain Alan Melville, formerly captain of Oxford University and Sussex.

Mulcahy Writes On Batting

NEWTON, Mass., Dec. 27—(AP).—Hugh Mulcahy of Philadelphia Phillies, is writing a book that probably would be a "best seller" among National Leaguers—but it never will go on public sale.

The young pitcher said to-day it might be titled "My Experience Against Certain Batters."

"I'm writing everything under the man's name," he said. "You go over these past experiences with the batters so often that you know just what they like, where they hit and so forth. It helps."

There's a little psychology to this writing business, too. For atop each page, Hugh has written: "Don't walk him." Wildness has been one of the 25-year-old moundsman's big handicaps.

Mulcahy has been in the big leagues for a couple of years and last season won 10 games and lost 20 for the lowly Phillies.

Argo Star, Art West, Once Banned From Sports For Quiet Life

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—Art West, 21-year-old backfielder with Toronto Argonuats, Dominion football champions, has evaded many tackles in his starry career, but one that got him down—and nearly kept him down—was made by the Grim Reaper.

In May, 1934, West punctured a lung by falling on a sharp piece of wood while engaged in schoolboy pranks at Toledo, O., where he lived. He fought for his life for many weeks in hospital. Hospitalization over, he learned from medical authorities that he should pursue a life of quiet with sports banned.

However, West turned out with the Toledo high school team in the fall of 1934 despite pleadings of the coach and the youngster's father. West played the season with a sponge pad protecting the injury. He was the school's foremost backfielder.

In 1935, he moved to Toronto with his family and attended North Toronto Collegiate, where he again starred. He wore the same sponge pad. When he went to Argos the next year, West discarded the sponge. Doctors pronounce him physically perfect.

Last year he was the leading hitter in the North Toronto Baseball League was an average of .387 and was runner-up the past season. He also plays an outstanding game of basketball.

In The Rose Bowl

Had the chain of circumstances been forged differently, it's possible West would be playing in the Rose Bowl football next week at Pasadena, Calif., for Duke University against University of Southern California.

At the time he was fighting for his life in Toledo hospital, a scout from Duke approached with full authority to offer West a college scholarship in exchange for his use by the Duke football team. West declined the offer, although he gives the Duke representative a portion of the credit for his survival.

West said that during the crisis of his illness, no one was allowed to see him and a nurse was posted as guard. The caller from Duke brushed aside the nurse and went to West's bedside.

Barely conscious and in a weakened condition, West heard the Duke caller say, "Come on, kid. You're on your five-yard line. Let's see you fight your way out." The caller then gently ruffled West's hair and was gone.

Young West is here today because he did fight so hard—like he does on the gridiron.

N.H.L. Stars

(By the Canadian Press.)

Walter (Turk) Broda, Toronto, goaled Maple Leafs to a 2-0 victory over New York Rangers for his second shutout in three days and his fifth of the season.

George Parsons, Toronto, scored one goal and figured in the other as Maple Leafs downed Rangers.

BOWLS IN THE FAMILY

DETROIT — (CP). — Detroit's youngest league bowler is Bryda Ann Cooper, 10, who stars in a ladies' five-pin league here. She held the league high for months with 180, until her mother rolled 186. Her grandfather manages a bowling alley.

Scoring Spree

Alex Shibicky, ABOVE, who does a neat job on right wing, with the Colville brothers as partners, on Lester Patrick's evenly balanced Rangers, hit the jack-pot against Canadiens when he snared three goals in a 5-2 win, becoming the sixth player this year to add a threesome to the records in a single game. The hapless Canadiens have been victims of the three goal-snipers on four of the six oc-

"Yes, It's Been a Great Year"

One party, who can look back over 1938 with satisfaction is Jimmy Foxx, ABOVE, first baseman with Boston Red Sox, who applied a heavy bludgeon to assorted baseballs throughout the season with telling effect, as the American League records, released Sunday, disclosed. For the second time in his career he led the league in averages with a mark of .349, parked 50 balls out of the park for home runs, and batted in 175 runs, to head the circuit in that department. In addition to miscellaneous records. Also in addition to being voted, for the third time, the league's most valuable player, and being the No. 1 athletic comeback of the year.

SPORT SPICE
By Drew Middleton

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Dec. 27—(AP).—Referee Johnny Getchell, who pulled the football season's worst boner in that "wrong down" Carnegie-Notre Dame game, finds the thing pays . . . He got the Sugar Bowl game and finds himself swamped with offers to officiate in basketball. . . . One midwest paper advertised his appearance with a streamer: "Wrong Down Getchell to Referee Her." . . .

Morris Pipes of Dallas, Tex., claims he's picked 1,204 winners out of 1,467 football games in the last three years . . . Morris clambefs right out on the old limb and selects Southern Cal, Tennessee, Texas Christian (tsk, tsk, imagine a Texan picking the Christians) and Texas Tech for those bowl games. Joe Dimaggio is in none to solidly with the Yankee front office and had better sign that first baseball contract without making any snoots about it. . . .

Max Roesch, the Dallas heavyweight, is boomed as the white hope of the South . . . Jimmy Gurnett writes "he is handsomer than Lou Nova" . . . M. Walter St. Denis, the 20th Century sporting club's tub thumper from Ottawa, who has seen every fighter of note since General Grant, says Jim Corbett, who also was a good ball player, and Peter Jackson, the Australian Negro, a fine swimmer, are the only ones he remembers. . . .

JOE HARDSTAFF FINED

NOTTINGHAM, England—(CP).—Joseph Hardstaff, Nottinghamshire and England cricketer, was fined $47.30 for driving a motor-car in a dangerous manner here.

IN MEMORIAM

FALLIS.—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Mr. Johnston Fallis, who passed away one year ago to-day (December 27, 1937).

To-day we are thinking of someone
Who was loving, kind and true,
Whole smile was as dear as the sunshine,
That someone, dear father, was you.
He oftimes said we'd miss him;
The words have proved too true;
We lost our best and dearest friend,
Dear father, when we lost you.
As we loved you, so we miss you;
In our memory you are dear:
Loved, remembered, longed for always,
Bringing many a silent tear.
The flowers we place upon your grave
May wither and decay;
But the love for father who sleeps beneath
Shall never fade away.
—Ever remembered by Wife and Family.

JACKSON.—In loving memory of our little son, William Gordon, who passed away December 26, 1930.

Before the throne of God
Thousands of children stand;
Children, whose sins are all forgiven,
A holy, happy band.
Up there among the throng
Our little Gordon stands
Waiting for us to join him
In that holy, happy land.
—Always remembered by mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Jackson.

Factory Increased Cheese Production

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 27. — An increase of more than 40,000 pounds in the production of cheese was announced at the annual meeting of the Trent Valley Cheese and Butter Company at their annual meeting which attracted the largest attendance in the company's history. Only 71 under-grade cheese were produced during the season, giving the company an average of 98 per cent., which was particularly noteworthy in view of the fact that all milk is trucked to the factory from a considerable distance.

District agricultural representative Ian McLeod, who declared that this was the first patron's meeting he had been able to attend, was an interested spectator at the meeting. Speaking briefly he forecast higher prices for 1939. He dwelt at some length on the re-test which is being conducted in this section for TB cattle, claiming that up to the present time the number of reactors was one per cent.

Despite the fact an advance of six cents per box is forecast for the heavier type of box for cheese, Grant Anderson was re-hired as maker for the coming year and will supply everything for two cents a pound.

The total amount of milk delivered to the factory during the year, according to the financial statement presented by the secretary, Marshal West, was 3,061,000 pounds, from which were produced 258,766 pounds of cheese and 7,679 pounds of whey butter. Total receipts for cheese were $34,634 and for butter $1,603.

The number of pounds milk per pound of cheese was 11.83 and cheese per pound butter fat was 2.64. Patrons received 31.29 cents per pound butter fat and an average of 13.03 cents per pound for cheese.

Padding Under Belt Proves Handy Carrying Dynamite

Redmond, Ore., Dec. 27 (AP) DR. R. W. CHRISTIANSEN says John Howard can be thankful he is a little on the hefty side, has "padding" under his belt. Howard had two dynamite caps in his pocket. They exploded. On thin persons, the doctor said, such an explosion would have damaged vital organs. On Howard—it made only a flesh wound.

Dies Week After Wife

QUEBEC, Que., Dec. 27 — (CP).—James Gerard Thomas, 34, of Quebec, died in hospital yesterday less than a week after the death of his wife. He had been ill for several months. Mr. Thomas was a brother-in-law of Father James Fuller, Toronto, Provincial of the English branch of the Redemptorist Order in Canada.

Rumor Irish Army To Attack British

BOSTON, Dec. 27.—(AP).—A former captain in the Irish Republican Army, recently in Ireland, brought back to Boston to-day a report that the army soon might clash with British forces policing six counties of Northern Ireland.

"The move is being made at this time," Cornelius O'Brien of Boston said in an interview, "because England has her hands full with other countries of Europe now."

He aded the Munich agreement had caused a "rebirth" of Irish Republican sentiment.

"We are prepared to fight to the bitter end for the abolition of force that has anything to do with England."

O'Brien said he represented the American-Irish Society of Clan Na Gael, at a meeting of the Executive Council of the Second Dail Eireann and the Republican Army Council.

He gave out here the text of an order he said The Dail's Council passed Dec.8 delegating its authority to the Army Council. He added signers included John Kelly, Speaker of the First Dail Eireann, and Mary McSwiney, whose brother Terence died in a hunger strike.

O'Brien, imprisoned with other Republicans in 1923, charged a "rigid" cable censorship prevented transmission of the Council's action except through others.

Cars Are Stranded In Hastings District

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Dec. 27. — Dozens of cars were stranded on roads in this vicinity early this morning when a heavy wet snow made most of the roads impassable. The Catholic Order of Foresters' annual ball here drew about 250, and it was estimated that nearly half that number came from a distance. It is believed few of them reached home before daylight.

Passing motorists reported several cars stuck on the main roads early in the evening and a considerable quantity of snow fell after that. Five cars were stuck at the main intersection here all night, their owners resorting to hotel quarters. One carload on the main street refused to attempt getting home, and slept in th vehicle all night.

Snow on the level was nearly a foot deep and there were drifts much deeper.

Belgian Laborites Lose Their Leader

BRUSSELS, Dec. 27.—(AP). — Emile Vandervelde, 72, veteran leader of the Belgian Labor Party and one-time head of the Second Internationale, died to-day.

He was one of Belgium's signers of the Versailles Treaty. His political positions included the Vice Premiership and Healthy Ministry.

Vandervelde, who suffered from heart disease, became ill Sunday night and died early this morning.

Known as the "mother-in-law of cabinets," because of his influence, the veteran Socialist had lectured in South America and visited the United States in 1914 to put Belgium's case before President Wilson.

Political observers believed Belgium's Labor Party as at present constituted would pass with its leader and that the group would be transformed along the more conservative lines of Premier Paul Spaak.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

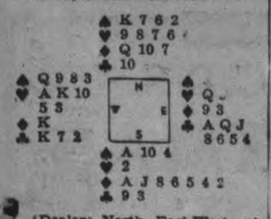
"The Authority on Authorities"

WHAT A COMPLIMENT!

EVERY FINE cardsman likes to have his partner show confidence in his ability to play a hand expertly. It places on him the burden of trying his best to justify the trust reposed in him. If it has resulted in his getting into a higher contract than he would have chosen, if able to see all of the cards, his greatest brilliancy should be called forth in the effort to find some possible way to make the contract.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

William Fellowes Morgan, veteran player of the Union Club in New York, gave a spectacular example of confidence in his partner, J. Harlin O'Connell, former individual champion of the Inter-Club Contract League, on this deal. Mr. O'Connell, known to his intimates as Pat, needed all of his acumen to justify the confidence.

Mr. O'Connell had opened the bidding with 1-Diamond in the South. After a lot of calls around the table, Mr. Morgan over-called the opponents' unmakeable 5-Clubs with 5-Diamonds, West doubling and leading the heart K, followed by the club 2 to the A of East, who returned the heart Q.

Seeing no chance for the contract except by a squeeze, Mr. O'Connell noted that four entries to dummy were needed if he finessed for the diamond K. As the dummy had only three entries, his only chance was to save one by dropping the K. This he did with the diamond A, led to the diamond Q, ruffed a heart, ruffed his last club, ruffed another heart, then led two diamonds. On the last, West had to throw his heart A, making the nine good, or a spade, which he did, setting up the winning third spade trick for the doughty declarer.

Reeve Anderson Is Given An Acclamation

W. A. Anderson was returned by acclamation as reeve of Otonabee township at the nomination meeting held yesterday afternoon in Keene. Harry Reid was also nominated for the post but withdrew.

Probability that all offices will be filled by acclamation was seen at the meeting when most of those nominated in addition to last year's council withdrew their names and all others said on the platform they would not force an election, would stand only if an election were necessary. Candidates have until Tuesday night to qualify.

Peter Mather, David McIntyre and F. A. Eason were all nominated for deputy-reeve in addition to Harry Reid, present occupant of the post. Messrs Eason and McIntyre said they would not stand, and Peter Mather said he would not force an election, although he did not definitely withdraw.

For council the following were nominated: Harold Weir, Peter Mather, William Devlin, David McIntyre, Robin Thorn, Jas. C. Petrie, and Percy Davidson. Messrs Weir, Mather, and Devlin, withdrew their names, while Messrs Petrie and Davidson said they would not force an election. David McIntyre and Robin Thorn announced their intention of standing for office.

Outlines Work in County.

Chief address of the meeting was delivered by Reeve Anderson, who outlined the work done by the county council during the past year, and particularly that done by the educational committee, of which he is chairman. Through their efforts and with the permission of the department of education, they inspected affairs at Lakefield high school and as a result costs were lessened by nearly one-third, he related. He stressed the work of this committee as being extremely important and one whose efforts were far from being completed.

He told of the establishment of a tree conservation area on the boundary of Dummer and Belmont townships and claimed such work as being of vast importance. There are a million acres in Peterborough county, and not half of it is assessed, he said. While much of it is taken up by lakes, yet there are nearly 200,000 acres not in use and not returning revenue to the county, he said. Establishment of forests in such areas would pay great dividends, he pointed out. He claimed that the Peterborough county council while they were not forced to spend the money they did on the reforestation lot, did so for the good of the county and the province. Everyone realizes the need of planting trees, but few persons do so, he said. The land they have now purchased is better than waste land, and the county is far ahead of those other counties who have started such projects on land on which no trees are already growing.

Township Work.

In regard to the township, he outlined the work completed this past year, said he hoped Keene may get a hard-surfaced main street, but admitted such might not be in the near future. He told of lowered high school costs, and hinted that "you are due for more changes yet."

Otonabee township paid to the county of Peterborough $100,000 that should not have been paid, in the years since the war, he claimed, recalling the recent equalization of assessments arrived at and by which Otonabee's assessment was considerably reduced.

Fire Equipment Needed.

F. A. Eason, in withdrawing as a deputy-reeve nominee, outlined a hope that the township might purchase fire fighting equipment, to be used at farm fires. The equipment would consist of a portable engine and hose, to be transported speedily by a car-drawn trailer. Farm fires mean triple losses to the persons who suffer them, he said, recounting that farm buildings could not be insured for their full value; that they were insured with "mutual" companies because the larger private organizations did not want to insure farm property, and so each man insured suffered additionally with each loss; and that the municipality in which a burnt-out farmer lived suffered because assessments had to be lowered when on any burned property.

"If we can prevent fires, we can make money," he said, and claimed that fire equipment such as he mentioned was practical if only a water supply could be reached. He advocated erection on farms of reservoirs capable of holding large quantities of water, said that many farmers are already doing so. Cost of the equipment he mentioned would be in the neighbourhood of $300 and whatever hose was purchased, he said, and asked that next year's council consider the matter.

One Of Musica Family Suspected Living In Canada

Montreal, Dec. 27 (CP).

THE GAZETTE says today a confidential source disclosed "existence of a belief that a member of the Musica family might be living somewhere in Canada under an assumed name."

(Philip Musica was the baptismal name of F. Donald Coster, who killed himself a week ago when his financial empire crumbled. His three brothers are held at New York on securities act violation charges.)

The Gazette says the belief a member of the Musica family lives in Canada "is considered to be a reasonable assumption from information gleaned by a reliable investigating body."

The newspaper adds:

"Reason for the belief was not revealed, such information being of a confidential nature at the moment." It stated Crown Prosecutor John Crankshaw refused to comment on the report.

Tracing Egypt In Australia

DARWIN, Australia, Dec. 26. — (CP-Reuters).—An ancient "Stonehenge," with caves containing remarkable primitive paintings and grisly relics, has been found in the Australian bush, abcut 300 miles from Darwin.

The discovery was made by a Northern Territory expedition, led by Hugh Stuart, collecting material for projected exhibitions showing wealth and early history of North Australia. It may support the theory of the "Children of the Sun," said to have gone from Egypt to all quarters of the globe.

On a grassy plateau the party found an extraordinary group of cave temples. Towering abruptly above the long white grass was a group of majestic outcrops ranged in a wide ampitheatre about a mile in circumference. The rocks, almost black with age, rose in a series of individual masses 30 to 50 feet high.

Most dominating of the group has several large protruding overhangs like huge cowls. Each cowl covered a cave in which were found a series of brilliant paintings, believed to be hundreds of years old. Two enormous figures in red, yellow, white and black, clearly representing a king and queen, were the most important of a varied and interesting collection which includes kangaroos, serpents, fishes, crocodiles, boomerangs and phallic symbols.

Stuart wrote: "The royal pair are elaborately clothed from head to foot and the king has a magnificent, sun-like head-dress suggesting eastern influence. A notable fact is that the sign of the cross appears upon the breast of each figure."

Further investigation of the caves showed that they were full of symbolism and ghastly relics, including two shinbones and smaller human remains, some painted red.

Will the Newspaper of the Future Be Printed In Your Living Room?

Here is a closeup of part of the sending apparatus used to broadcast the radio edition of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Here you see a group of young topic-thirsty folk reading an edition of the Post-Dispatch as it unreels from the special receiver in their home. Pages, containing the usual news, features, cartoons and sports, are printed in the regular manner by the Post-Dispatch, transformed into sound-waves on an ingenious sending apparatus and broadcast. The receiver picks up the sounds and turns them back to original form, printing the pages on a paper roll which unwinds as printed.

Sailmaker Has Share In Great Race

BOSTON, Dec. 27 — (CP). — The Nova Scotian schooner Bluenose owes some small part of her victory over the Gertrude L. Thebaud in the international fishermen's races to a little old man who sits tucked away in a loft on top of the Boston Fish Pier. His name is Jules Anderson and his business is sails. In fact, at the age of 80, he is the oldest sailmaker in the trade.

Born in Tungsberg, Norway, Anderson learned to make sails the good old-fashioned way at his uncle's sail loft there. Then, like so many other Scandinavians, born with adventure in his heart, he came to America in 1878 on a square rigger. Here he otained a job with a marine salvage company in New York.

For six years he led a life of danger and excitement such as few men have ever known. His occupation was the rescue of wrecks at sea — anywhere along the whole Atlantic seaboard. With the right kind of coaxing he can tell some stirring tales. He came to Boston in 1890 where his fancy led him to the fishing banks. At one time he owned his own schooner, and for more than 25 years was skipper of a dozen different trawlers out of Boston.

Ten years ago Capt. Anderson left the sea to go to work for the sail loft on the Fish Pier. This loft is practically the only place left along the coast where really heavy sails are still made. With his work-worn palm and needle, Jules Anderson returned to the trade he learned as a boy. His fine craftsmanship has gone into some of the most famous sails of the day.

When the Bluenose was in for repairs here on Oct. 17 and 18, Jules was up half the night re-roping her sails. Probably he is one of the few men in Boston who could have done the job.

Federal Engineer Dies In Whitby

R. E. McArthur, engineer of the federal Department of Public Works who has been in charge of the rip-rapping of the bank of Little Lake, at which he was engaged until Thursday afternoon, died suddenly of a heart attack at his home in Whitby Friday morning.

J. J. Duffus, M.P., told the Examiner this morning that Mr. McArthur had designed the rip-rap job, had taken more than a professional interest in it because in some of the details it was an unusual construction, and had given the city council the heartiest co-operation since he took charge of the work at its inception on Crescent street.

Mr. McArthur was assistant temporary chief engineer in the Toronto district for the Department of Public Works, had built the new dock in Little Lake, another part of his work here which had received the compliments of the Chief Engineer of the Department. He left Peterborough late Thursday afternoon for his home where he was fatally stricken Friday morning.

Gunman Loses Duel In $25,000 Coin Raid

NEW YORK, Dec. 27—(AP). — A gunman who attempted a $25,000 rare coin robbery tried his hand at a gun duel with his intended victim and finished in a morgue today.

Police identified the gunman as Albert Weiner, 39, whose police record showed him to be an ex-convict, auto thief, and veteran of 18 arrests since 1919.

Victor in the duel, in the offices of Rud Kohler, incorporated, coin dealers, was Edmund May, assistant manager.

Weiner and a second man, who escaped, demanded the contents of the company's vaults in their attempted robbery yesterday. May ducked into an adjoining office, obtained a revolver and fired seven shots as Weiner fired at him.

Wounded in the head and chest, Weiner died seven hours later in a hospital.

Bill, Figurehead Only Relics Of Famous Clipper Marco Polo

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Dec. 27. — (CP)—Two souvenirs of the famous old Marco Polo, the world's fastest ship in her day, may be seen at her home port here. One is a bell, formerly used to call cabin passengers to their meals. The other, in the New Brunswick Museum, is the ship's figurehead—a gaily painted wooden man.

The battered bell now summons to dinner members of the Millionaires Club. Salvaged from wreckage of the Marco Polo after she broke up in 1883 at Cape Cavendish, P.E.I., it was used later by an auctioneer in Charlottetown. The late J. S. MacLaren, father of Saint John's present mayor, D. L. MacLaren, bought it from the auctioneer.

When the Common Council of St. John tendered a luncheon to delegate at the annual convention of the American Association of Port Authorities here last September Mayor MacLaren used the bell to call the meeting to order.

The Marco Polo, described by her owners as "a great frigate-built clipper ship," had a disappointing launching here in 1851. Sliding down the ways she gathered speed, went out of control, swept across the narrow Marsh Creek, lodged in mud on the opposite bank and heeled over. Several workmen were injured and a boy was thrown from deck to water.

Makes Liverpool In 15 Days

In two weeks dozens of diggers freed her from the mud. Later, seamen and shipbuilders claimed her speed was due to the "hog" or twist she experienced in launching. No other reason was known. Other ships were built on same lines and dimensions but none could equal the Marco Polo in fleetness. The clipper was built by James Smith for a group of local shareholders.

On her maiden voyage she left Saint John May 31, 1851, with timber and scrap iron, reaching Liverpool 15 days later. She then sailed to Mobile for a cotton cargo and returned to the English port in 30 days. James Baines, owner of the Black Ball Line of Australian packets, bought the Marco Polo and refitted her for passenger service. Thousands of goldseeking men were clamoring for passage to Australia.

Baines made James Nichol Forbes called "Bully" Forbes, the Marco Polo's captain. Another skipper asked Forbes if he thought he would ever get to Australia in a rebuil lumber carrier.

Beats Steamship By Five Days

"I'll get there and back in six months," retorted Forbes.

It sounded a ridiculous boast. But with 930 passengers and a crew of 60 the 31-year-old Captain Forbes sailed in July, 1852, reached Melbourne in 76 days and completed the round-the-world voyage in another 76 days, or total of 152. Counting time spent at Melbourne the entire trip took five months and 21 days.

This was a record almost unbelievable then. The Marco Polo averaged 366 miles a day and even beat a steamship home by five days after being hailed by the latter craft enroute. At Australia Captain Forbes imprisoned his crew to prevent their joining the gold rush.

As the clipper's fame spread so did that of Saint John as a shipbuilding port and of James Smith as a shipbuilder. Orders poured in for new vessels. New Brunswick shipyards flourished. Wherever the Marco Polo went she advertised the skill of marine designers and builders in this province.

For 15 years the great ship remained in the Australian service. Then she was cut down and converted to a barque. In 1880 a group of Norwegians bought her and three years later she was wrecked at Cape Cavendish.

Pope Bitterly Sad Over Mussolini

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 27—(CP). —Pope Pius in a Christmas address to his Cardinals Saturday expressed his "bitter sadness" at vexations in relations between the Vatican and the Italian government.

These vexations, he said, were "mistreatment" of Catholic action, which is an organization of laymen, and "wounding of the concordat" between the Holy See and Italy by Premier Mussolini's promulgation of a law forbidding marriages between Ayrans and Non-Aryans.

The Pontiff accused higher-ups of encouraging the "vexations." He declared they had even been erected against Ildefonso Cardinal Schuster, Archbishop of Milan, as "guilty of speech and teaching which comes within its pastoral duties and of which we can only approve."

Dr. J. A. Thompson, Tweed Dentist, Dies Suddenly After Heart Attack

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Dec. 27. — Stricken suddenly on Wednesday morning, December 21, the death of Dr. J. A. Thompson, resident of Tweed for the past twenty-three years, came as a distinct shock to the residents of this community.

He had suffered from a heart ailment for some time, but he seldom complained, and his friends, of whom they were legion, did not feel that his condition was serious. However, on Tuesday night he informed his daughter, Miss Edith, who was alone with him at the time, that he felt severe pains around his heart. When his condition did not improve early on Wednesday morning, she left the apartment to call a sister, Miss Helen Thompson, a school teacher, near Belleville, and on her return she found he had passed away.

The death of Dr. Josiah Albert Thompson removes one who was closely associated with the community life of this village for the past quarter of a century. He was held in the highest regard by residents of the district. Possessing a particularly cheerful disposition, with the happy faculty of making friends easily, he was extremely popular with all ranks. He was in his 66th year.

Dr. Thompson was born at Uxbridge, a son of George Thompson and Elizabeth Shire. After obtaining his elementary education in Tara, in Bruce County, he attended Normal School, where he obtained a teacher's certificate. Later, he decided to enter the dental profession, and after graduating from college, established himself at Omemee. It was at this place that he met his wife, who was formerly Annie McCaffrey, daughter of Charles and Mary McCaffery, and they were married on August 10, 1910. Later, Dr. and Mrs. Thompson left for Havelock, where he carried on a dental practice for some time, following which they came to Tweed. The death of his wife some fifteen years ago was a severe blow to him.

Fraternally, Dr. Thompson was a Past Grand of Tweed Lodge, Independent Order of Oddfellows, while he was also a Past Master of Omemee Lodge, A.F. and A.M.

Active in Politics.

A staunch Conservative in politics, he was one of the most active workers in the local association, occupying the position of secretary this year. He was also vice-president of the South Hastings Conservative Association. In matters of education, he always took a keen interest. He was a member of the High School Board at the time of his death, and served as chairman last year. He was an attendant at a regular meeting of that body on Monday night of this week. Dr. Thompson was one of the strongest supporters of an addition of the school for the teaching of subjects on the new curriculum. His counsel on educational matters was always sought.

An ardent devotee of sports, he studied the sports pages daily, and was well informed on all branches. In 1919, he was manager of Tweed's champion baseball team, and seldom did he miss a game on the home field.

Dr. Thompson was devoted to his family, and his three daughters, Helen, a school teacher near Belleville, Maxine, nurse-in-training at Toronto East General Hospital, and Edith at home, have the sympathy of the community.

Three half-brothers and one half-sister, Dr. Frank Thompson, Ralph Thompson, Darcy N. Thompson and Beatrice J. Shire, all of Toronto, remain.

The familiar figure of Dr. Thompson will be missed in Tweed. He was popular with a wide circle of friends.

The funeral was held on Friday morning, December 23, from his late residence on Victoria Street, to the Tweed United Church, where a short service, under the auspices of the Masonic Lodge, was conducted by his pastor, Rev. H. Morrison. Following the church service, the funeral cortege proceeded to Omemee, where the remains were interred in the family plot.

The bearers were Reeve W. H. Sayers, Dr. W. A. Paul, T. C. Graham, Edward Way, Thomas Beatty, Edgar W. Jones.

France Sends Troops To Djibouti

Daladier Said Asking Chamberlain Cancel Rome Visit

PARIS, Dec. 28 — (AP). — The Ministry of Colonies announced today a detachment of Senegalese troops has been sent to strengthen the Djibouti garrison.

The reinforcements were requested by Governor-General Hubert Deschamps, officials said, to "assist in maintaining order" amid reports Italian troops are concentrating near the French Somaliland port.

Colonial authorities said they did not know the exact number of Senegalese en route to Djibouti, but estimated there are between 1,200 and 1,500.

Th French press and the public were inclined to regard the Italian campaign for Djibouti as a bluff and to have confidence in France's ability to defend her colonies.

Several Conservative newspapers limited their comment solely to a Government communique denying reports of Italian troop concentrations in Ethiopia and Eritrea, near the border of French Somaliland.

The Left-Wing press, the Extreme Right, and some Centrists warned the Government against capitulation to the Italian demands—unofficial and made through the controlled Fascist press.

More Troops If Necessary.

As a symbol of French determination to defend Djibouti the 1,969-ton dispatch boat D'Iberville arrived before the Suez Canal today on its way to the port from Beirut, Syria. Arrival of the D'Iberville, with its 5.5 millimetre guns, one seaplane and anti-aircraft batteries, was believed in some quarters to be significant of the French army and navy intention to rush more warships and heavy troop reinforcements to Djibouti if necessary.

As another symbol of what France might do, officers of the Foreign Legion formally opened a vital new military road from inner Algeria to the inland frontier of Italian Liby. The road connects all France's military garrisons in the interior of Morocco and Algeria with the border.

To French military men that meant that France could use the Foreign Legion and other troops to smash into Libya from the rear in case of war.

In the absence of formal Italian request of Djibouti, the French sent their answer back the way the demands came—through the press which scoffed at Italy's chances in French-Italian war.

Daladier, in close touch with London, was reported to be asking that Prime Minister Chamberlain's January trip to Rome be broken by a stop at Paris or be called off entirely if the Italian anti-French campaign continues.

It was learned that Italian military caravans had occupied and had been holding for 18 months some bases in the disputed arid frontier between France's Somaliland and Italy's Ethiopia.

Ontario Carries Relief Case To High Court

TORONTO, Dec. 28 — (C.P.). — Judgment of the Ontario Appeal Court, which quashed convictions for unlawful assembly against seven Lakeview "relief strikers," has been appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada by the Ontario Government. Notice of appeal has been filed at Ottawa by the Ontario Attorney-General's Department.

Several of the Lakeview relief recipients were arrested on orders of Premier Hepburn in his office last June when they accompanied a delegation to Queen's Park to lay their complaints before the Government. All were found guilty at Brampton by Judge Munro and a jury, but the Court of Appeal upset the convictions on the ground that there was no evidence on which the jury could hold them guilty of unlawful assembly.

The Attorney-General's notice of appeal alleges that the Ontario Court of Appeal "premptorily allowed the appeal without giving full consideration and effect to the facts and the law." The Attorney-General also claims that the Appeal Court "upon the hearing of the appeal, did not read or consider or allow to be read the charge of the learned trial judge to the jury, which charge was correct in law and upon which the jury made express findings of fact which the said Court of Appeal should not have disturbed, having regard to the evidence adduced."

Lengthy Call

TIMMINS, Ont., Dec. 28.—(CP). —E. W. Gladstone called his parents at Grasna, Roumania, this Christmas, one of the longest telephone calls on record here. Because of a storm around Vienna, Austria, he had to wait up all one night putting the call through.

Blizzard Blows Itself Out Leaving Ontario Shivering, Drifted Deep

13 Hurt, 2 Badly, In 5-Vehicle Smash At Falls During Blinding Swirl Of Snow; Near Zero Wave Swings On Eastward

(By the Canadian Press.)

The worst blizzard to strike Ontario in years, a storm that had its primary origin in the Gulf of Mexico, blew itself out today, leaving in its wake a trail of destruction, snow-blocked roads and crippled communication systems. Prevailing near-zero temperatures were the lowest of the winter.

Breaking Monday night, the storm continued all yesterday and subsided early today after piling snowdrifts five feet high in some parts of the province, tearing down telegraph and telephone lines and cutting off communities from contact with outside centres. At the height of the gale, its velocity was 60 miles an hour at Fort Erie, where floodwaters caused extensive damage.

Chief Forecaster Frank O'Donnell of the Dominion meteorological service said in Toronto the storm had its primary origin in an area of low pressure which moved up from the Gulf of Mexico northeast across the Great Lakes, pulling cold winds from the northwest and meeting a cold-air area from the north.

Temperatures to Ease.

Temperatures dipped during the night to two degrees above zero at Ottawa and four above at Kingston. Toronto's low point was 12 above, with similar temperatures reported from many Western Ontario centres. But the weatherman forecast a "little milder" weather for to-morrow after scattered snowflurries predicted for later to-day have blown themselves out.

Here are to-day's reports from various areas:

Owen Sound—Highways throughout district all remain blocked. Railways maintained service with the aid of snow plows. Reports continued to drift in about motorists abandoning their cars during the storm and seeking shelter at farm houses.

St. Catharines. — Snowfall was only two inches, but strong winds caused damage, blowing in windows and felling trees. Roads are icy but passable.

Galt—Highays are open, but many country roads are blocked by snow drifts.

Chatham—Chatham and district enjoyed relief after gale blew itself out during night. Roads are open.

Kitchener—With exception of two main provincial highways, all roads in Waterloo County are blocked. Expected to take two days before all roads are cleared for traffic. Drifts reported as high as five feet in some sections. Several towns in the county were without doctors, many of whom were stranded in rural sections.

Kingston—Traffic conditions generally reported as good. Sun shining brightly to-day with heavy wind gone and temperature only a few degrees below freezing point.

At Niagara Falls, Ont., three trucks, a motor car and a passenger bus were involved late yesterday in an accident that injured 13 persons, two critically. Blinding snow was held responsible.

The village of Exeter, midway between London and Goderich, was cut off from all communication except by telephone. Roads were snowbound and telegraph wires snapped in the gale. The busy St. Mary's-Stratford section of No. 7 highway was blocked by drifts, some seven feet deep. There wasn't a chance of getting through sideroads and, because motorists could see only about 10

Nine Qualified For Five Seats Smith Council

Nine candidates qualified for the five seats on the Smith township council and election will be held on Monday, January 2nd. At nine o'clock last night the deadline for qualifying nine of the thirteen nominated had decided to stay in the race.

George Mullen, former reeve, is opposing Reeve Allen B. Mann while Harry Fowler, Sr., deputy-reeve in 1938, is opposed by W. A. Roseborough.

A surprise was injected into the battle with the decision of Gordon Hancock to qualify. At the meeting on Monday he said he was too young to enter municipal politics but many of the older men present who spoke after him, contended the council needed young blood. He is past president of the Quinte Seed Growers' Association and vice-president of the Peterborough Exhibition Board. A. E. Scott, grist mill operator is the other new candidate to throw his hat in the ring. Milton Clark, Gilbert McIlmoyl and William J. Tedford, all members of the 1938 council, qualified and will seek re-election.

The battle promises to be one of the warmest in the history of the township and all of the contestants are well known throughout the length and breadth of the township.

DOURO

The retirement of William Hayes and Albert Darling, two of the six nominees for the Douro township election, disposed of the necessity of an election next Monday. Reeve Martin Coughlin was re-electd by acclamation and the councillors for 1939 are Michael Whibbs and Robert Bolton of this year's council and two new men, Roland Tedford and Mastia Moher.

$50,000 "Fiesta" For "Deb" 17

NEW YORK, Dec. 28—(AP).—Jitterbug music and a novel "anti-hangover bar" marked the social crowning early to-day of New York's No. 1 "glamor girl" debutante. The "anti-hangover" bar served milk and soft drinks.

In a setting of moonlit gold and white ostrich plumes, vivacious, dark-eyed Brenda Diana Duff-Frazier, 17-year-old heiress to a $5,000,000 grain fortune, led the capers as she made her formal debut to society—the tiaraed "Old Guard" of New York society and the cafe crowd—with a $50,000 champagne fiesta at the Ritz-Carlton.

Brenda, whose face has graced the cover of a national magazine and New York illustrated papers, is the grand-daughter of Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, Canadian banker who now resides in Nassau, the Bahamas. Her party last night was depicted with three solid pages of photographs by New York's tabloid Daily News.

And hot and sweet, from midnight to dawn, a 25-piece orchestra swung the strains of "Get Out of Town" and "Flat-Foot Floogie"—Brenda's favorites.

More than 1,000 members of the top-hat set, with 300 white-tie "stags" roving at bay, rhumbaed, shagged and cut "hot licks" in the season's most lavish party.

And Brenda, looking it all over, looking back at her butterfly season of being the most talked-of and most photographed debutante of 1938, murmured happily:

"I love being a deb!"

Runs Down Minister Drunk Driver Held

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 28—(CP).—Arrested after a car struck and seriously injured a minister as he stood beside a hearse while a funeral procession was forming up north of Glencoe, Anthony Mitacek, 34, of R. R. 1 Walkers, was held in the county jail today on a drunk driving charge.

Victim of the crash, Rev. Dr. Angus Graham, 27, minister of Glencoe United church, is at his home, and officials said his condition was "none too good."

Mitacek appeared before county Magistrate C. W. Hawkshaw and was remanded a week.

Dr. Graham was standing in front of Burn's church, Kilmartin, seven miles north of Glencoe, as a casket containing the body of Daniel Munro was being placed in the hearse following a service in the church.

The car which struck him knocked him about 10 feet and his head hit against the bumper on the mourner's car directly behind the hearse. He was carried unconscious into the parsonage and after medical treatment, was taken to his home in Glencoe.

Pioneer Passes

Mrs. Winnifred Elliott, one of Peterborough's oldest residents, who died at the home of her son, W. Coleman Elliott, 567 Aylmer Street, early this morning. A grand old lady, she held all her faculties to the end, knew how to enjoy life and how to keep friends. She had resided in this district virtually all her long life, once lived on a farm in Belmont Township, then retired to Norwood, coming to Peterborough 16 years ago.

Storekeeper Wields Wife's Broom Rap On Head Routs Bandits

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 28.—(CP)—Armed with a broom, small but plucky Essa Shaheen tackled two masked bandits who held up his confectionery and restaurant business to-day. He recovered part of the money the pair grabbed from the till and then chased them down the street to try and get the rest. They escaped with about $4 in cash.

Shaheen was alone in the store in London East when the pair walked in. They were about 20 years of age. The proprietor didn't realize the men were bandits. The one who walked towards him had his right hand in his overcoat pocket and held it as if he had a revolver in the pocket aimed at Shaheen.

"You're covered," said the bandit. "Show we where the money is. This is a hold-up. You better act quick or you'll get shot."

Second Grab Too Much.

The bandit kept the restaurant man covered and then walked over to the till. He opened it with his left hand and started to scoop up the money. In the first handful he took about $4 and stuffed it in his pocket. Then he put his hand back and picked up about $6 more.

"No, you don't," said Shaheen. "You're not going to get away with that."

Grabbing the bandit's left hand Shaheen struggled with him and took the $6 from him. All the time the man kept threatening to shoot him.

Then Mrs. Shaheen heard the struggle and came into the store with a broom in her hand. Her husband turned and grabbed the broom and started toward the bandit.

"Stand back or I'll shoot you," said the thug.

But the little restaurant man cracked the gunman over the head. The bandits turned and ran.

Commit Herman On Theft Count

Robert Nathan Herman, former manager of Pattenick's store here was by consent committed for trial by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning on the evidence of one witness on a charge of the theft of $308 and goods to the value of $1695 from Pattenick's.

The only witness heard was Harold Stevens, assistant manager of the store who swore that from time to time Herman had given him sums of money to take to the Bank of Toronto and deposit in Herman's personal account. The largest sum on any one occasion was $40. Stevens said that Herman either had the money in his hand or took it from his pocket when he gave it over to him to deposit. He understood these amounts were to cover cheques of Herman's in the firm's account.

Stevens was examined by Acting Crown Attorney F. D. Kerr, K.C. A. J. Skeans of Toronto who appeared for the accused declined to cross-examine the witness and waived all formalities to facilitate committal.

Herman was last week committed on an arson charge, and has asked for speedy trial in that case, the hearing having been set by County Judge Smoke for January 19.

Ralph Solerow, also charged with the theft of merchandise from Pattenick's elected summary trial when arrainged this morning and Mr. Kerr asked for a remand until next week because of the absence from the city of Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C. Solerow was remanded until Wednesday, January 4, bail being renewed at $1000.

Call For Woodcutters Brings 1 Man And Snow Fails Him

Orillia, Ont., Dec. 28 (CP)

BEARING a newspaper clipping which told of the plight of James Gooderich of Orillia who claimed he could not find a single man here who was willing to aid in cutting 3,000 cords of standing timber, a 30-year-old man who said he had hitch-hiked from Hamilton arrived here today and said he would take the job. The work-seeker would not divulge his name.

Heavy snows and gales of the past few days, however, have blocked the road leading to the timber stand at Coulson, 10 miles west of here, and the way will not be cleared for some days. In the meantime Chief Constable Carson obtained several snow-shovelling jobs for the hitch-hiker who said he would continue on to Sudbury and try his luck there.

He said he was the father of several small children. He had never been on relief.

Road Conditions Bad All Over Reports O.M.L.

TORONTO, Dec. 28 (CP)—Road conditions throughout Ontario are "bad" the Ontario Motor League reported today, and motor travel is not recommended on the snow-covered and icy highways.

Highways from Toronto to Niagara Falls and Detroit are open, but all surfaces are icy. Around Arthur, near Guelph, and Owen Sound, in the Bruce peninsula, traffic is at a standstill, with government ploughs bucking high drifts.

To Peterborough and eastern sections, roadways from Toronto are not quite so bad. In this area there is not too much snow, but highways and roads are covered with ice in numerous places, particularly just east of Oshawa.

North on Yonge street, the roadway as far as Barrie is ice-covered and from there to North Bay is fairly well snowed under. Many roads in the Sault Ste. Marie district are blocked.

4 Die In Blizzard

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 28 (CP)—Four persons died during yesterday's blizzards and gales which swept western Ontario, three here and one at St. Marys, about 30 miles distant. Harry M. Broadbent, 58, Stephen Mantel, 68, and Miss Julia Carroll, 64, died on London streets of heart seizures brought on by the exertion of fighting high winds. At St. Marys, George Yardley, church caretaker, died of a heart attack also attributed to exertion in the gale.

Pair Trapped 2,400 Feet Down Shaft

Lake Shore Air Blast Tumbles Rock Shakes Community

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont., Dec. 28 —(CP).—Rescue crews dug into the depths of Lakeshore Gold Mine today for two miners, trapped more than 2,400 feet underground by an explosion that caused a rock burst at 11:50 last night.

The trapped men are John Holubec, 33, and Vito Vlaisavgevich, 40, who were working in a stope or drift which collapsed during the blast.

The two were drilling rock in the drift which extended up from the 2,700-foot level to the level 125 feet above.

At noon mine officials said more than 100 rescue workers were within 40 feet of Holubec and Vlaisavgevich. Rescue workers then had been tearing away loose rock for 12 hours. There was no indication whether the trapped men were dead or alive.

Crews Work At All Entrances.

G. F. Doggett, secretary-treasurer of Lake Shore, issued the following statement at noon:

"A rock burst occurred at 11.50 p.m., December 27. The centre of the burst was in the 2,700-foot east drift. Two men, John Holubec and Vito Vlaisavgevich, who were in the drift at the time, were trapped and have not been located.

"Rescue crews were at work at all entrances to the drift immediately after the burst and at the present time there are not more than 40 feet of rock to go through to reach the men."

Holubec, a native of Poland, has a wife and one child living in Noranda, Que. He has been employed at the mine since 1933. Previous to that he lived in Hamilton, Ont.

Vlaisavgevich, who has worked here for eight years, has a wife and four children living in Yugoslavia.

Several other miners working near the 2,700-foot level were treated for shock following the air explosion and were sent to their homes. The blast shook the entire community, rattling dishes on tables and knocking open doors.

Temperature was 20 below zero and a west wind was blowing at gale force when day workers descended into the mine this morning to take over rescue work from the night shift.

No Help Wanted

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28—(AP). —Herschel Gryszpan, Jewish youth awaiting trial in Paris for killing a German embassy attache, whose death brought an assessment by the German government of $400,000,000 fine on Germany's Jews, says he wants no contributions towards his defence.

He returned a contribution of undisclosed amount, to Dr. George Herzog, San Francisco physician, with the wish that money be given instead to "the 1,200 innocent Jews robbed and exiled and suffering from cold and hunger on the Polish border."

Chinatown Turns Again To Ancient Mouse-Tooth Dried Toad Cures

MONTREAL, Dec. 28 (CP)—Part of Chinese medicinal lore for hundreds of years, such native remedies as powdered dogs teeth, bones of mice, dried animals' blood and dried toads, together with 719 kinds of herbs, barks, roots and dried leaves, once again are being brought to Montreal after being cut off for several months due to Japan's war of aggression.

By pack train from the interior of the war-ravaged country to Hong Kong, thence to Vancouver and Montreal, come the majority of the products many of which have no English names. They find a ready outlet among the Chinese of eastern Canada and the Maritime provinces.

In a dimly-lighted shop on Lagauchetiere street, broad-shouldered Wong Jok Pang for years has supplied the traditional remedies to his countrymen here. Full containers now line the walls where but a few months ago empty boxes proclaimed the shortage. Each bears a neat inscription in Chinese.

The products probably appear strange to the average Canadian, Wong said, but they have been used for generations by Chinese with beneficial results. The bones of mice and powdered dogs teeth supply calcium, while the powdered animals' blood contains an easily digested form of iron. Dried toads act as a heart stimulant.

Wong described ginseng, a root which is also grown in Canada. While he felt the Chinese product was far superior to that grown in this country, Wong declared the shape of the root decided the price.

Growing in the shape of a man, wealthy Chinese have paid as high as $100 for a single ginseng root bearing a particularly good resemblance. It is used to sharpen the appetite.

Wealth-Making System To Remain 2 Billion Fortunes Predicted

By Howard Blakeslee
(Associated Press Science Editor.)

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 28—(AP). —One or two fortunes of $2,000,000,000 or $3,000,000,000 marking the coming of the first American triple-billionaire, were predicted within 30 years to the American association for the advancement of science here today.

The forecast was made by Carl Snyder, New York economist. It was based on the proviso that the system by which wealth now is created will survive that long.

The present system is likely to continue, he concluded from a study of it measured by the pareto curve. This is a mathematical method invented by the Italian economist Vilfredo Pareto, to show the distribution of wealth, talents or other things in a nentire population.

Measured by his curve the poor have not been getting poorer and the rich richer. Wealth distribution has not changed much.

The Pareto curve, applied to income tax records, shows that although prices, production and national income have been fluctuating, there has been "remarkably slight" variation in the distribution of wealth.

A "Law" At Work.

Most remarkable, he said, is the further fact that the records of Great Britain, Germany and France, as shown in income taxes, distribute wealth in about the same proportions as in the United States. All this, he declared, suggests there is a "law" at work which regulates size and distribution of fortunes.

The explanation, he said, is that these fortunes are distributed just the same as the money-making talents. It is not a fact, he declared, that any large proportion of the wealthy inherit their riches.

Of 40,000 millionaires in 1929 United States income tax returns, he said only around two per cent. derived their money from inherited fortunes.

Spoilation of the rich, he thought, would have little effect but "would apparently result in placing untold millions upon the relief rolls permanently."

Election Contest In Norwood Village

NORWOOD, Dec. 28—(Special). —Electors at Norwood will journey to the polls on January 2 to choose five men from a slate of nine, all of whom had qualified at nine o'clock Tuesday night. Reeve J. R. Thompson, who led the council in 1938, is opposed by Charles Brown. In the council the four old councillors, T. R. Rork, Bert Scott, Earl Cuthbertson and P. S. Lockhead are running once more and the three newcomers are D. A. Barton, Rev. J. J. McIntosh and William Mildenhall.

M. W. Bailey, E. M. Lumsden and Wellington Burgess, school board members for 1938, were returned by acclamation.

Rebels Begin Shelling Of Artesa

Over 300 Square Miles 60 Villages Taken In 5 Days

HENDAYE, France, Dec. 28 — (AP).—The Spanish government army concentrated defences today at the textile town of Artesa, on the northern sector of the insurgent offensive into Catalonia. Insurgent field guns began dropping shells into the streets before dawn. Government fighters returned the fire.

The insurgents advanced to shelling position of Artesa, a communique said, with capture last night of Alos de Balaguer, 15 miles to the south and on the northern bank of the Segre River.

Artesa is in the northernmost of the three main sectors of the offensive begun on December 23, and in which insurgents claim capture of nearly 60 villages and conquest of approximately 30 square miles of territory.

There was continued fighting in the other two sectors also. Through Lerida Province, the central sector, Barcelona troops launched a series of counter-attacks.

A Cavalry Raid.

Further to the south, insurgent Navarrese cavalrymen swept across the foothills of the Sierra Dela Llena. They fell upon the rear of government forces defending the Ebro left bank and after a brief but intense battle set up machine guns at the Raibarroja bridgehead.

This cavalry victory, insurgent despatches said, firmly established the red and gold flag south of the Llena Mountains and east of the Ebro River.

At Lerida, where a part of the city lying on the left bank of the Ebro still is held by government troops, the Barcelona high command began to feel the threat of General Franco's advance on the south.

Supported by tanks and the best bombardment they could lay down from their light field batteries, the government smashed at Sarroca, Alcano, and Aspa along the Urgel Plateau. The government reported no gains in that sector.

Roads About Cavan Are Badly Drifted

CAVAN, Dec. 28—A heavy snow and wind storm raged Monday night and by ten o'clock tracks were filled in and many cars slipped off the road or were unable to climb the hills.

On the middle gravel road of Cavan where a wide bend occurs at Mr. H. Argue's gate, two cars slipped into the ditch, one at each side of the road. A team was required to pull them out.

Similar incidents occurred all over the township.

Canadian Given Malta R.A.F. Command

LONDON, Dec. 28 — (CP). — As young Canadians flock to Britain to join the Royal Air Force and the other armed forces, older Canadians, who fought with the Dominion or Imperial forces during the Great War, are moving up towards the Empire's high commands.

Latest of a series of promotions affecting Canadian officers is that of Wing Commander J. S. T. Fall, born and educated in British Columbia, who has been appointed to the Royal Air Force command at Malta.

The troubled situation in the Mediterranean makes this a key post. In the event of war with Italy, Malta would likely be the base for air operations against the enemy. At the same time, as one of the three important Mediterranean naval bases, it would be the object of concentrated attack.

Commander Fall left Canada early in the Great War and while serving at Dunkirk, France, won the Distinguished Service Cross with two bars and the Air Force Cross for "conspicuous bravery and skill in attacking hostile aircraft."

Another Canadian officer rapidly coming to the fore is Wing Commander C. L. King of Wallace, Man. Twice this year he has been promoted, first to comamnd the R.A.F. Station at Catterick, Yorkshire, and then to become the first commanding officer of the newly established No. 12 Flying Training School at Grantham. Here he has many young Canadians in his charge.

Captured, Escaped

Commander King joined the Royal Flying Corps in April, 1917, from the 27th Battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. He soon was assigned to duty in Italy, was captured by the enemy Oct. 27, 1918, but 10 days later escaped and rejoined his unit. Since the war he has served in Constantinople and in Iraq, where he was mentioned in dispatches for meritorious work during active operations in 1928.

On the diplomatic front in China is Wing Commander Harold S. Kerby, air attache of the British embassy, who is a native of Brantford, Ont., and a son of Rev. and

TORONTO, Dec. 28 (CP) — Music hath charms....

The Danforth Businessman's Association announced today the Toronto merchants installed a series of loudspeakers along the main thoroughfare of Danforth Avenue, and all-day programs of Christmas music were broadcast during the holiday season. Officials reported "the best December in years."

The programs were restricted to Christmas music, to avoid any criticism. Merchants feared other types of music might be protested. Traditional English Christmas carols, and the less familiar Christmas tunes of other countries were used. The only persons to complain were individual merchants, who "got tired of hearing the same music over and over again." But the shoppers were pleased—and the customer is always right.

The plan, tried for the first time this year in Toronto, was patterned after a system used in Milwaukee, Wis.

Carmel Scholars Unite In Concert

MILLBROOK, Dec. 28.—Carmel Sunday School and Public School united for their annual Christmas tree and concert, held in the church on Thursday evening, the building being filled to capacity, and Rev. A. L. Sisco acting as chairman.

The program opened with an Address of Welcome by Lois Gardiner, and the school followed with a chorus, "Deck the Halls." A dialogue, "A Minister's Mistake," had as cast, Raymond Challice (the minister); Mrs. Smith (Lolo Gardiner), and the maid (Ruth Thorne). Recitations were given by John Thorne and Elizabeth Olan, and "Four Little Maids at Tea," presenting a teaparty and song with motions, was a popular number by Lois and Jean Gardiner, Evelyn Thorne, and Kathleen Olan. Kathleen Olan and Opal Challice gave Christmas recitations, and "Hats of Other Days," by eight girls, with a drill at the end, literally brought down the house.

A group of recitations by Emmerson Elgar and Jean Challice, led up to the exercise, "An Important Letter," those taking part including Kathleen Olan, Edwin and Evelyn Thorne, Jean and Lois Gardiner; each child wore a red cap and green sash, and carried the letter "C", narrating what this stands for at Christmas time, and in sacred history.

A song by the Juniors preceded the dialogue, "How Grandma Gray Helped Santa," the title role being well impersonated by Lola Gardiner, and the other characters: Martha Riley (Ruth Thorne); Joe Hardy (Harold Thorne), being also well taken. A two-part song, "Away in Judea," and a recitation by Evelyn Thorne, were followed by "Six Little Milkmaids," each wearing a sunbonnet and carrying a milk pail and stool; the maidens were: Elsie Gibson, Marian, Ruth and Evelyn Thorne, Lola and Jean Gardiner.

Sunday School members presented the dialogue, "A Telegram," including Martha Lunn, Luelle Kennedy, Harvey Challice, and Freddie Hard, and the whole school followed with a chorus, "That What I Want for Christmas," after which recitations were given by Ruth Elgar and John Challice, and then came the final number, "A Farewell," with Raymond Challice, Elsie Gibson, Edwin and Evevn Thorne, Jean Gardiner, and Kathleen Olan participating. When all had concluded their part, backs were turned to the audience and the word "Good Bye" was spelled, each having a letter between their shoulders.

Santa Claus' arrival was heralded by much stamping of feet and jingling of sleigh bells, and the prizes won by Sunday school pupils were presented by the superintendent, Mr. George Patterson; the jolly old Saint Nicholas (Will Lunn), with the help of the teacher, Miss Muriel Ball, distributing the gifts from the gaily-trimmed and lighted tree.

Power Lines Repaired.

STRATFORD, Ont., Dec. 28. — (CP).—Electrical power coursed over high voltage lines into seven towns west of here to-day, thanks to the efforts of crews of linemen who struggled through deep snowdrifts in a raging blizzard to repair broken power lines.

The towns of Mitchell, Seaforth, Clinton, Brussels, Atwood, Lucknow and Goderich went without power all of yesterday when the high winds, of near gale velocity, tore out lines and blew over poles. Linemen repaired the breaks last night after working in the blinding storm since 5.30 a.m. yesterday.

Meat Runs Low.

E. B. Smith, packing company official, said only two trucks reached the Stratford packing plant yesterday because of the blinding snow storm which made driving almost impossible. Roads remained impassable to-day and it was uncertain when further supplies of meat would reach the city.

The trucks which arrived yesterday brought only 22 hogs and owing to the shortage of livestock the packing plant was closed down after only a few hours' work. One truck load of hogs came in early to-day but three of the animals were found frozen to death.

Any New Bargain With Hitler "Stall For Time"

By Dewitt Mackenziet
(Associated Press Foreign Affairs Writer.)

LONDON, Dec. 28.—(AP)—There are many indications that at least Europe has reached a turning point in the relations between the Totalitarians (especially Nazidom) and the Democracies—a decided hardening of democratic sentiment against further concessions to threats.

The last few weeks have seen a revulsion of feeling in both Britain and France towards more surrenders. This feeling applies both to governments and general publics. The change is impelled by the conclusion that further bargaining is futile.

I am in a position to state with assurance that many officials of the democracies have now adopted the view that Fuehrer Hitler's mind is so inflexibly fixed on his program of empire building that nothing will stop him short of defeat in war or the collapse of his regime. This feeling has been growing steadily ever since Germany's annexation of Austria.

To make it jell, however, it has required the smashing of Czecho-Slovakia, the extension of Nazi domination through the Balkans, and the prediction of a German move to gain control of the Russian Ukraine in the spring. To this must be added the latest anti-Semitic drive, and the claims of Germany's Italian ally to French territories.

Advocates of a policy of appeasement clung to the last to the idea that they could bargain with Hitler. I understand, however, this hope has been abandoned very generally and it now is agreed that the only value of such an approach to Berlin is to postpone an ultimate reckoning. That pretty well sums up the sentiment with which England entered the Christmas holidays.

Crater Widow Sails With Second Husband

NEW YORK, Dec. 28—(AP). — Attorney Emil Ellis disclosed today that the widow of the long-missing New York supreme court justice Joseph Force Crater, who disappeared on Aug. 6, 1930, sailed secretly yesterday with her second husband for Europe.

He said the widow, Mrs. Stella Crater Kunz, and her husband, Carl, left aboard the French liner Normandie on a belated honeymoon trip to Germany.

The lawyer said he would file a petition later today for probate of justice Crater's will. Appending to the petition, he said, would be a note written by the missing jurist to Mrs. Crater which he hoped would establish legal presumption of death.

The note, found shortly after Judge Crater's disappearance and made public a few months later, ended with the words, "am very weary. Love, Joe."

"It indicated Justice Crater was in a very depressed mood," Ellis said, "but gave no indication he intended to take his own life or go away."

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Dec. 28 — (C.P.). — Strength at Liverpool and Chicago, occasioned by inquiries for wheat by India and continued cold weather in the United States winter wheat belt, had a lifting effect on Winnipeg wheat futures to-day, resulting in slight gains. Closing quotations were ⅝ to ½ cent higher, December at 61½, May 63¼, and July 63¾ cents.

Although trading was generally quiet, a firm undertone ruled throughout the session. Exports in Canadian wheat were placed at 250,000 bushels.

At Liverpool, where trading was resumed after being closed for three days during the Christmas week-end, prices took a strong stand and at the close were 1d to 1¼d higher.

We Noticed

....Peterborough's dancing ladies are all for the hoop skirts and petticoats that feature this winter's evening mode, but are still very hesitant about appearing in the strapless bodices that fashion has again brought to the fore.

....Why they should balk at no straps at all, and consider themselves properly dressed for a public appearance by the addition of two tiny narrow straps over the shoulders, is something that no one will ever understand — but therein lies the girlish modesty our elders so often question.

....Two requisites we must have to wear them..lovely shoulders and a lovely neck..as well as a lack of shyness. And here is a tip....the swaying hoops of the crinoline dancing skirts look dreadful when worn by a woman who strides, so you who love to "step out" must remember to glide and sway gently when going demure in a fashionable evening dress.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where a dinner was served to the immediate relatives. Later the couple left amid showers of confetti for a honeymoon trip to Toronto and on their return they will reside near Frankford.

Ninety-Nine Per Cent. Of The Women Who Work At Trades, In Business Or In Professions Do So Out Of Pure Economic Necessity

A NUMBER of the readers of this column have taken exception to an article recently published in it in which I expressed my unalterable belief that, inasmuch as women are not only human beings but also citizens of the U.S.A., they are, as such, entitled under its Constitution to the right to the pursuit of life, liberty and a job.

My esteemed opponents tell me that I am all wrong in my views and that what's the matter with this country is the working woman. They point out triumphantly that there are 9,000,000 women engaged in gainful occupations, and that each of these women is getting a pay envelope that belongs by right to a man. They further depose that woman's place is in the home and not in a store or office; that the only infant industry in which her services should be employed is filling the cradle. And lastly, if not leastly they are strong for a man having a monopoly on supporting the family.

This is a grand platform of woman's privileges and perquisites on which 99 per cent. of our sisters would gladly leap if only it existed in reality instead of in the minds of idealists. It is a state of affairs that should go along with the chicken in the pot and two cars in a garage of which a French and an American politician both dreamed, but which, unfortunately, no one has been able to materialize as yet.

The number of women who punch time clocks for fun, who would rather stand behind a counter than dance all night, who are so restless that they are not willing to stay put in a luxurious home and who would rather espouse a career than a man is so small that it cuts no figure in the economic set-up. In the whole history of the country we have had but one Hetty Green, who played the game of high finance for sheer love of it, as so many men do.

Few of the 9,000,000 women who toil in the commercial world ever make more than a very moderate success, which shows that they do not put their hearts into their work. And if any further proof were needed to prove that woman's real craving is for domesticity and pots and pans instead of typewriters and adding machines and such like, it is found in the fact that nearly every business girl sets up her own little apartment with the first money she earns.

The cosmic urge of every daughter of Eve is toward love, marriage, children and home. The need of these goes down into the very roots of her being, and you don't have to tell the modern girl how much better off she would be in her own sweet little home than she is in the hurly-burly of an office. Or how much nicer it would be to have a strong husband to lean on and to support her than it is to have to hustle her own bread and butter, and often not knowing where the next meal is coming from. She is as firmly sold on that idea as you are. Getting married and having a home of her own has been her dream and her prayer ever since she could remember.

It is not aversion to domesticity and matrimony that sends girls out to compete with men in business. It is the necessity for eating. For, alas and alack, you can't conscript men into marriage and make each male take a female to support. Moreover, many men prefer single blessedness to taking a chance on double wretchedness. Many other men never make enough to feed a canary bird, to say nothing of a wife. So unless you can institute polygamy and force millionaires to marry by the dozen, what is a poor girl to do? How is she going to get this strong-armed go-getter to lean upon and fetch home the bacon for her to fry?

There are many hundreds of thousands of women who cannot marry, or having married, have sick or disabled husbands and little children looking to them for food and clothes. If we take away from these women their jobs and deny them the right to earn money honestly and decently we force them into following what has been called the oldest profession in the world for women. Nor do we better matters morally when we make marriage the alternative to starvation. The woman who marries a man solely for support is no better than her sister of the street who sells herself by the night instead of a lifetime.

For myself, I never see of a morning the army of bright-faced, upstanding, self-respecting women starting out to their long, hard day's work instead of being parasites on some one else without feeling like taking off my hat to them and saluting them, for I know that honor and valor and courage are passing by.

Fashions

Here's a bright plaid wool dress, small fashionables will love. It's the new "monastic or angel" silhouette older sister is wearing. This thrilling little rabbit's wool dress is cut on the bias....gives a smart tight bodice effect while the skirt flares with a provocative swirl. The fullness is held in at the waistline by the belt....which may be of self-material or leather. Note the cunning shoulder-interest sleeves and Peter Pan collar or cardigan neck See small view. And by the way, the crisp snowy white pique collar and cuffs are made detachable. Sew a self bias bind around inner edge, so they can be easily removed for laundering. If daughter prefers cottons, the patterns also provides that it may be cut on the straight of the material. Peasant print in percale, plaid gingham, challis print, etc., are a practical choice. Two major parts to the pattern. Cut it out and in a jiffy....it's finished.

Style No. 3077 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 39-inch material with ⅝ yard of 35-inch contrasting.

Progressive Dinner Party For Clubby Hostesses

(By Mary Moore.)

One of our "constant readers" (bless 'em) gives us this week's topic by sending the following letter:

"On New Year's Eve we intend to have a Progressive Party, after which we are going to a Breakfast Dance at one of the hotels. I expect there will be about seven couples in the party and I was wondering if you would be kind enough to send me a list of suggestions for the different courses, that could be served at each house.

"As there are no maids at any of the houses, the courses would have to be prepared ahead of time."

Age is at last beginning to show—for when I think of dancing at breakfast time after dashing from house to house for each course of a dinner all night, I fairly wilt. Since mine is merely a desk-chair version of the party I'll manage.

First Course (of Progressive Dinner)
French Onion Soup (with Croutons and Grated Cheese)
or
Hot Cider Punch and Assorted Canapes
or
Hors d'oeuvres Platter.

This course should be rather plentiful, regardless of which item you choose, for guests will be hungry, and expect great things of a progressive meal.

If French onion soup is chosen it could be kept hot in covered pot in oven at low temperature—about 180, and the toast or croutons could be made and kept hot in oven, too. Or Soup could be kept hot in double boiler and toast could be made after guests arrive—but I think this would take too long—especially for a first course—when everybody's appetite is sharpened with anticipation.

If the cider punch is used all the fruit ingredients but the cider could be mixed beforehand, and when serving time arrives, the cider could be quickly brought to boiling point and added to the other ingredients—this would make it plenty hot enough to drink.

Second and Main Course.
Lobster Newburg in Patty Shells
Potato Chips
Broccoli with Hollandaise or Yellow String Beans
with Mustard Sauce

Both the vegetables suggested can be held hot in top of double boiler or in covered dish in oven if needed.

The lobster newburg can be made all except the yolks which would be added just before serving (see below).

Many cooks would say you should not serve a newburg and a vegetable with Hollandaise at the same meal—but if the newburg is in patty shells and the Hollandaise is served sparingly I know it will be a success, for I have served it myself and found it a very pleasing combination.

Lobster Newburg.

Two lbs. lobster (fresh cooked or canned), ¼ cup butter, ½ teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne, slight grating nutmeg, 1 tablespoon sherry, 1 tablespoon brandy, 1-3 cup cream, yolks 2 eggs.

If fresh lobster meat is used remove from shell and cut in slices—if canned lobster meat is used leave it in large pieces as they come from the can. Melt butter, add lobster, and cook slowly 3 minutes. Add seasonings and wine, cook 1 minute, then add cream and yolks of eggs slightly beaten. Stir until thickened. Serve in patty shells or on toast or with puff paste points.

I would advise buying potato chips—they can be warmed after the guests arrive, and save endless work (and smell from smoking fat) if you buy them instead of trying to make them at home.

If you choose broccoli, cook it in plenty of boiling water until it is just tender—uncovered. This will retain its bright green color.

Make your hollandaise carefully—I think the following recipe is the best one I know:

Genuine Hollandaise

One-half cup butter, yolks 2 eggs, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne, 1-3 cup boiling water. Divide the butter in 3 pieces; put one in saucepan with yolks of eggs and lemon juice, stand saucepan in larger one containing boiling water, and stir constantly with a wire whisk until butter is melted; then add second piece of butter, and as mixture thickens, third piece. Add water, cook 1 minute, and season with salt and cayenne. If mixture curdles add 2 tablespoons heavy cream or 2 tablespoons boiling water. Instantly remove from heat 1 minute after water is added.

Third—Salad Course

(If an Hors d'oeuvres Platter is used in place of Soup OR Punch and canapes, the salad course would have to be omitted.)

Celery Hearts OR Roquefort Stuffed Celery OR Stuffed Tomato Salad
Mayonnaise
OR Head Lettuce Wedges with Roquefort French Dressing
Ripe or Green Olives
Cheese Straws

The preparation of the Salad Course is self explanatory—but it should be distinctly fresh vegetables—not potato or bean salad or the like made from cooked vegetables.

Fourth Course
Cafe Noir
Tray of Assorted Cheeses and Assorted Crackers

I think a nice assortment of cheeses consists of: Roquefort or Stilton; Philadelphia or Baumert; Swiss or Edam and some Canadian Cheddar either Cream Style or Old.

I have given you many alternatives because you may dislike some of the items I suggest OR some of them may be too ordinary or too costly. I hope you all have a good time on New Year's Eve and that the Whole New Year will bring greater happiness and healthier meals!

Calls Our Bridge Funny!

There is some sort of a controversy going on in Seattle, Washington, about the building of a bridge across Lake Washington. It appears feeling is running high and the newspapers have been talking in big type.

In the December 18 edition of the Seattle Sunday Times there is a page devoted to a discussion of the local issue by C. B. Blethen, and it is apparent he is out to assassinate the idea of a pontoon or floating bridge being erected. And here it is we become interested. Intensely so. Mr. Blethen says:

"But pontoon bridges persisted up to the very beginning of this century and one or two are still afloat. Probably the longest structure of this type in North America stretches across Chemong Lake at Peterborough, Ontario, Canada. A picture of this structure is shown herewith. Note that the photographer could not keep his camera in a horizontal position."

And sure enough the picture of our floating bridge at Chemong is printed on that page a good three-columns wide. Under it we find the wording: "Funny looking structure that stretches across the lake at Peterborough, Ontario."

It was taken on a day when there was a bit of lake water running over the surface, but Mr. Blethen is quite wrong when he said the photographer could not keep his camera in position. Camera men around here are good at that; they will keep their machine in position and get a picture even though they topple from the bridge.

We never before heard of this Mr. C. B. Blethen, and he may be a nice enough chap and all that, but at the moment he has rubbed us the wrong way. When he refers to our Chemong bridge as a "funny looking structure" it is asking too much that we remain quietly seated. It is no use to jump up and down and say things because Mr. Brethen would not hear them.

Chemong bridge is a floating structure, nine-tenths of a mile long. If it is a windy day with rough water they may bet a decided thrill when going over. For that there is no charge. It generally gets rough usage when the ice breaks in the spring, but its spinal column remains intact, and a few new ribs are added and it is again as good as new. What's more—it is the only one of its kind on the North American continent.

Giving Was Misplaced

It is hard to state whether this incident indicates anything in a general way or not. But it took place right here in Peterborough. A boy was going along George Street when he noticed a roll of bills lying in the snow at the edge of the sidewalk. He picked them up and went to the police station to report what he had found. And that of course was and is a right and proper thing for any person to do.

The rest of the story: Not long afterward a man reported the loss of $32 to the police, and as he described the roll and named the exact amount there is no reason to suspect he was not the owner of the cash.

The strange part is that he had been begging on the streets during the day. How much of his roll he had accumulated that way we do not know, but we do know there are plenty of men who work for a living never have anything like $32 in their pockets unless it be on a two-week pay-day. People who gave money to the man would do so on the assumption that he had nothing. The $32 roll in that case explains that their kindness was badly misplaced.

Not Hard To Explain

Cabled reports which came via the Havas News Agency tell us that Christmas was not what it used to be in Germany. Coming from such a source as Havas the reports can be accepted as true. Prior to Christmas the newspapers had been urging the people to make the best of Christmas and to rejoice because Germany now had 10,000,000 more subjects by reason of the annexation of Austria and the Sudeten areas of Czechoslovakia.

We learn there was money to be spent and the people were minded to spend it, but the trouble was they could not secure the food supplies they desired. In our own land if a man had the money to buy a turkey and then found there was no turkey to be had he would buy a goose and make the best of it. In Germany the second choice of food was often as scarce as the first. Back of that there is a reason and Havas states it plainly. A great stock of food stuff has been taken from general distribution channels and placed in the war reserve.

The supply of candy was sold out several days before Christmas and no more could be made; oranges and tangerenes were scarce; merchants were allowed to obtain only a limited quantity of citrus fruit; housewives could not secure sufficient eggs to bake a traditional German Christmas cake. For the first time it was difficult to obtain even canned fruit.

All this is not so secret that it cannot be explained. It looks much like a part of a well-laid plot. Six weeks ago Hitler spoke at a function which marked the laying of a new road, and stated food was scarce, having reference to cereals, and the one way to relieve that scarcity would be to have German colonies where supplies could be produced. No doubt at the Christmas season it was considered advisable to further impress upon the German people exactly what Hitler had said—food was scarce.

If Germany is scarce of food there is a very easy way to remedy it. There is plenty of wheat and rye in the world and Germany could purchase all she needed. There is plenty of butter to be had and that too can be purchased. But if food imports were to come in freely the German peope would not be alarmed; they would not have to tighten the belt and do without, and they would not be sold on the Hitler idea that colonies must be secured in order to produce more food for the millions of Germans. The apparent shortage of supplies in Germany at Christmas is easily explained. Hitler wanted it that way.

Europe Stirs Africa

It may sound strange to say that the latest European flare has taken place in Africa, but that is what has happened because it is being manipulated from Europe. Italian troops are reported to have been strengthened on the border of the French Somaliland, which is a small territory on the coast section of Ethiopia, now held by Italy. In the French territory is situated Djibouti, which is the seaport terminus for the railway from Addis Ababa. This seaport is at the point where the Red Sea comes into conjunction with the Gulf of Aden.

That French port Djibouti is subject to ready pressure from Italy. Apart from having considerable military force in Ethiopia, Italy also owns Eritrea, a colony on the north of Ethiopia, as well as the Italian Somaliland to the south of Ethiopia.

There is not a place in the world where European nations have secured as many holdings as in Africa and for the most part they are badly placed as far as boundaries go and are a standing invitation to ambitious nations to make trouble. It has been freely predicted that Africa would be the centre of the next trouble and the prediction has foundation in fact. Germany and Italy want more African territory and they have probably plans well in hand to try and take it.

Selling To United States

There may be explanations for everything but it seems odd that the amount of farm goods which Canada is permitted by quota to ship to United States during a year has not been more thoroughly exhausted.

Seed potatoes are the only commodity of which we shipped all that were permitted up to December 3. In this country we have been turning so much of our cream into butter that we have a surplus which we do not need and which we would gladly sell, but we shipped only 34 per cent. of the cream which we could have sold to United States.

It looks as though our quota on calves will be filled to about 80 per cent., and cattle over 700 pounds to about the same extent, but on dairy cows we will have sold to United States only 25 per cent. of the specified number allowed in the trade agreements.

One man who studied the markets of United States decided he could make turnips more attractive. He buys them from farmers, then scrubs and waxes them and places a seal on the cut-off part at the top. When this is done the turnips are wrapped much the same as oranges or choice apples, and he sells at a good price about all he can handle. So there is something to be said for making a close study of a market, for there are many places in United States where the Canadian turnip is looked upon with favor.

In The Days Of Mittens

There appeared a few days ago this notice in a weekly paper in a Western Ontario village:

"Lost: On Wednesday, near S.S. No. 3, new pair of boy's lined leather gloves, small size. Finder please leave at school if convenient or return to this office."

And that S.S. No. 3 is out in the country, and that means a boy out in the country was going to school wearing a pair of lined leather gloves which in turn seems to indicate that that section of the rural community is going high hat.

It was quite different at the school house on the Tenth Concession. The gloves of those days were mittens, and they were made at home. As a rule they were striped up and down with black as the basic color and relieved by touches of red or blue. Nor was there much chance of a pair of mittens becoming lost and it would be impossible that one of them could be mislaid. They were joined together by a long knitted string which passed up the arm of the overcoat, over the shoulder and down the other sleeve. By that simple method it always turned out that where one mitten was the other was not far off.

At recess time when the weather was about right for snow balls the handicraft of the entire Tenth Concession and several of the side lines was laid out for display and drying on the brick foundation which supported the box stove at the rear of the room. It was as natural and right to dry mittens there as it was to bake onions in the hot ashes which were scooped down into the hearth of the old kitchen range. When it came four o'clock they were very dry and very warm and never was the left separated from the right.

It may be a sign of affluence that a boy is going to S.S. No. 3 wearing lined leather gloves, but rather fond memories of woollen mittens and the strings that held them together leads to the belief that such a lad is missing something and that the home from which he comes is also missing that thrill which comes only from a sense of something useful being accomplished. A home which could not or did not produce in season striped mittens for its offspring could hardly have passed muster on the Tenth.

NOTE AND COMMENT

It is claimed that the expense of Toronto's libraries has increased 224 per cent. in twenty years. That, we presume, is a matter of bookkeeping.

When the smoke from Christmas cigars mingles with that from the campaign ropes there should be plenty of carbon monoxide in the wintry air.

"British Democracy on Trial" reads a heading in a Toronto paper, but before anyone becomes panic-stricken we hasten to assure them the reference is merely to the Toronto elections.

Canadian Welfare Council is to take up the question of transients. Meanwhile they continue to sleep in police stations and eat when they can panhandle successfully.

They have discovered a coating that will make glass invisible. If it has the same effect upon dirt the window cleaners will join the ranks of the unemployed.

Keeper of a park in Victoria, B.C., reports a gold fish with two tails. Probably during the tourist season there were many cars driving around with spare tires. Ideas do spread.

James Brown, a weather prophet of Port Stanley, says we will have nothing more than ten below zero this winter, so it's hardly worth dusting off the heavy underwear.

If you want to know what is going on in your own community it is well to read the home paper. On the day before Christmas the Examiner carried 260 items telling about people coming and going for the holiday.

In United States 400 lives were lost during the Christmas holidays and over 300 of them from auto traffic. And possibly all these folk had been sending and receiving cards on which there was something about a Merry Christmas.

Reports say the food stores in Germany run low but the munitions stocks fairly bulge in their immensity. The need for munitions may be pressing, but the urge for three meals per day is something with which most people also have to reckon.

Mayor Day of Toronto announces there will be a surplus of $250,000 in municipal accounts to end 1938, and a reduction for next year of $140,000 in administration costs. So the old stone wall which has long been called "uncontrollable expense" is beginning to bend.

Sault Ste. Marie Star tells about William Evans, a resident who is not far removed from the 70-year mark, and the claim is made he can bend over and pick a lead pencil off the floor with his teeth. Quite a trick, but has the gentleman never discovered how much easier it would be to use his hand?

WEAK SPOT

(By A.R.K.)

¶ When it turns cold in winter time, then I lay packing on my spine, it sheds each chilly blast; and I walk bravely in the cold, by weather men I have been told, the low spell will not last.

¶ And when I wish to gather heat, to ease my corn-bound set of feet, when winter's hand still knocks; I simply travel to the store, and know what I am looking for, some thick and woolly socks.

¶ And when it really starts to freeze, I swing my hands with perfect ease, my mitts are warm as can be; I rub my chilly nose with them, and walk with cheerful winter men, my hands don't bother me.

¶ If wind strikes hard upon my chest, then I can wear my winter vest, is is a peach indeed; and I can put it on with ease, and face the stiffest sort of breeze, to worry I've no need.

¶ So I can dress to face the cold, although I'm getting bent and old, cold days can do no harm; around my neck I place a shawl, if I feel any doubt at all, with wristbands on my arms.

¶ My ears remain the only spot, that suffer like they shouldn't ought, I'm safe in foot and knees; but when there comes cold wind and snow, 'tis then my ears are filled with woe — they flap before the breeze.

Religion Grows With Russians

AN OUTSTANDING feature of the renascent religious life in Russia is poverty. All the sumptuousness of the Orthodox rite has disappeared in the agony. It has given way to surroundings which recall those of the primitive Christian communities. The liturgy has retained only the barest essentials: the chalices are of pewter or wood, the chasubles of crudely colored cloth; the priest lives on alms and dwells in a tumbled-down ruin or hides in the woods. Perhaps he is a young man who has been secretly ordained, or an old monk rendered homeless by the persecution. In any case, very different from the big-bellied pope which the antireligious propaganda represents with guns and bags of gold holding out his hand to the capitalist.

The social influence of the priest has thus grown considerably. Especially in the country districts, the clergy share more and more in the daily life and work of their parishioners. They join in the activity of the Kolkhoze and even of the factory, and there they are often particularly useful in expounding the economic or social measures taken by the government, or for the part they play in union activity, or in putting at the disposal of the faithful heir culture and technical experience.

THE PRIEST is a typical representative of the sovietic intelligentsia. He has a passion for reading—books, reviews and newspapers. He is intensely interested in current events and in what is called sovietic social activity. H has submitted to the general trend of Russian life: having become more "realistic" he has by that fact become more Europeanized. He is more like a Catholic cure or a Protestant pastor than his predecessors.

It often happens that the local party head and the priest, although officially hostile to one another, work hand in hand to inspire the seasonal agricultural activities or in the propaganda campaigns which have social aims. Whenever there is a call "to mobilize all the forces of the country," the Soviet priest will be in the front line.

But it is precisely this new type of priest, who differs so enormously from that ridiculed by the antireligious propaganda, that causes anxiety to the Soviet leaders. On the eve of the elections these realized that the warnings of Kroupskaya were only too well grounded, and that the clergy were a very important factor in the electoral campaign ....Yaroslavsky (head of the "Godless") cited these figures: "If it is remembered that the number of believers constitutes 30 per cent of the population of the towns, it will at once be seen that there are millions of Soviet subjects who are faithful to religion. Among the rural population, two-thirds are believers."

Yaroslavsky continued: "There are some people who take comfort from the thought that a great number of churches are closed, and think that that means the end of religion. That is a great mistake. The danger consists precisely in the fact that although the churches have been closed, our work has not been seriously effective among the masses. The priests are without their churches, but they are surrounded by their faithful. They have simply become 'traveling priests.' The 'traveling priest' sets out with his paraphernalia, which can all be carrid in a light suitcase: a censer, some bread and a flask of wine for Communion. He goes from village to village. If he has not visited a village for a year or so, he baptizes all the children who have been born in the meanwhile, conducts marriages and funerals. Though the churches have been shut, the priests continue to be necessary in the eyes of the people.

According to the official figures quoted by Yaroslavsky, there are at the present time 30,000 parishes in the U.S.S.R. legally recognized and registered. Each of these parishes counts some 25 religious enthusiasts forming a sort of confraternity to assist the priests. There are therefore about 750,000 militant Christians working legally among the masses and contributing largely to the upkeep and development of Christian life.

In spite of the antireligious offensive launched before Easter, the churches were packed. The Soviet press continues to deplore the collective baptisms of the "traveling priests" and the immense attraction which religion has for the masses.

OCEANS OF BEER.

THE ENGLISH, like the Germans, are a nation of beer drinkers, and both countries have numerous songs of the roistering type, some of which are almost classic ballads. Among these may be numbered "Brown October Ale," the popularity of which may be the reason for the curious fact that more beer is brewed in the British Isles in October than in any other month of the year.

The amount passing the excise officers has increased each October for the last seven years, according to the Stratford Beacon-Herald, and this Fall reached the enormous total of 1,144,830 barrels. As there are 36 gallons to the barrel, that means, in round figures, 52,000,000 gallons and if it were all sold by the glass over the counters of the "pubs"—most of it is—that would mean 1,040,000,000 glasses.

NEEDN'T PITY OYSTER.

SYMPATHY for oysters eaten alive is wasted sympathy, according to T. Ireland, F.R.Z.S., Australian Museum Conchologist.

He laughed at a statement of the president of the New South Wales Gun Club (Captain J. R. Patrick) that "sticking forks in live oysters and eating them was the cruellest thing he knew."

Ireland spends his life among fish and shells.

"You can cut an oyster into 50 bits, and it will feel no pain," said Mr. Ireland joyfully.

"It's about as sensitive as the sole of my boot."

• "On The Road" Since 1934

THE following story was related to the Examiner by a young man from this city who has been "on the road" since 1934:

I left home because I couldn't find any work. The first place I struck was Port Hope but I didn't know much then about the way to go and find something to eat and I put in nearly all my time trying to get something to do, but it wasn't any good. I saw one big house and although I know better now, I went there and asked for something to eat. I was told to get out and stay out. That was in the summer and I was dead tired so I laid down on the lawn next door and went to sleep, and the first thing I knew some person was hitting the bottom of my shoes and they were pretty thin. He was a policeman and I told him I had been looking for work and something to eat. He took me along with him down to the station and gave me a ticket on a cafe for a meal. When I had finished that he was at the door and kept an eye on me, saying that I would have to leave town as quickly as possible.

Some fellows I met near the railway station said it wasn't any use in trying to stop any place, and so I headed off east and landed in Nova Scotia. It did not take me long to find that conditions were pretty much the same down there and there was nothing for a single unemployed man to do. One place or another I met a lot of young fellows and nearly all of them would have gone to work any place and been glad of the chance, but instead they were just putting in time and they all knew they had to keep on moving from one place to the other.

STARTS FOR WEST

Finding nothing in the East I came back and it took me best part of a year to make my way out to Winnipeg. The Royal Mounted Police were there and they saw to it that no person was going any farther West so I stayed right there. That was in 1935. We heard there were a number of unemployed coming from Vancouver on their way to Ottawa to ask Mr. Bennett to close the relief camps, but they only got as far as Regina when there were riots and fighting. If they had got through as far as Winnipeg there were 4,000 there who had planned to join them on the way to Ottawa. A number of us on hearing about it decided we might as well get on to Ottawa as any place else so we hopped a freight going East, but heard the police were riding two cars ahead so at the first chance we slid out.

The next chance to get through came when we got five flour buses, but they were stopped by the police because they were carrying transients, so we had to make the best of it and walked 20 miles to Kenora. There we stayed in the arena but that was no good and the next turn was to get back to Winnipeg. It is like that all the time, just changing from one place to another and it's rather tough in the winter season.

HAD WAY PAID

A lot of us got out of Winnipeg by agreeing to go back to Ontario if we had our way paid. That was when a lot of unemployed went to Ottawa and it took us two weeks to get from Belleville to that city, but when we got there Mr. Bennett didn't want to see us but he told the police not to put any of us in jail so long as we made no trouble. We stayed in a park there and plenty of people brought food along and we did our cooking right there.

That was the only time when I have seen the unemployed having any part in sport and we organized a softball team and played a couple of games with some of the Ottawa people. But after a small delegation did see Mr. Bennett we were really no better off and that is actually what we expected. It's a waste of time going to a government.

We broke up there and went in all directions. I didn't come back to Peterborough but headed for North Bay where the police held me for a couple of days, but after that I made my way to Regina, but there I landed in jail, after which I went to one of the government camps near Regina for the winter of 1935. We got $5 a month and slept in bunks and had our meals.

IN TROUBLE

We had a sort of club in the place where we talked things over and word of it got out and I was sent for as the leader, although I had nothing particular to do with the organization. But I was told I must leave and at once and right then it was 25 below zero. After I was taken out the rest of the boys left the place and I don't know where they went. I rode the rods as far as Winnipeg and went to a bush where there was some work. I was not keen on leaving that but the first day in Winnipeg I got word that my father was sick and telling me to come home. I wrote that I didn't have hardly any money but mother made some fancy things and sold or raffled them and sent me enough to get home. With what I earned in the bush and what mother sent I had $2 left and bought buns and milk for the trip home. I admit it was mighty nice to be at home but I could find no work and if I stayed I would have had to live on my father's pension which is about enough to keep him going and no more. So I wasn't going to live on him. I caught on with a carnival and went on the road again, and it is surprising the number of married men in every place we played who came and asked for work. There would not be enough pay for them to send anything home to their folks, so the carnival people never hire them. When with the carnival I had hard work, long hours, but enough to eat and a place to sleep and I liked it. It made me feel that I was at least getting the chance I had looked for.

• There Were 82 Vice-Presidents

By H. B. ELLISTON

SOME DAY we may get light on why the auditors of McKesson & Robbins added their certification to the company's books when so much of the assets mentioned in them were merely offshoots of F. Donald Coster's imagination. It all seems very peculiar. Auditors in general are very particular checkers, and I always thought, on the basis of very slight experience, that they even went through the petty cash drawer with a fine tooth comb. At any rate, a business friend once complained to me that his auditors actually counted the stamps! Auditors, doubtless, have to take something for granted, but it is passing strange that in the McKesson & Robbins case they apparently took part of the company for granted, till some bright person, not an auditor, found that it simply didn't exist.

Out of this experience, probably, there will be new government regulation with a view to compelling more rigid accounting practice. No law is needed. In the past the feeling has been developed, and it is quite a totalitarian feeling, that the Government can create virtues as well as security, stability, and efficiency simply through an act of Congress. But no law ever made an honest man. The McKesson & Robbins case is a problem in the human equation, not a problem in the lack of law or the enforcement of the law.

Of course, these human frailties are encouraged by the set-up of modern business. I have discussed this problem many times before. Ownership of industry is dispersed through the system of stock selling. Yet there are stockholders who actually don't know that the ownership of a stock certificate makes them a part-owner of an industrial property. I know that because in the past I have questioned some stockholders in order to find out.

Thus stockholders not only don't control the companies they own; some have no feeling that they control anything more than a stock certificate, and therefore they have no sense of responsibility. In these circumstances managers of corporations are the real bosses. They may own only a tiny fraction of the stock outstanding. But, armed with proxies they can collect, or in default of the exercise of voting power on the part of the stockholders, they are in a position of control as well as administration.

This was F. Donald Coster's position. I believe he managed to buy up 10 per cent of McKesson & Robbins stock, and then bluffed his way into the presidency of the company. Then, with the alleged help of his brothers, he milked it.

How his nefarious operations escaped the eye of the directors and the staff is another mystery. In the McKesson & Robbins case most of the directors were operating officials — not guinea pigs, as they call figureheads in the City of London. As for the staff, there were no fewer than 82 vice-presidents.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

HOW AMIABLE are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.

Yea, the sparrow hath found an house, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young, even thine altars, O Lord of hosts, my King and my God. Blessed are they that will dwell in thy house: they will be still praising thee. Selah....

For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness. For the Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly. —Ps. lxxxiv, 1-4, 10, 11.

LIVE ON THE LAND.

WITH a $2,000 a year indemnity and a per diem allowance of $10 for committee work in between sessions, Alberta is rapidly building up a special coterie of professional politicians who live on the land and out of the treasury. At one time it was considered an honor to represent a constituency in the Alberta Legislature. Now it is developing into a rich plum designed to keep the private members on the government side of the House voting right and not kicking over the traces.

A Bit of Nonsense

Beware

"Did you receive many Christmas cards, Miss Brown?" asked the mean young man.

"Oh, yes, quite a lot," replied the girl, "and there was an unsigned one I thought particularly dainty and artistic. I'm sure it must have come from you."

"Indeed," exclaimed the mean young man, delighted and highly flattered, "and what makes you think so?"

"Because I sent it to you last year."

Finland, Soviet Approve Border

MOSCOW, Dec. 28 — (AP). —An official announcement last night said an exchange of notes had taken place approving documents and maps defining the 600-mile frontier between Finland and Soviet Russia.

The notes exchanged by Vladimir P. Protemkin, Assistant Commissar of Foreign Affairs, and the Finnish Minister, Baron Yrjo Kpskinen, approved the border demarcation drafted by a Soviet-Finish Commission.

Finland is one of the Baltic States which fears a revival of German strength should Chancellor Hitler determine to follow the expansion dream of a "march to the east" by the northern route toward Soviet Russia. She is one of the neighbors of Lithuania and her Nazified semi-autonomous province of Memel.

Formerly a part of Czarist Russia, Finland proclaimed her independence and suppressed a Communist movement after the Bolshevist revolution.

The exchange of Finnish-Soviet notes coincides with improved relations between Russia and Poland, who also has fear that German expansion may reach in her direction.

England Is Fearful Snow Heralds Floods

LONDON, Dec. 28—(CP-Havas). —Fears that melting snows will cause serious floods in villages in Eastern Kent prevailed to-day as steadily rising temperatures hastened the thaw which set in Monday after the heaviest snowstorm in years.

The sun shone over London today and thermometers registered 44.6 degrees above zero fahrenheit. The snow gave Great Britain the "whitest" Christmas it has had in many a year.

Despite improved conditions communications were seriously hampered at many points, and workers may encounter difficulties when they return to their jobs tomorrow after the long holiday.

For Thursday, December 29.

Rather difficult and adverse situations are indicated by this day's planetary directions. There seems to be an element of disappointment if not disapproval and disturbance in employment or other contacts with superiors and those in power. However, all persons in this status are not hostile or unapproachable, and these may be conferred with in an effort to smooth out difficulties.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of mixed fortunes, with adverse conditions, possible jealousies and peculiar oppositions instigating disturbances or conflicts with superiors or employers. On the other hand, persons in influential stations are ready to come to the rescue and help readjust misunderstandings or difficulties. This may favorably effect the finances.

A child born on this day may have certain idiosyncracies which will have it running at cross-purposes with employers, superiors or those in authority. SEASON'S GREETINGS TO ALL

By MAX TRELL

Knarf, the shadow-boy with the turned-about name, was talking to his sister, Hanid. "This afternoon I was looking over my master's shoulder while he was reading a book. It was about a little girl named Alice. Do you know what she did?"

"What did she do?"

"She went through a mirror."

"My goodness! And what happened? Did she come out through the other side?"

Knarf shook his head. "She stayed right inside it. Oh! it was wonderful. Everything was backwards."

"Backwards?"

"Yes—everything in a mirror is backwards."

Suddenly Hanid said: "Knarf! I have an idea! Why don't we try to go inside a mirror just like little Alice did Let's go inside that one." And she pointed to the mirror hanging over the mantelpiece.

Go Together.

"All right," said Knarf. "I'll go first."

"We'll both go first. Let's hold hands and jump."

Straight for the mirror they went. Then all at once a very strange thing happened. Hanid suddenly disappeared. She went inside the mirror. But Knarf hit something very hard and dropped back to the floor again.

He looked up. "Hanid! Where are you?"

"In the mirror. Don't you see me?"

She's in Mirror.

Sure enough, there was the shadow-girl, inside the mirror. She was standing on a chair, just like the one that stood near the mantelpiece. She was waving to him.

"It was about a little girl."

"Humph! that's funny. Why did you get in? What stopped me?"

"I don't know. I must have slipped through a little crack, I guess."

She was right; that's exactly what had happened. There was a tiny crack at the bottom of the mirror. She had slipped right through it. Knarf, on the other hand, had hit the mirror and fallen back again.

Finally he said: "Well, I don't think much of going through mirrors anyhow. I'm going to stay right here. There's much more room and I like it better."

But I think he envied Hanid just the same. Don't you think so?

Fallis Line Party Is Jolly Affair

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 28—Thursday afternoon marked an unusually happy occasion for the pupils of Fallis Line school, parents, trustees, and friends joining with the teacher, Miss Ruth Bayll, and the younger folk, for the annual Christmas tree and entertainment, Mr. J. H. McKnight acting as chairman.

After the words of welcome from the chair, the school followed with a welcome song, and a recitation, under a similar title was given by Norma Ball. The Highland Fling, by Lorraine Henderson and Vera Falls, wearing Scotch costume, was warmly received and cleverly done, as was also the dialogue, "Christmas Gifts," by Norma Ball, Herbert Fallis, Russell Sutton, Lindsay Belch and Margaret Aiken.

Isabella Aiken and Vera Fallis sang, "Slumber Song," and the dialogue, "Jolly Minstrels," by the whole school, was much enjoyed. "A Joke on Pa," was recited by Russell Sutton, and "What I'd Rather Be," by Herbert Fallis, Margaret Aiken singing, "Dad's Present." The whole school joined in the chorus, "That's What I Want for Christmas," and a dialogue, "Christmas Stockings," was given by Willoughby Belch and Vera Fallis, the latter also singing a group of songs in keeping with the Christmas season, and Margaret Aiken being again heard in a recitation.

"Santa was Good to Me," was a rollicking song by all the pupils, and the happy air, "We've got a Pocketful of Dreams," was cleverly presented by Norma Ball and Russell Sutton, the little folk wearing grown-ups' clothings, and aping a gentleman and lady.

Lindsay Belch recited "A Present for Aunt Jane," and a twenty-five minute play, "Polishing Henry," was a highlight of the program, the caste including: Lois (Isabelle Aiken); Henry (Willoughby Belch), a young couple recently married, while their callers were, Uncle Hiram (Lorraine Henderson), a very queer person, and Aunt Estile (Vera Fallis), quite sophisticated woman of the world.

The juniors gave the choruses, "Santa is Coming," and "Hark Old Santa Claus," the whole school following with "Away in Judea," a two part song, "O Come All Ye Faithful," and "Good Bye," after which excitement rose to tip-toe proportions as sleigh-bells outside, and the red-clad figure of Santa Claus appeared "in person" (Clarence Ball), and with his usual jovial manner and repartee, proceeded to distribute gifts from the tree, and see that candy was passed to all present.

CHAPTER 36

THE PROFESSOR least likely to attract attention at the opening of college this fall unquestionably would have been Thornton Holgat. Then, too, he was the man least likely to have stirred Sara Sue's heart.

To begin with, it was highly unlikely that she should ever have met him at all, socially. He had been a retiring, scholarly; even shy sort, who imagined himself to be middle aged, and who was eternally concerned with mathematical phenomena. Sara Sue was a widow still bubbling with youth, a girl of infinite charm and animation. Fate must have chuckled a bit at bringing two such unrelated personalities together.

To be sure, the attachment was only half-way. Which only made it the more tragic. Sara Sue, herself, could not have told you why she loved Thornton. Her husband of five years ago had been a noisy, blustery athlete, much like her great admirer, Bob Towne, and everybody about the campus was predicting that by November Bob would have no trouble capturing the lovely Sara Sue.

It was known, by now, that Dr. Thornton Holgate saw Sara Sue frequently, but no inkling of any romance there had been given. Actually, of course, it was not a romance; it was just a one-sided, now heart-breaking business of a girl loving a man, a repetition for the nth time of life's most poignant tragedy—unrequited love.

No, it was was worse than unrequited love.

It was worse because Sara Sue, loving a man, was pledged to help him win another girl!

Given fair and open field, Sara Sue or any other spunky American girl would have challenged her rival to fight. She could have set out to take Thornton away from Peaches Pomeroy, and the world would have applauded the winner. But—Sara Sue's hands were tied. Tied because she loved Thornton so deeply that she would do anything to insure his happiness. And his happiness, so he had declared, lay in winning Miss Pomeroy. Since he had seen Peaches a few times of late, he was declaring his yearning for her more often than ever, more vehemently than at first, and all Sara Sue could do was to listen and renew her professional pledge to help him.

Sara Sue could not know, of course, that a man sometimes will speak vehemently in an effort to convince not only others, but himself as well. Or at least she could not know to apply this to Thornton. She could not know that Thornton was unconsciously trying to will the happiness that he had first envisioned, but which seemed to be slipping away. Nor know that Thornton himself had really undergone a change of heart, even though unadmitted.

The truth is that Thornton had cooled toward Peaches, but—can a man drag his pride in the dust? Having sworn his complete loyalty and love for Peaches, and having hired Mrs. Davis' help in winning her, could he confess now that he didn't want the girl after all?

No. In fact, he wouldn't even confess that to himself.

He told himself (as Sara Sue had earlier intimated) that he had been something of a sissy, and if Miss Pomeroy were modern and lively and gay, then he should try to match her pace. Therein, no doubt, lay the solution of his problem, the realization of his dreams.

"Perseverance is a good trait, in love as well as in business, Thornton," Sara Sue counseled. "Don't stop trying to win Peaches. If she refused you a date for the freshman dance, ask her again for the big autumn prom, the International. It's not too early to ask her now."

The autumn prom, at which the social elite of south Texas would be on parade, was scheduled for the end of the football season. Specifically, for the night after the big international game.

Rice Institute, having won a championship in 1937, and being an independent university in the largest border state, had been chosen by ballot of American football coaches to represent the United States in the first of a new series of games between this nation and the Republic of Mexico. The latter would be represented by its own university team from Mexico City, itself an excellent football organization.

And following that would be the International ball, honoring the visiting players. It would be the one outstanding social event of the college year.

"Everybody will be there, Thornton," Sara Sue was explaining. "Everybody of social importance, that is. It would be a real pleasure for you to take Peaches. And—I think she may not be dated yet, and will probably go with you."

"Excellent, if she would," he agreed. "I shall ask her. Would you advise me just to telephone, or—perhaps send my request? Perhaps with some flowers?"

Sara Sue considered that.

"Why, Thornton—I believe you are right! Surely! What a nice way to do it. Write her an informal note, saying—just saying it would surely be a pleasure to escort her to the International ball, or something like that, and put it in a box of roses. Why, I'm proud of you for thinking of it!"

Sara Sue would have been thrilled, she knew, to have received a box of roses with a request for a date tied in. Now she could even enjoy Peaches' thrill a little bit, vicariously.

She gazed up at Thornton, smiling sweetly, unconscious of the mistiness in her eyes. He looked so fine! He was a trifle florid, naturally, and this made him seem boyish when he blushed a bit more under praise. He had weaned himself from the habit of looking away from people when conversing with them, a habit born of shyness He had stopped being owl-eyed and quizzical and frowny when something startled him. He was still quiet of manner, and polite, gentle and genteel. But he certainly was no whit a sissy any more.

He had almost given his life to save two others, in the sea at Galveston. And Sara Sue herself had seen him knock out a burly sailor in one smashing fist blow, without seeming unduly ruffled about it. He seemed to be a gentleman of quiet, reserve power, perhaps a physical and mental power which he himself had not fully appreciated nor appraised. Sara Sue told herself, in this moment of looking at him, that Peaches Pomeroy would be a fool if she did refuse him.

He went personally to Wademan's—Clarence Wademan, florist, had been a popular Rice man a few years before—and picked out the best roses to be had. He wrote his informal note on a card that Clarence supplied, sealed it in an envelope, put it inside the box. Two dozen roses, $5. It was fortunate that Dr. Holgate had a reasonably good income. But then, he had been reared in comparative affluence so that penny-pinching was unknown to him. He knew quality, knew that quality buying was economy buying in the end. He suspected that this sound dictum would apply even to roses. But, having sent the roses out, he worked himself quite unnecessarily into a dither about Peaches' acceptance. Would she, or would she not, turn down his request for a date?

Peaches settled that detail rather promptly.

"Why, Thornton, how thoughtful!" she gushed into her telephone, using by chance almost the same phrase Sara Sue had used. "How can I refuse you, when you send such lovely flowers. Of course I'll go to the dance with you!"

Of course!

Dr. Thornton Holgate, Ph. D., scholarly graduate cum laude from a famous school, prominent now as a faculty man and recognized as a thinker, had a date. Of course! His roses had worked! Or so he thought.

Actually he was too naive, too boyish, to realize that he was still a campus hero who had been in the headlines, and that almost any girl would be honored if he asked her for a date now. Actually, it amounted to a genuine coup for Peaches, whose general stock had been sinking of late.

He talked a bit and said goodby, strangely disturbed.

Now that he actually had a formal date with Geraldine, at the one outstanding social event of the season, what should he do? Strangely, his enthusiasm was no whit near what it should have been. He had sudden visions of a drunken Peaches, acting disgustingly at the freshman dance. And of a Peaches telling off-color jokes en route to Galveston. He gave quiet but apprehensive thought to these things.

But he squared his shoulders then, and stepped outside. He clamped his jaw. Well, by George, he'd go ahead with it. Sara Sue had warned him that a lover must give as well as take, must not expect the girl to make all the adjustments. If, therefore, pretty Peaches was determined to enjoy life in a somewhat wild manner, he would join her at least to a degree.

"Hitler Tips Duce On Colony Grab" As French Deputy Has His Fun

PARIS, Dec. 28 — (AP). — The Rightist deputy Henri De Kerillis set Paris laughing today by publishing in his newspaper L'Epoque an imaginary telephone conversation in which Chancellor Hitler tells Premier Mussolini how to take France's colonies.

The Chancellor begins by telling Il Duce how to receive Prime Minister Chamberlain when he arrives in Rome in January.

Hitler: "Now you begin by making him wait at the end of your famous office. You let him walk the 100 yards down to your desk on a floor covered with wax. To stage it properly he must fall flat and lose his umbrella once or twice before he reaches you."

Mussolini: "Then I demand Tunisia, Corsica and Savoy?"

Hitler: "Don't be silly. Talk about your passionate love for peace and glorify the spirit of Munich—all in a sweet, soft voice. Then suddenly you swell up, shake your fist, stick out that jaw and talk about Italy's power."

Mussolini interrupts several times to suggest that he ask for Tunisia, Corsica and Savoy, but Hitler advises him to ask at that interview only for "Djibouti and a few advantages in the Suez Canal."

And Then—

Hitler: "Then you end the interview and say to him softly: 'You are old and I am young. I will meet you part way for the next talk. It will be at Milan.' He accepts with a tear in his eye and you escort him to the door taking care he does not fall."

Mussolini again asks if he can demand Tunisia, Corsica and Savoy at Milan, but Hitler says he is to ask only for an "outlet on Lake Chad."

Hitler: "When you get that it is my turn—I will take Ukrania."

Mussolini: "But Adolf, I don't understand. Can't I take Tunisia after you get Ukrania?"

Hitler: "You said it, Benito."

Looking Back On This Date

Mr. R. B. Bennett, speaking at Montreal on Dec. 16, told present-day folk not to be pessimistic about the unity of Canada. He reminded them that just 50 years ago, in 1888, the Liberal provincial premiers of the day had conferred at Quebec and made demands upon the Dominion which some people of that time thought meant the disruption of Canada.

Mr. Bennett might have gone 20 years father back than that. Just one year after Confederation Sir John Macdonald wrote a letter, on Dec. 28, 1868, to Major-General Sir Hastings Doyle, then lieutenant-governor of Nova Scotia, which was by no means cheerful. The anti-confederates were very busy at Halifax trying to get the union agreement nullified. They even appealed to Downing St., but in vain; and John A. was quite worried over the situation.

He advised the governor not to assent to any provincial elections for a while. "The people must, in Disraeli's phrase, be educated to it (Confederation) before an appeal can be made," he wrote, adding that a stiff dispatch had just arrived from London for Lord Monck to forward to Halifax which "is a direct appeal to the loyalty of Nova Scotia, and if properly handled will be of great service.

"He told Doyle that he was pinning his hopes upon a renewal of the reciprocity treaty "which would mollify your people." Unfortunately that did not happen.

Sir John also threatened the liberty of the press: "The language of the Morning Chronicle is seditious, if not treasonable. It is well that it is so, as it gives you the opportunity at any time when matters are ripe of calling upon Annand (the provincial premier) to disavow the sentiments expressed in it or take the consequences."

That storm cloud passed off; so have others since; and if we but true to Canada, as Mr. Bennett advised, this present cloud will also fade out. When prosperity comes back, the spirit of disunity must disappear in the future as it has in the past.

Hopkins Plans Drive To Give Millions Jobs

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28—(AP).—Commerce secretary Harry Hopkins, it was learned today, is considering a country-wide drive to put millions of unemployed men and women back to work in private industry in the United States.

The man who formerly directed the United States government's vast work relief program has discussed the possibilities of such a campaign with business leaders here and in New York.

Reaching into every city and town, the drive would be aimed at getting employers to cooperate in giving productive private work to as many as possible of the country's more than 10,000,000 unemployed.

Some well-informed persons said business leaders who had studied the plan professed to see in it considerable merit as a means of directly attacking the unemployment problem.

Methods for conducting the campaign are said to have been developed into a fairly definite program. So that it could start within a few weeks and be well underway by Spring. It thus could take advantage of whatever impetus and commerce and industry receive from the usual spring improvement in business conditions.

Millbrook Presbyterian Church Rings To Jolly Yuletide Program

MILLBROOK, Dec. 28.—Boys and girls, and grown-ups gathered in sufficient numbers to completely fill the basement of Grace Presbyterian church on Friday evening, for the annual entertainment of the Sunday school, with the Christmas tree as a feature of peculiar interest, particularly to the younger element.

Carols, sung by the whole school, with Richard William leading, and Miss Muriel Ball at the piano, fittingly opened an enjoyable program, the chair being taken by Harold Hubbeard, superintendent of the school, and the platform attractive with lighted fireplace, candles burning on the mantel piece, easy chairs, couch, etc., suggesting a comfortable living-room on Christmas eve.

Recitations by Mary Guthrie, "Helping Old Santa Claus," and Lindsay Belch, "A Present for Aunt Jane," led up to a song, "I Bought My Dad a Present," by little Norma Ball, a toy doggie being displayed at the end as the gift in question. Betty Forsyth recited, "A Jolly Old Fellow," and the primary class sang, "Jolly Old Man From the Northern Sea," those taking part including June Miller, Betty and Shirley Forsyth, Elizabeth Williams, Norma Gray and Betty Wright. At this point a flashlight picture was taken by Hugh Williams and Billy Kerr, and the program proceeded with A. J. Ball reciting, "Sing a Song of Christmas."

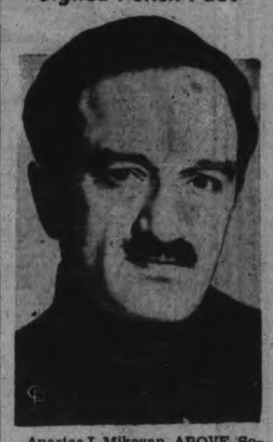
The primary class presented a number that was unique and especially appreciated, the little folk, in pairs, "What Christmas Stands For," the cast being: Norma Gray and May Guthrie; Elizabeth Williams and Betty Wright; June Miller and Wilma Hubbeard; Betty and Shirley Forsyth. This concluded with the song, "Away in a Manger," the baby lying in a manger bringing realism into the soft melody.

Gerald Deyell recited "Everybody Smiles At Me," and Shirley Forsyth, "The Happiest Day of the Year"; Betty Wright and Elizabeth Williams singing, "Santa Will Come With a Bag of Toys." Thelda and Earl Hubbeard gave a dialogue. "A Narrow Escape," depicting what comes to little girls who try to stay awake to see Santa at his work, and following this Miss Margaret Armstrong's class presented, "The First Noel," ending with the carol, "Silent Night." June Little's recitation was "The Birds' Christmas Tree," and the concluding number, a play, Shivery Shakes," by the boys of Douglas Carveth's class, had as caste, Captain Dallas (Gerald Larmer); Kirby, the butler, (Richard Williams); Colonel Hughes (Tom Belch); Inspector Pallet, of Scotland Yard, (Allen Coyte); Superintendent Pollock (Billy Peers); and Dawson, (Norman Hubbeard).

Preceding the play Miss Armstrong's class of girls sang "A Babe of Bethlehem Town," and Miss Muriel Ball's class presented a selection with those taking part including Tom Peers, Bobby Gray, Willoughby Belch, Lloyd Guthrie, Donald Guthrie and Albert McIvor.

Santa Claus (Joseph Burns), arrived and was warmly welcomed, before proceedin gto denude the tree of its load of gifts, every member of the school being remembered.

Signed Polish Pact



Anastas I. Mikoyan, ABOVE, Soviet foreign trade commissar, negotiated and signed the trade treaty between Russia and Poland which has forged a new link of diplomatic friendship. Observers say the treaty is a formidable barrier to Hitler's drive to the East, into the Ukraine.

May Shift Capital

HENDAYE, France, Dec. 28—(AP) —The Spanish government was reported in advices reaching the border yesterday to be considering transfer of its capital from Barcelona to the south to escape the threat of the insurgent general offensive into Catalonia.

These reports, coming from the government zone but not confirmed officially, mentioned Cartagena, Valencia and Jalbacette, in the southern section of government Spain, as possible sites for the new seat of government, which already has been transferred twice during the civil war.

VOL. LXXX, No. 302 — PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1938 — PRICE THREE CENTS

MAIN STREET TOPICS

Jabs and Jottings as Picked Up By Examiner Reporters.

RECORD SET.

Campbellford Fire Department answered six fire alarms on Tuesday a record in the history of the town. Four chimney fires were taken care of. An auto caught fire but was extinguished and the members battled for some time when fire broke out in a service station.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Constable Leo Murphy found a local Chinese wandering around Water street Tuesday night in the thick of the blizzard, trying to locate a doctor to find out what was the matter with his eyes. He said they had been giving him trouble for some time and had become much worse. The constable took the unfortunate Chinese into the postoffice for shelter and telephoned for medical assistance. It was found that the condition of the man's eyes was not serious.

ECONOMY.

To-day a local man will enter the stores and purchase a supply of Christmas cards sufficient for his needs when Christmas rolls around in 1939. This is the annual affair with him. He claims that he not only misses the rush but saves quite a bit because the storekeepers are anxious to dispose of as much leftover stock as possible after the Christmas buying has stopped. For the past ten years on the week following Christmas the man has been doing this.

SONJA HENIE.

Winchell claims Sonja Henie, noted Hollywood star and Stewart Reyburn, Toronto skater, who are now paired off in the making of a new picture are in the midst of a romance and mention of Miss Henie's name again led a reporter to determine proper pronunciation of her name. George Dinesen, who was born in Norway and is an authority on the language, claims Sonja Henie's last name should be pronounced with the "e" soft as in the word hen. This is in direct contradiction to the many ways the name has been heard over the air and in every day conversation.

HOUSEWIVES RILED

The stormy weather of the past two days has held up the usual weekly washing in many homes and in others where the women washed and hung the clothes to dry outside there is mutiny. The strong wind last night wrapped the clothes around the clotheslines and ripped many of the finer garments to shreds. The others who have had the boiler of water simmering on the stove since early Tuesday morning are glad now because they waited until today to wash. The husbands have no objection to a boiler of water simmering on the kitchen stove because they claim it is a fine humidifier.

TORONTO MAN FINED

Norman Steiner, Toronto, was fined $1.85 and 75 cents costs in traffic court this morning on a charge of double parking on Charlotte street. "This double-parking," commented Magistrate Langley, "is serious because of the way in which the streets are blocked."

MISSED FIRST CELEBRATION.

Alderman Walter Stocker, among the oldest living past masters of Peterborough Lodge, missed on Tuesday night the first celebration of the Festival of St. John the Evangelist in 45 years. Alderman Stocker was not able to leave his home last evening.

AGAIN REMANDED

No instructions have yet been received from the Attorney-General in regard to the course to be followed in dealing with Ernest Travies, the youth who pleaded guilty to theft of a used car some weeks ago and he was again remanded for a week this morning.

OLDER BOYS' PARLIAMENT.

Paul Meeks, 351 McGill street has been appointed Deputy to the Minister of Welfare at the Eighteenth Session of the Ontario Older Boys' Parliament being held in Emmanuel College, University of Toronto. Paul is the member for Peterborough city. He belongs to the "Alfalfa Boys" of St. James Sunday School. The Premier for this year is Joe Willard from St. Thomas. There are over 90 boys from all over the province attending.

STOLE SAFE AND $1,700

The disappearance of a 500-pound safe and its $1,700 in cash from Buehler Bros. meat market, 120 Dundas street, London, on Monday night, remains a mystery unsolved by police, who have been investigating since the raid on the downtown store was discovered early yesterday afternoon. Police know that the safe was removed from the closely locked building through the rear door that was again locked when the robbery was discovered, but otherwise have no clues.

A CLEVER CORRESPONDENT.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Rose, Lake street, have a friend in Toronto who wished to send Christmas greetings but did not know the house number in Peterborough. He did not take a chance of the letter reaching the proper address but drew a diagram on the face of the envelope under the name, which showed Aylmer street, Lake street, the C.N.R. railway and the Nashua Paper Company. Then on the south side of Lake street, east of Aylmer he sketched in two houses, and placed an arrow pointing to the second one with the word "here" in capital letters. He even drew two intersecting lines in another corner of the envelope to indicate the directions, and the letter was delivered without hesitation by the letter carrier.

New Officers Installed Masonic Lodges

Peterborough Masons on Tuesday night celebrated the Festival of St. John the Evangelist with a banquet in the Empress hotel, when close to 150 members of the craft heard Captain the Rev. Sidney Lambert, O.B.E., chaplain of Christie street hospital, deliver an address which was a challenge to every member to live up to the obligations which he took when becoming a member.

Prior to the banquet the new officers of both Corinthian and Peterborough lodges were installed in a most able manner by Wor. Bro. Stanley Couper, and a past master's jewel was presented to W.Bro. Fred Reed of Peterborough lodge.

The two new masters are W.Bros. Alex Donnelly for Corinthian and Donald Crawford for Peterborough.

During the banquet W.Bro. M. H. Park rendered three numbers, "Draw the Sword, Scotland," "Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride," and "Come, Come My Jolly Lads." He was accompanied by Bro. F. G. Mann. W.Bro. E. M. Turner presided.

60 Years a Master.

W.Bro. Downey, in proposing the toast to the absent brathren, paid tribute to W.Bro. E. H.D. Hall, who was that night marking his sixtieth anniversary of his becoming a master of a lodge. Mr. Hall became a past master of Corinthian lodge in 1879 and although not able to be present he was referred to as a man of fine character, a great Christian, a tower of strength in the city and in masonry.

The officers of the two lodges are:

Corinthian.—W.Bro. Alex Donnelly, W.M.; W.Bro. H. T. Cranford I.P.M.; Bro. C. H. Crowe, S.W.; Bro. R. C. Honey, J.W; Bro. F. E. Kerr, chaplain; W.Bro. A. J. Throop, treasurer; W.Bro. R. F. Downey, secretary; Bro. E. R. Shirley, S.D.; Bro. Donald Loucks, J.D.; Bro. W. D. Taylor, I.G.; Bro. Stanley Payne, S.S.; Bro. A. L. Elliott, J.S.; Rt. Wor. Bro. J. F. Allin, D. of C.; Bro. Frank Stevens, organist; W.Bro. Alex Sollitt, tyler.

Peterborough. — W.Bro. Donald Crawford, W.M.; W.Bro. E. M. Turner, I.P.M.; Bro. Charles Elliott, S.W.; Bro. W. G. Cornell, J.W.; W. Bro. W. Anderson, chaplain; Rt. W. Bro. Alex Gibson, treasurer; W.Bro. James Vallery, secretary; Bro. D. T. Grant, S.D.; Bro. C. V. Elliott, J.D.; Bro. Ernest E. Lee, I.G.; Bro. I. T. Lillico, S.S.; Bro. Fred Shaw, J.S.; V.W.Bro. J. C. M. Wilson, D. of C.; Bro. Percy Luther, tyler.

Denounced Dictators.

Rt.W.Bro. Lambert, who was introduced by Bro. Mann, bitterly denounced the tactics of the dictators and urged Canadians to keep looking up. He declared that as Canadians and members of the British Commonwealth of Nations the insults which the dictators are hurling at them do not have to be taken. From 1914 to 1918 Canadians showed to the world that they could deliver the goods, likewise they can do so again if the need arises.

The speaker reviewed briefly his early boyhood and how he had laid plans for his future life just like hundreds of thousands of other young men did, only to have their hopes crashed when the Great War broke out. "My task now is to cultivate happiness and joy in those who were maimed and broken in the Great War," he said.

"A great challenge comes into the life of everyone at some time or other, and when it does it should find everyone able to measure up."

"What is the actual obligation which rests upon every Mason?" He maintained the best working tool of every mason was the Holy Bible, and the countries who to-day were continuing to disregard the Bible would certainly decline and go down and the counties that are keeping it are the ones that will move forward.

He paid tribute to the doctors of Christie Street, saying that they are the best available and said, "I believe the returned men in Canada are much better looked after and cared for than those of any other nation."

"The marvellous part of the returned man in Christie Street is his optimism, and no matter how much they are suffering they continue to look up and overcome many of their disabilities."

In closing, he declared that the dictators may goose-step into Prague and into Ethiopia but one place where they cannot march is into London, for the British people prize their liberty too highly, they are proud of the things they have and represent, and they know that peace was dearly bought and must be dearly preserved. The next battlefront would not be on the Fields of Flanders, but right in the homes of every Canadian, for gas was a terrible thing and he believed it would be a good thing for the Canadian people if gas masks were distributed just so as they would think what their liberty meant to them.

The speaker was thanked by W. Bro. John A. Dewart.

The Toast List.

Prior to the main address a lengthy toast list was dealt with. The toast to the visiting brethren was proposed by Rt.Wor.B. W. R. Morris, and replied to by Bro. H. L. Garner; while the toast to the sister lodges was proposed by Rt.W.Bro. W. D. Campbell, and replied to by W.Bro. L. H. Ingram of Royal Arthur Lodge. The toast to the Absent Brethren was proposed by W.Bro. R. F. Downey.

Rekindling Rivalry In Smith Township

If Allan B. Mann (LEFT) becomes Warden of Peterborough County in 1939, and he's in line for a chance at it, no one will be able to say that he reached it along an easy path. His rival of recent years, George Mullen, has accepted a nomination., and the Smith ratepayers will begin the New Year next Monday by deciding which one of these two experienced administrators they want to direct the township council.

51 Below Zero In Edmonton

WINNIPEG, Dec. 28. — (CP).— Western Canada's unwelcome Christmas present—a cold wave—held forth across the prairies today with no sign of relief. The forecast was for "decidedly cold" weather.

Centre of the Christmas storm which whipped in from the Arctic, Northern Alberta continued in the icy belt with record sub-zero temperatures posted. Icy winds swept across Northern Saskatchewan and into Manitoba during the night.

Edmonton, Alberta's capital, held the record low mark, an unofficial reading of 51 below zero last night, and Battleford, in Northern Saskatchewan, recorded 34 below. After an early morning low of 24 below zero Tuesday, the mercury in Winnipeg climbed 10 degrees. It then dropped and was 15 below early to-day.

Stormy weather struck transportation facilities in both Alberta and Saskatchewan. Central Saskatchewan roads were snow-blocked with drifts six to seven feet high. Motorists were forced to seek shelter in farm homes and rural school houses. No storm casualties were reported.

A new weather threat menaced lower British Columbia mainland last night. As a freezing rain swept through the Fraser Valley, damaging telegraph lines and disrupting stage services.

Weather Casts Off All The Amenities Of Christmas Season

TUESDAY'S WEATHER cast off the amenities of the Christmas season and went whooping through the streets and across the farm lands in the country with a boisterousness that had more than a nip to it. The wind was turned loose without any reins on it, straining trees until they creaked and groaned, wrenched at verandahs and eaves, and whistled around the corners of houses with an abandon that reached its full play by night. Winter was settling down to business after weeks of fooling on the job, and in the street lights the swirling snow presented all the realism of a January night. Most people stayed at home, many of them settling down to a rubber of bridge or a session of euchre, while the west wind flung its gusts of snow against the window panes. Meanwhile the stars came out, and walking a mile or so against that rampaging west wind was a vigorous and not unpleasant ending of the day.

Madill Is Facing Additional Charge

Thomas Madill, 19, who was under remand on a charge of attempting to break and enter the East City store of Fitzpatrick and Geraghty faced a new charge in police court this morning when he was charged with breaking and entering the shoe store of P. J. Hickey, 169 Hunter with intent to commit theft.

Madill, who was defended by W. J. Arthur Fair, pleaded not guilty on this count and at the request of Acting Crown Attorney F. D. Kerr, K.C., was remanded until Tuesday next, although Mr. Fair entered an objection to the delay.

"This is another case and I think the Crown is entitled to a remand," replied Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C.

Mr. Fair said that on the other charge there had been remands and he felt that the accused was entitled to trial.

Madill and Joseph Fontaine also charged with attempting to break and enter the F. & G. store were remanded until next Tuesday on that charge, the Magistrate intimating that the Crown should be ready to proceed with the case by that time.

MOTHERWELL WINS 3-1

GLASGOW, Dec. 28—(CP Cable)—In first division, Scottish football league matches played today Motherwell defeated Kilmarnock 3-1 on the latter's ground and Albion Rovers and Ayr United played a 3-3 draw. The games were originally scheduled for Dec. 24, fog and snow forcing postponements.

Firemen Answered 14 Chimney Fires

High winds played havoc with chimneys in this city Tuesday and the fire truck hardly ceased running all day and late into the night. Fourteen chimney fires, the greatest number in any single day for a number of years at least, were reported and Fire Chief George Gimblett attributed their cause to the high wind that was blowing.

Firemen driving and riding on the fire truck had strained faces as they raced down icy streets, just hoping that no person would get in their way on the slippery pavement. The fires started before ten in the morning, and seven were reported by noon. In the early afternoon they ceased, starting up at five in the afternoon. Between five and six o'clock four were reported. Three more such calls were answered before midnight. Only one, at the residence of William Thompson, 24 Brown street, showed signs of spreading into a general fire. It was speedily extinguished, the damage slight.

Roads Are Open Throughout The District But Traffic Reported Heavy On Many

City pedestrians bore the brunt of discomfort as a near blizzard which whistled across the district last night but little actual damage was reported and all of the main roads throughout the county are reported to be open to-day.

James Dutton reported this morning that all Stock's bread trucks went over their rural routes on schedule yesterday and up to noon to-day no driver had reported in to seek aid. North and south roads are reported to be heavy but passable wherever the traffic has been maintained.

The strong wind flattened a tool house owned by the county of Peterborough and located on the Keene road near the Hiawatha turn and upset a stove which was inside the small building. A large window above Graham's bakeshop on George street was knocked out by the force of the wind, and on Carlisle avenue in Ashburnham several octagonal shaped patent shingles were noticed which had been torn from a roof by the wind.

M. E. Shaver, manager of the Bell Telephone Company here, said no service difficulties had been reported during the storm, but on the Apsley telephone exchange, reporters attempting to get the Burleigh-Anstruther nomination results were balked because service was disrupted, north of Mount Julian.

Two large trees were blown down across No. 28 highway south of Bewdley, but were cleared again in a short time, and no damage was done.

Whittington's service station on No. 28 highway reports that motorists crossed to the west on highway 7 yesterday, and reported the road to be icy but passable.

Many roads covered daily by Examiner trucks and rural mail carriers are only in fair shape and snow is so heavy that damage to the cars is a likely possibility.

Robert Peters Is Convicted On Unusual Count

Robert Peters, 69, of Clanricarde, was convicted by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in an interesting case with unusual angles in police court this morning on a charge of having illegally had in his possession during the closed season portions of two deer.

Peters was fined $20 and 75 cents costs and given ten days in which to obtain his fine.

The charge was laid by Fish and Game overseer I. J. Lyons who was the only witness against Peters.

Overseer Lyons testified he had visited ePters' place in Anstruther on December 9 and in a shed had found two quarters of venison and a portion of another. Peters had told him that he had been given part of of the venison by Robert Scott of Chandos but refused to state where the other portion had come from. Lyons said that Peters failed to produce any certificate or paper to show that the venison was a legal gift.

Venison A Gift

Robert Scott, Chandos, called for the defence, swore that during the hunting season he had given Peters two quarters of venison and Vernal Windsor, Anstruther, testified that on November 22 he had presented the accused with a hind quarter of venison.

Peters himself swore that he had received two quarters from Robert Scott and another from Vernal Windsor.

"Why did you not produce the necessary certificates when I asked for them," asked Overseer Lyons.

The accused said that he had been unable to find them at that time. He was about to step down from the witness box when Magistrate Langley asked him if he had found the papers since and when the answer was in the affirmative asked Peters to produce them.

They were entered as exhibits and Magistrate Langley recalled Scott and Windsor to the box and both swore that the papers which gave their names and the number of their hunting licenses had been given by them to Peters when they gave him the venison.

Should Be Attached

Overseer Lyons argued that the certificates should have been attached to the venison to comply with the regulations and to make the gift legal and Magistrate Langley agreed with that on interpretation.

He questioned both Scott and Windsor again and both stated that they had not attached the certificates to the venison when they gave the latter to Peters but had merely handed them over.

"That settles the case," remarked Magistrate Langley who pointed out that while the regulations said the address of the donors should be contained on the certificate, it had been omitted in this case.

"It is a technical conviction," said the Magistrate, finding the accused guilty. "At the same time I am not entirely satisfied with the case. I am not convinced that the whole transaction was as straightforward as it might seem."

Pair Plead Guilty To Vagrancy Count

Robert Croan, who gave his address as Port Hope, and Georgina Brock, who claims Toronto as her home, were charged with vagrancy in police court this morning and both pleaded guilty, the girl stating that she would like to get back to Toronto as soon as possible.

The pair were to have been arraigned on a charge of false registration but Magistrate Langley pointed out that the statute in regard to that offence had been ruled ulra vires by the Supreme Court a few week ago.

"Better enter them up and then withdraw them," he suggested. "I'll tear them up," remarked Chief Constable Newhall and proceeded to do so after which the pair were arraigned on the vagrancy charge, pleaded guilty and were remanded until Friday for sentence.

The two were arrested by Provincial Officer John Hatch of Marmora Tuesday, following the recovery by Provincial Traffic Officer Gordon E. Broughton of a stolen Toronto car, four miles east of here the previous day.

OBITUARY

MRS. WILLIAM HAMILTON

The death of Mrs. William Hamilton occurred at her home on the River Road, on Lot 13, Concession 14, Otonabee township, early this morning.

A resident of this district for the past 34 years, she was born in the County Monaghan, Ireland, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pollock. She had been ill for only about a week.

She is survived by her husband, William Hamilton; one son, Robert Hamilton of Peterborough; and two daughters, Mrs. Bert Howden of this city and Miss Elizabeth Hamilton, at home; also two brothers, James Pollock of New York state, and John Pollock of Surrey, England.

The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her late residence, Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr of St. Paul's Presbyterian church officiating. Interment will be at Little Lake cemetery.

By Acclamation

W. J. CHARLTON

Re-elected to the Hydro-Electric Commission of Lakefield without opposition, Mr. Charlton is beginning his twentieth year as a Commissioner. He was the only nominee for Lakefield's public offices who received an acclamation.

Japanese Toys Not Wanted

Expanding opposition to toys made in Japan and Germany is likely to create a problem for Santa Claus when he is laying in his stock for next Christmas according to the opinion of one business man.

"Some people wouldn't have accepted German and Japanese goods if they were for nothing," he said, "and I'm not saying that I blame them one bit. If they saw the names of those two countries on any of the goods they dropped them and looked around for Canadian and English products. There is also some opposition to anything made in Italy. On the other hand our own toymakers are improving their good, especially in such things as baby carriages and so on, and if this sentiment continues, which it is likely to do, it seems that there is going to be a bigger opportunity for our own manufacturers of toys than ever before."

Cheapness of Japanese and German toys did not recommend them to many buyers, who didn't want them at any price, it was said. This attitude has not developed from any organized boycotting, but it is simply the spirit of the reaction of people who feel deeply the suffering the dictators have caused to millions of innocent human beings.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

Gordon Scriver Is Opposing Charles Tanner

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 28.—Re-elected to the Hydro-Electric Commission for two years, William J. Charlton begins in January his twentieth year of service to the village as a member of the Commission. He was the only one of Monday's nominees for public office who was accorded an acclamation.

Lakefield extended its time for considering what it was going to do about the civic household for 1939, and came up with contests for the reeveship, council and public school board.

Councillor Gordon Scriver qualified to enter the lists against Reeve C. S. Tanner, and of the twelve men nominated for the four seats in the council six signed their papers during the period that expired at noon today. They are W. J. Hendren, D. B. Millar and C. R. Armstrong of this year's council and G. A. Charlton, George Graham and Earl Edwards.

Six of the seven men proposed for the Public School Board have entered the field as follows: E. J. Millage, Chas. Lake and E. H. Northey, trustees this year, and S. E. White, R. J. Knox and M. O. Kingdon.

W. J. Charlton was elected to the Hydro Commission for another two year term.

Contest In Otonabee

Otonabee township is going to have an election after retaining Reeve Anderson and Deputy-Reeve Harry Read by acclamation. Five candidates qualified for the three remaining seats in the council. They are David McIntyre, Peter Mather and Robin Thorn of this year's council, with Percy Davidson a former deputy-reeve and James C. Petrie.

South Africa Forces A Draw

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 28.—(CP Cable).—South Africa forced a draw with England to-day in the first of the five-game test cricket series being played during the current season. Needing 323 runs for victory in their second innings, the Springbrooks had made 108 for one wicket when play closed in the four-day match.

The home players made no effort to get the necessary runs, defending stubbornly until a draw was inevitable. Almost three hours were left for play after England declared its second innings at 291 for four wickets. The Tourists' first innings netted 422 runs, South Africa replying with 390.

It was the 20th draw since the countries first met in 1888. England is credited with 28 victories and South Africa 12. The last series, fought in England in 1935, ended in victory for the Springboks who won the only contest fought to a conclusion in the five-game series.

Tests His Strength By Breaking Window

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Dec. 28.—"See how strong I am," declared Arthur Smullin as he drew back his fist and drove it through one of the heavy windows in his car. It seems that the door locks on each side of the tudor model had become broken and had automatically locked Smullin out. Keys were useless.

He tried every conceivable manner to gain entry into the vehicle but without success. Choosing the easier and quicker but more costly method he shattered the glass without injury to his gloved hand.

Mrs. S. Elliott, Norwood Pioneer Passes Away In Her 96th Year

One of Peterborough's oldest residents, a woman who held to the last a keen mind and a delightful personality, died early this morning. She was Winnifred Elliott, who lived with her son, W. Coleman Elliott, at 567 Aylmer street, where death occurred. Had she lived until April she would have been 96 years old.

Beloved of all who knew her, Mrs. Elliott was one of those rare people to whom old age brought few infirmities, and left with an appreciation of life—both of its humour and its pathos. She was never a woman to complain, but always accepted things as they were unless she could better them herself, and perhaps the highest tribute that could be paid her lay in the fact that those with whom she made her home found her always a joy. Always were happy she was with them. She became ill about two months ago after a life singularly free from sickness, and only ten days ago took a sudden turn for the worse from which she never recovered.

Mrs. Elliott lived almost all her long life in this district. She was born in Erie, Pennsylvania, and moved to Norwood with her parents when she was only a year old. They were the late Josiah Blewett and Jane Wilson.

Husband Died in 1902.

More than seventy years ago Winnifred Blewett married Samuel Elliott, who died in 1902, and moved with him to a farm in Belmont township, only a few miles from Norwood. Thirty-two years ago she retired to Norwood and lived there until 16 years ago, when she came to Peterborough to make her home with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. Coleman Elliott, where she resided since that time.

One of a large family, Mrs. Elliott was the last remaining member of it. She leaves only the one son. She belonged to the United church, but her great age prevented her attendance at service in this city.

The body will rest at the home of her son at 567 Aylmer street until Friday morning when it will be removed to the Nisbett Funeral Home, 347 Charlotte street, for service in the afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. M. C. Parr of George Street United church, officiating. Interment will be at Norwood cemetery.

E.H.D. Hall, Veteran Mason In Peterborough Marks 60th Anniversary As Master Of Lodge

Probably the oldest Past Master of the Masonic Order in all Canada is E. H. D. Hall, who last night celebrated his 60th anniversary as Past Master of the Corinthian Lodge, No. 101, at the Festival of St. John the Evangelist.

Ten years ago, when he celebrated the 50th anniversary of his being exalted to the office of Worshipful Master of the lodge, after being elected in 1878, the following was said of him: "Only once so far as it is known, has this record been equalled, and on that occasion also the honor fell to a Peterborough man, the late Henry Rush." That was a decade ago, and Mr. Hall, now 87, has passed another celebration that makes him almost without doubt the oldest man in the country to hold such a position.

Mr. Hall has been a Mason for 63 years and in April, 1925, he was presented with a silver serving tray by his lodge on the occasion of his 50th anniversary in Masonry. E. A. Peck, then member of parliament, made the presentation.

A man with a remarkable mind, whose knowledge of Peterborough's history is better than that of most old residents, Mr. Hall can qualify for another honor. He is one of Canada's oldest practising lawyers, still calls regularly at his downtown office.

San Ton Wins Three At Dufferin

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—Some of the best pacers and trotters in the East have been displaying their class at Dufferin this semester, but over an icy track the best "skates" had their inning yesterday. The Little Saratoga track greatly resembled a skating rink, yet most of the horses found the frozen surface more to their liking than the mud which prevailed Monday.

Three unfinished races carried over from Monday comprised the card and the five heats contested provided plenty of action for the few who braved the arctic-like conditions. Fastest time of the afternoon was recorded by Peter Bidwell, which won the third heat of the free-for-all in 2:13¾ and in so doing snapped the attempt of Caroll Direct to win the event in straight heats.

San Ton, owned by J. T. Payette of Penetanguishene, winner of two straight heats Monday, chalked up a straight-heat victory in the pace-and-trot by winning the third heat raced yesterday. The Payette horse made every post a winning one. With San Ton in the barn, Gus Weil captured the concluding heat of the race from Bertha Lee.

Caroll Direct, favored by the wagering gentry as a result of two straight wins on Tuesday, could do no better than finish second in the final two heats yesterday, Peter Bidwell winning the third heat and Troxie R. the final.

Chestnut Bars, straight-heat victor in the classified pace, was not eligible for this event yesterday, and the closing heat was taken by Berry Direct, with Dorothy Direct second.

Curling Notes

After hoping, and wishing, and praying, the long-looked for cold snap blew into town somewhere around 10 a.m. yesterday and from that moment on we have taken advantage of every degree of frost until now we are in a position to say "Curling tonight."

Yes sir, we expect a goodly crowd out tonight to try out their hand at one of the best indoor sports known.

And just as a preliminary we would asks the skips to see to it that their new men are on hand. Show an interest in them at the beginning of the season and they will well repay you during the entire schedule season.

Just so that it will ease the minds of a lot of the boys and also to stop or at least try to stop, some of the arguments, we prints, for some years back, the opening dates of curling.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

Oldtime puck fans here will recall this incident. Just 30 years tonight Edmonton and Wanderers clashed in Montreal in the first game of the Stanley Cup series. Playing manager of Edmonton was Fred Whitcroft, former Peterborough star, while Bill Crowley—also a one-time ace here—was trainer of the club. Whitcroft and Lester Patrick (now boss of N'Yawk Rangers) starred for the Westerners in that series. With the old Wanderers was Walter Smaill, a smart puck-chaser, who later came to Peterborough as sports coach. Though he didn't last long here. A regular bulletin service was supplied local hcokey followers that night at the old Oriental Hotel and, no doubt, many a mug was upended that eve to the memory of Whitcroft and Crowley.

* * * * * *

Yeah, Peterborough has a proud hockey past dating down the decades—and it's a good time to think of that now, with another puck season opening here. Lot of fine pros and amateurs cut their mark into local ice on speeding skates and many a rousing roar has threatened to curl the shingles on the Brock St. rink. We believe that Peterborough also has a good present right now, and that it has a promising future. Nothing needed for that but an artificial ice arena, and it may come ere too long. A real puck centre like this needs one, you know.

Plenty O' Prospects

Junior Colts are practicing nightly at six in the Brock and Coach Bill Jackson is whittling the squad down a bit at a time. He'll carry 15 but is having the deuce of a job figuring whom to drop. Good prospects include Cournyea and a Norwood boy for goaltending, a Lakefield lad proving too old. And here are some beefy defencemen: Stabler, 203 pounds; Howden, 220; Huffman of Havelock, 190; Tucker of Roseneath, 195; Ward, 160; and King, 160. Lots of heft, eh? Stewart of Omemee looks good up front, as do Al King, Parnell, Pammett, Foster, Craig, Wade, Morrow, Prete, Primeau, McDonald and a few others. Wade, incidentally, suffered a gashed mouth in an accident the other day in practice, a five-stitch gash with a couple of teeth jarred loose. A tough break for the boy. Fast forwards and a husky defence seems to be the idea for the Colts this semester.

Coach Pete Vitarelli is bustling around these days lining up his junior Monarchs, who open their O.H.A. schedule this Friday 'gainst Lindsay here. Nightly workouts are the order and Pete expects to trot out a classy squad for home consumption this week-end. Lots of weight on the rear-guard, too, and some tricky young forwards who can scud o'er the lea with anyone. Monarchs are meeting a tough outfit in the 1938-39 Scugog edition, no fooling.

A Brand New Club

Monarchs Hockey Club was organized this year and entered in O.H.A. junior company, running separately from the Peterborough Hockey Club in the O.H.A. Really started last season with the Monarchs' good team in the Junior City Puck Loop. Present officers are: President, Jim Guiry; vice-prexy, Bud Clarke; secretary-treasurer, Gord Beavis; executive, Art Cauley and Ken Graham. With Pete Vitarelli the coach. Pete was prominent last year on the Southenders' squad which won the championship of the Senior City Hockey League—sometimes known as the Blood and Thunder Loop. The Monarchs should be okay as they had lots of smart prospects at the workout last p.m., and will pretty well pick Friday's starting lineup after tonight's drill at 6.30 in the Brock St. bump emporium. The Messrs. Guiry and Vitarelli aren't fearing the Lindsay threat at all, but promise 'em real battle here Friday.

* * * * * *

A suggestion has been made that an exhibition scrap between, say, the local junior Colts and St. Mike's Buzzers of Toronto be staged here in the near future with the dough raised going to the Jewish Refugee Fund—to aid persecuted Jews in Germany. Seems that's what the charity game between the senior "B" Petes and Trappers in Owen Sound was for a week ago. Nothing definite here yet, but the matter is being considered by local Jews, puck officials and rink officers. The cause is worthy and would find much sympathy in Peterborough, we believe. A decent date would have to be worked in between O.H.A. fixtures, of course, and the Gaels would have to be contacted. We may hear more of it shortly.

* * * * * *

Good Guys Gone Wrong

Among local puckists who are on the Ontario Hockey Association's refereeing list this season are Archie Weir, Red Creighton and Wardie Wright. While Lou LeBarr and a couple more are also slated to do some bell-ringing or whistle-tooting during loop matches this frosty season. Weir is well-known as an intermediate and senior hockeyist, a defenceman, while Creighton played mostly with the local intermediates last year—the same Red who shines in goal for the Petes' lacrossers. Wright was a good junior player a couple of seasons ago and has Senior City Loop experience, too. Why these intelligent chaps ask for the harrowing task of hockey refereeing is beyond us — unless it's the dough — but all should know enough about the game to do all right.

* * * * * *

Church Puck Loop accepted 13 entries last p.m. at a meeting in the "Y", there being three seniors, two juniors, four juveniles and four bantams. Two more are sure starters and several more are quite likely to join up next Tuesday. The schedule begins then and closing date for entries last p.m. was extended one week. The church moguls anticipate little trouble lining up 18 squads but stress the fact that there is room for another senior outfit and a couple of juniors. A four-game opening night may be staged Jan. 3rd at All Saints' rink, with the games that p.m. being listed likely in tomorrow's newspaper. Sorry to hear Prexy Joe Dunkerley of this league is in the hospital now.

Mr. Braucher Refuses To Climb On Nova Bandwagon–Not Yet, Anyway

By BILL BRAUCHER
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Some of my confreres have steamed themselves into a well-cooked condition concerning the heavyweight championship possibilities of Lou Nova, who shellacked Tommy Farr into a semi-comatose state the other night in the Garden.

It is being said, with the characteristic conservatism of New York boxing writers, that the business of meeting and beating Joe Louis is just a formality and the supremacy of the white race is re-established.

But my Aunt Emma always told me to be suspicious about canteloupes, sophomore halfbacks and cauliflowers who have had only 27 fights. I'd like to see Mr. Nova beat somebody before I start twanging my bass fiddle in his behalf. Yes, he beat Farr badly, but that's only par for the course. I couldn't give him better than 72 on that round, even though he did have the Welchman in a bad way. Farr happens to be one of those fighters who makes a stirring success of losing fights.

If they throw him in there with Max Baer, as they threaten, and he comes out maimed no worse than he is now, then we can look up Mistah Louis' telephone number again.

Glancing over the paeans of praise penned after he flailed Farr, we note that he is a "damaging hitter with either hand." That might be amended by a clause "when he's not missing." Farr made him miss a couple of hundred swings. Sure, he's young—but just as sure, he misses. Farr was more than holding his own with the young man from Alameda. Lou will be 24 next March.

One of that more rabid resin sniffers of the Fourth Estate pecked out a few thousand words to the general effect that Nova has everything that Gene Tunney had, plus something that Tunney didn't have—viciousness and willingness to mix it at all times. It sounds just a little confusing to this observer. Tunney never got to the top by patting shoulders. Those who remember the slashed face of Dempsey on the morning after in Philadelphia aren't so willing to concede that Gene lacked anything in savagery, though it is true he didn't go out there and throw a lot of wild, aimless swings.

Perhaps what is meant is that Lou has everything Gene had in the way of arms and legs—and what he has got that Tunney lacked is a bashed-in nose. All our mistake.

Not All Black

But let's leave the cold water department for the nonce, and see if it's all really as bad as all that. While we're not ready to consider a championship fight for Lou this afternoon, it is true that he has come along all right so far, except that he played football at Sacramento Junior college, and we've always been just a shade sceptical about gridders in the ring. Three years ago he won the San Francisco Golden Gloves competition. He won the national amateur title in St. Louis, went to Paris and won the international. His present manager, Ray Carlin, bought him from Ham Lorimer for $1,000.

The only fight he has lost was to Maxie Rosenbloom, which shouldn't be marked too black against him, for Rosie has slapped a lot of good ones around.

We would like to see how he fares with Baer, however — or such an up-and-coming young battler as Billy Conn—before composing our hymn.

Thrilling Upset In Hockey Year

(By the Canadian Press.)

The National Hockey League race in 1938 saw the fall of Detroit Red Wings, twice winners of the Stanley Cup, and the rise of the Chicago Black Hawks to the world championship in the most thrilling upset of a thrill-packed campaign.

Hawks won the last qualifying berth for the playoffs and fluttered to the championship by beating Montreal Canadiens, New York Americans, and finally Toronto Maple Leafs, who created somewhat of a surprise themselves by trouncing the powerful Boston Bruins in straight games for the league title.

The Leaf-Hawk series, fought bitterly over four games, provided some of the best drama of the year. Hawks used substitute goalies for two games, precipitating some sideline brawling among the team executives, then Mike Karakas became a hero by playing, and winning, two games despite a broken toe.

New Record.

Bruins and Leafs drew 15,341 to one game at Toronto to set a Canadian record for hockey attendance that was wiped out in less than a month when St. Boniface Seals won the odd game in five from Oshawa Generals in the Memorial Cup final for the junior championship. Nearly 55,000 saw the series, climaxed by a 7-1 victory for the Seals in the fifth game.

At Calgary, Cornwall Flyers failed to retain the Allan Cup and senior hockey chompionship for the East against Trail Smoke Eaters, who won the series in four games.

The best hockey players in the National Hockey League, as selected for The Canadian Press all-star team, were: Goal, Tiny Thompson, Boston; defence, Babe Siebert, Canadiens, and Eddie Shore, Boston; centre, Bill Cowley, Boston; wings, Cecil Dillon, Rangers, Gord Drillon, Toronto, and Paul Thompson, Chicago; coach, Lester Patrick, Rangers. Selectors were unable to separate Drillon and Dillon for the right-wing berth.

Drillon, native of Moncton, N.B., won the scoring championship in his second season among the big leaguers and went on to star in the playoffs. Cully Dahlstrom of Chicago, an American-born centre, was judged the outstanding rookie.

Ski Notes

Local skiers are beginning to dot the snow-covered landscape in this vicinity again and the novices and experts are preparing for the biggest ski-ing season in Peterborough's history. The Ski Club here has 150 paid-up members now and about 90 more expected shortly to hand in their fees, so the organization is stronger than ever before.

Ski-ing conditions at Bethany over the Christmas week-end were ideal, with weather perfect and plenty of snow. Considerable work has been done in that district—where provincial competitions will be held in February—and more and more skiers are taking advantage of the site to enjoy a day's outing. A fair number were out over the week-end. A run to Bethany is expected shortly.

There will be ski-ing this evening at seven o'clock in Victoria Park, with members, prospective ones and beginners invited to attend. The slopes are just right now for this winter sport and a big turnout is likely. Watch this paper for further announcements.

Veteran, Manager and Rookie With Powerful Bruins

Age, youth and authority are blended in this picture of a trio of Boston Bruins taking time out along the boards for a discussion. All three have played an important part in the Bruins' march through National League opposition this year, a march that has them firmly entrenched at the top of the loop. LEFT, Eddie Shore, maybe slowed up a trifle from the days that used to be, but still among the top N.H.L. defencemen. CENTRE, Art Ross, manager of the Hub team, who has molded many mighty forces since he took over in Boston when that city first entered the league. RIGHT, a newcomer to the National League, with a name that's known to fans everywhere, Roy Conacher, younger brother of Lionel and Charlie, who patrols right wing on the line with Mel Hill, another rookie, and Gordon Pettinger.

Takes The Day Off

DETROIT, Dec. 28.—(CP)—Don Flannigan, a city prisoner, granted himself official clemency and walked away from his trusty job at the city hall here Christmas afternoon. After his party, he gave himself up. He reeled into the wrong jail, though, and officials acceded to his request to be locked up only after he argued at length. He is finishing his 30-day term now in the proper jail.

Gottselig Holds Scoring Lead

MONTREAL, Dec. 28 — (CP). — There seems to be no displacing that man Gottselig from the head of the National Hockey League's scorers. Stickhandling Johnny was at the front in the league's first compilation of statistics five weeks ago, and he's still there in today's list, which does not take in last night's games.

Not only does the Chicago Black Hawk forward lead the marksmen in his point total of 20, but he's in a first-place tie for actual goals and assists. He and Toe Blake of Canadiens have 9 goals apiece and his 11 assists give him a draw with Art Chapman of New York Americans in the helping-out department.

Another Amerk, Sweeney Schriner, is runner-up to Gottselig for total points, 4 behind with 6 goals and 10 assists. Tommy Anderson, also an American, is tied with Blake at 15 points, 1 behind Schriner.

Two more of Red Dutton's star-spangled crew make up the first seven, giving them four out of that group of leaders. Old Nels Stewart has 8 goals and 6 assists, and Eddie Wiseman also makes up a 14 point total with 5 and 9. Tied with them is Clint Smith of New York Rangers, with 5 and 9 too.

Red Horner of Toronto Maple Leafs stays at the head of the penalty-earners. Big Red has rolled up a total of 32 minutes on the sinners' bench, which is 4 more than Rangers' Art Coulter has managed.

13 Teams Now Joined Up As 18 Likely

The Church Hockey League 1939 schedule will open next Tuesday evening, Jan. 3rd, with from two to four games at All Saints' rink. This was decided at a meeting of the league last evening in the Y.M.C.A. at which there was a good representation.

The league will have its usual extension of one week for entries, the executive agreeing to postpone closing date for entries at the request of several churches for more time. Christmas falling last Sunday proved a severe handicap in organization of teams in various churches—and it was felt that another week would see possibly half a dozen more squads lined up and seeking entry. The loop may consist of some 18 teams this year. Full schedules will be drawn up next Tuesday.

Now 13 Entries

There were 13 entrants at last night's puck session, with others considered good prospects for next week. George St., Murray St. and All Saints are back in the senior section; while St. Paul's and All Saints will join the junior division. St. John's, Mark St., All Saints and George St. have entered the juvenile series; with St. Paul's, All Saints, George St. and St. John's the bantam teams.

Trinity and Knox are considered sure entries in either the bantam or juvenile series, in addition to those already named. St. Andrew's decided last night against entering the senior classification, while Park St. seniors were not heard from. A Mark St. delegate gave some hope of an entry in the senior class from that church. The Murray St. juveniles are a tentative entry of the first meeting, but were not heard from last night.

Dope Thursday

A schedule of next Tuesday's opening slate of loop contests will be published by the secretary tomorrow. An effort is being made today to get entries from those churches which have the material for additional or first entries. It is quite possible the league will open with its usual ceremonies, in a four-game splurge at the west end rink.

President Joe Dunkerley was an absentee at last evening's gathering of officers and delegates, having been taken to the hospital yesterday with some rheumatic complaint. Other executive members on hand wre Gord Clegg, Lloyd Parnail, George Beauclerc and Don Charlton.

The meeting was conducted on an optimistic note, this large minor circuit apparently being in for another good season of hockey activity with plenty of teams likely to see action once more. Club organisation is the order now as the various coaches prepare their squads for action.

DUMART LEADS BRUINS TO 8 TO 2 WIN OVER TORONTO LEAFS

Pace-Setting Bruins Peppered Goalie Broda From All Angles; Canadiens Lose By 4-1 To Hawks

By Jack Calder
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Teams of the National Hockey League, with Boston Bruins setting a searing pace, are stringing out as the end of the year and of the schedule's second month approaches. Class is telling and soon the main battle may be for the sixth and last playoff spot.

When the Bruins laced Toronto Maple Leafs 8-2 at Boston and Chicago Black Hawks took a 4-1 jump on the last-place Canadiens at Montreal last night, the leaders went 18 points ahead of the trailing club. Having gained only nine points in 19 games, Canadiens appear to have little chance of getting near the marauding Bruins before the finish. Boston has lost only three of 17 starts.

Heartened by a 2-0 upset victory over the second-place Rangers at New York Monday, the Leafs went into Boston ambitious to tear up the form-sheets entirely. They were just about as good as the home team for a period. Then young Pork Dumart began to go like the wind and Toronto was left in the ruck quickly while Bruins recorded their largest goal total of the year against Walter (Turk) Broda, whose netminding has been one of the season's sensations.

Like the "9-1" Defeat.

It must have felt to the Leafs a little like that historic 9-1 trimming they took from Boston last winter at Toronto. Pep Kelly pulled them level less than a minute after Cooney Weiland opened the scoring for the Bruins in the first chapter, but Dumart laid down a pass for Busher Hollett in the closing seconds of the period to send the home team ahead to stay.

Two minutes had passed in the second when Roy Conacher converted an assist from Johnny Crawford. Then, with Red Horner serving a penalty, Dumart scored the first of two unassisted goals. He got another with the sides at full strength and a line-mate, Bobby Bauer, raised the Bruin lead to 6-1 before the second ended.

Ray Getliffe kept the parade going in the third and it was halted only momentarily while Harvey Jackson closed Toronto's goal-getting on an angle shot. Conacher's second score completed the rout with five minutes to play.

Detroit's sixth-place Red Wings take on Chicago at Detroit Thursday and the results may determine the immediate fate of Canadiens, who would be left five points in the rear by a wing victory. The Habitants, scrambling around with Armand Mondou and Marcel Tremblay up from their New Haven, farm, gave a weak display against the Black Hawks.

Mondou, aided by Tremblay and Stew Evans, scored the lone Montreal goal after Earl Robinson and Russ Blinco had given Chicago a 2-0 advantage in the second. But the addition of the International-American League players proved to be just another attempt at finding a winning combination when the Hawk power began to tell. Paul Thompson and Bob Gracie added counters in the third as Canadiens suffered their sixth straight loss and Chicago moved into a third-place tie with New York Americans.

SPORT SPICE

By Drew Middleton

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Perhaps that "sporting" in the 20th Century Sporting Club's monicker will sound phoney if the organization lures the venerable Jim Braddock back to the ring against young Lou Nova . . . The match seems likely . . . Ancil Hoffman, Max Baer's "brain," is speedily dickering the dancing Baer out of a Nova scrap . . . Braddock admits to 33, has been out of the ring for nearly a year and has only a stout heart to recommend him . . .

Insco, sire of Inscoelda, the Woolford farm's fine filly, was one of the real bargains of the turf . . . Herbert Woolf bought him for $500 at a Kentucky dispersal sale . . . Insco sired Lawrin, the 1938 derby winner, and Inscoelda, a leading candidate for the same purse proud classic next year . . . Bombardier Wells, British heavyweight, has turned wrestler.

He Changed Sox

Among the numerous players to switch baseball uniforms in the off-season is Eric McNair, above, shortstop with Boston Red Sox, who moves west to different hose for next season. He was exchanged for Boze Berger, another infielder, of the White Sox in a straight trade. Both players staged a bit of a race last year for the non-batting title in the league, McNair compiling a robust .156 average, and Berger damaging the outfield fences to the extent of a .217 mark.

Argos Vision Another Year

TORONTO, Dec. 28-(CP)- If the adage that "a team is only as strong as its weakest substitutes" holds true for football, then Toronto Argonauts are well supplied with material to continue their recent triumph over Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Coach Lew Hayman of Argos believes much of the team's success can be attributed to the large number of first-rank subs always on hand. Injuries have not caught the team short because for every star there has been a capable understudy.

There was talk of Hayman's veteran stars retiring after the 30-7 beating they handed Bombers in this season's final but they're not so sure now that they won't be out again. That means Hayman has a chance of having such stars as George Hees, Teddy Morris, Wes Cutler and Red Vail in uniform for the 1939 season.

To back these stars, or perhaps lead them are an imposing crop of backs and linemen that haven't seen much action while the older players were available for heavy duty. The Stukus brothers—Frank, Annis and Bill—are young and improving.

Among the better ones available who haven't obtained the ranking of the Stukus boys are John Mingay and Harry Booth. They are only two of a dozen youngsters expected to hit their stride in time for Argos defence of the title next year.

PREPARE LACE DESIGN

The European political crisis interfering with the marketing of novelty lace, lace makers of Calais, France, have started to prepare new designs for next season.

Stirling Heads Drillon As Ace Athlete

By Sydney Gruson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Dec. 28 — (C.P.). — The athlete of the year in Canadan sport was football's Hugh (Bummer) Stirling, who said farewell to the gridiron less than two weeks ago after 10 seasons as an outstanding half-back with Sarnia Imperials of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

The triple-threat back, closest thing to a one-man team in the game, was named the greatest individual performer of 1938 in the seventh annual poll conducted by the Canadian Press. Thirty-one sports editors across the country participated, casting three votes for their first choice, two for second, and one for third.

On this basis Stirling received 36 points and won a nip-and-tuck battle for the honor by three points from Gordon Drillon, ace right winger of Toronto Maple Leafs and the National Hockey League's scoring champion. Bob Pearce, world champion professional sculler from Hamilton, Ont., received 24 points for third place.

First Grid Star.

It was the first time the outstanding athlete had been drawn from the gridiron. Previous winners were Sandy Somerville, golfer, in 1932; Dave Komonen, Marathon runner, 1933; Harold Webster, Marathon runner, 1934; Scotty Rankine, Marathon runner, 1936; and Syl Apps, hockey player, 1937.

The observers took note of practically every sport, from canoeing to major-league baseball, which had three starry Canadian performers, and in the end placed Stirling at the top for leading Imperials to their eighth straight O.R.F.U. championship and heading the East's football scorers for the second successive season.

If Stirling holds to his recently-announced retirement he will have finished in a greater blaze of glory than he enjoyed in any single season during his decade on the senior football front. He was almost an unanimous choice as one of the backs on the Canadian Press's all-Eastern football team.

The Bummer shined in every department. Strong and amazingly fast for his 215 pounds, he kicked, plunged and passed. When his great backfield mate, Orm Beach, died in a pre-season oil refinery explosion at Sarnia, Stirling took over much of his work and played a whale of a game on secondary defence.

Stopped Only Once.

Stirling's 32 years hung lightly. He was still fast enough this season to follow up his own kickoff in one game and rouge the receiver. It wasn't his fault when Imperials bowed out to Toronto Argonauts in the Eastern final. That was the only time he was stopped all year.

In his 10 years as a senior Stirling scored 26 touchdowns, kicked 16 field goals, 260 singles and 55 points after touchdown for a total of 493 points, far ahead of anyone in the game to-day.

From the first returns Drillon and Stirling had the contest to themselves. Drillon, native of Moncton, N.B., swept into the first rank of big-league hockeyists in his first full N.H.L. season. On right wing beside Apps he became the league's highest scorer during the 1937-38 campaign and continued to head Toronto sharpshooters in the Stanly Cup playdowns.

Pearce, who moved to Hamilton from his native Australia in 1930 and then cleaned up all amateur sculling titles, defended his pro championship easily during 1938 against Evans Paddon, Australian champion.

Canuck Runners Win In 1938 Review Shows

The Canadian sports parade moved swiftly through 1938 with a host of new champions rising on a scene colored brightly from January to December by great team achievements and individualistic and boom-time record attendances in several sports.

From a strictly intersectional viewpoint 1938 was kinder to the east than 1937 but intersectional warfare took a back seat to the sweep of Canada's track and field scores at the British Empire Games in Australia and a return of Canadian netters to Davis Cup tennis play.

Canada won six firsts, more than any other country, in track and field at the Empire Games besides scoring victories in boxing, wrestling and swimming. The Davis Cuppers, however, bowed to Japan in the first round, but tennis interest hit a new high on the Dominion's participation after forsaking the tournament for two years.

Johnny Loaring of Windsor, Ont., Jim Courtright of Ottawa, Harold Brown of Meaford, Ont., George Sutherland of DeWinton, Alta., Eric Coy of Winnipeg and Canada's 440-yard relay team were the track and field winners at Australia. Terry Evans of Toronto retained the Empire middleweight wrestling championship, Tommy Osborne of Montreal won the heavyweight boxing title and Bob Pirie of Toronto scored two firsts in swimming events.

Lose to Japan

Bobby Murray of Montreal and Ross Wilson of Toronto, the country's No. 1 and 2, carried the singles burden against Japan with Wilson and Laird Watt of Montreal in doubles. Alex Cameron was the other member of the team. Japan won all five matches.

The west added to its hockey laurels by capturing both the senior and junior amateur championships but St. Catharines Athletics returned the Mann Cup and lacrosse honors to the east which also retained the senior football championship through Toronto Argonauts.

Vancouver North Shore United replaced tht Johnson Nationals from the same city as soccer champions and Vancouver Westerns maintained the coast's supremacy in basketball, beating Ottawa Glebe Grads three straight for the Dominion crown that University of British Columbia captured in 1937. Powerful Johnny Samis of Vancouver held the men's badminton championship for the west but pretty Mrs. W. R. Walton, Jr., of Toronto, took the women's title from Mrs. Anna Kier Patrick of Vancouver.

The east's most notable victory came from Argos' second straight capture of the football championship. Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen won a thriller from Clarrie Tiernan of Dublin, Ireland, for the open women's golf championship.

YOUNG BOXER DEAD

SYDNEY, Australia—(CP).—Mervyn (Darkie) Blandon, former bantamweight boxing champion of Australia, died in hospital recently from a tumor on the brain. He was 27 years old.

Bold Buffoon Back

Yes, it's Maxie Baer, once holder of the world's heavyweight title and performer of many strange and wondrous feats under the glare of the overhead lights. No guarantees are given, but it's more than likely that Madcap Maximilian will be featuring the sport pages again, when and if he comes back to the ring to meet Lou Nova, robust young Californian, who defeated Tommy Farr not so long ago.

Centenary Pupils Print School Paper

ROSENEATH, Dec. 28.—Pupils of the West End school, Centenary, are engrossed these Christmas holidays reading a newspaper all their own. It is called the "Woodvale News" and is crammed full of information on everything from the school concert to how to grease cars and avoid colds And the entire paper is the product of the pupils themselves.

10-page affair, hand-printed and stencilled, it has poetry, even well-drawn fashions including dresses and modern hats, and ends up—significantly enough on the back pages—with the standing of the pupils in Christmas examinations One of the original poems contained is in two parts, the first a farewell to 1938, the second a greeting to 1939.

In a column "News and gossip about everybody," there are congratulations in the Walter Winchell style and even an advertisement. An editorial sympathises with "the parents of the twenty-nine pupils killed in a bus near Salt Lake city," and issues the admonition. "We cannot be too careful. The bus driver stopped, but never looked for a train."

Longest article is a "Health talk for all," and offers sound advice for children and grown-ups alike. One page is devoted to projects to be launched in the New Year by pupils, give indication that students are to be really busy.

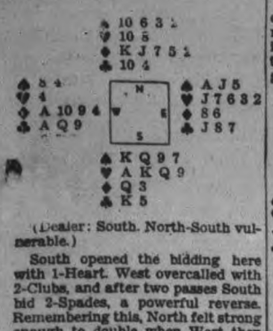
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

TOO MUCH AT STAKE

PLAYING for a two-trick set, at the risk of possibly not setting the contract at all, can not be classed as sound rubber bridge. There are times when the holder of an ace-queen should lay down that ace, even though he is sure that his ten-ace sits immediately over the guarded king. Among these occasions are those on which he can see a likelihood of the declarer discarding his losers of that suit on set-up cards of another suit.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South opened the bidding here with 1-Heart. West overcalled with 2-Clubs, and after two passes South bid 2-Spades, a powerful reverse. Remembering this, North felt strong enough to double when West then bid three diamonds. South's take-out to 3-No trump, because the side would prefer a vulnerable game to a not-vulnerable set, made West sure that South had the guarded club K. North shifted this to 4-Spades, which East doubled.

Feeling that East's double probably showed the spade A to stop a trump run, West led his singleton heart. It drew the 10, J and A. The diamond 3 then brought out the 10 and K. A spade was covered with the A by East, who led a heart for West to ruff. The diamond A completed West's book, and all he needed for a set was his club A. But he unsoundly hoped for two club tricks, so instead led a diamond.

Declarer ruffed, took two rounds of spades, cashed two high hearts, ruffed a good heart in dummy with its last trump, then took the last two tricks in diamonds, so that West got no club trick at all.

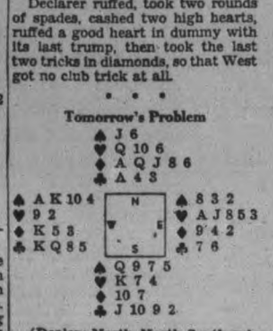
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

If East had bid hearts in response to West's double, and West led the heart 9, how should South play for 3-No trump?

Rebels Advance Slowly Into Catalonia

HENDAYE, France, Dec. 28—(AP)—Powerful insurgent fighting columns, badgered everywhere by fierce Catalonian counter-attacks, forged their way slowly eastward today over rugged territory toward the heart of the government stronghold in north-eastern Spain.

On the fifth day of General Franco's offensive aimed ultimately at Barcelona, the government capital, casualties on both sides were well above 10,000 of the 500,000 total of fighters.

An exact record of ground won by the drive was obscured by communiques flatly contradicting each other.

In the north, however, Franco's resident mountain troops appeared to have taken the town of Vilanova De Meya, at the end of an improved highway leading to Artesa, "the key to Catalonia" and 34 miles north-east of Lerida.

In Southern Lerida province, according to insurgent radio bulletins issued under strict censorship, the insurgent command was said to have announced capture of Borjas Blancas, about 35 air miles from Tarragona and 16 miles southeast of Lerida.

Denied By Loyalists.

All advices from government Spain denied the insurgents were even within field-gun shot of Borjas Blancas.

Despite the conflicting communiques, however, Franco's objectives have become clearer to observers on the border. After he broke through the government defences in two of the four main points attacked, he fell back on his usual tactics of biting off chunks of territory by quick, hard thrusts and then reducing them with strong "clean-up" squads.

The drive has been far from easy, however. Franco's own official military dispatches reported the enemy troops "fight back ferociously, contesting every inch of the way."

Advices from government Spain indicated the Barcelona high command believed the strength of insurgent forces in the two drives precluded another offensive somewhere in the north. They were reported to have called troops and guns from other sectors down to reinforce the battered tremp and Southern Lerida sectors.

School At Warsaw Has Fine Concert

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, Dec. 28. — Warsaw school had its Christmas program on Wednesday afternoon. About twenty-five guests were present and printed programs were distributed.

After the National Anthem, the junior pupils sang a Welcome; Stella Wilkinson recited; Kenneth Drain and Howard Darling gave a mouth-organ duet; Vera Bellis sang; Raymond Clements and Everett Payne did some very clever tricks; the senior pupils sang several carols; Marion Davis and Beatrice Dunford gave a duet; Mother's Little Girl was played by the junior pupils; Gordon Tucker sang; Keith Thompson recited; Lenore McIlvena and Raymond Clements gave a duet, violin and guitar; Grade Four sang a chorus; junior room sang some choruses; Ralph Edwards, Dorothy Jackson and Doreen Bodenham each recited; the Senior room orchestra played.

Presents were distributed from the tree. In speaking later, Mr. Sloan, principal, drew attention to the stencilling at the top of the blackboards, which was all work of the pupils, at their own initiative, also to the artistic pictures and drawings.

An interesting feature was the perusal of the "School News," a paper prepared wholly by pupils and printed without any correction by teachers. There are current events, a place for births, marriages and deaths, and Kenenth Drain had a very interesting article on the Moon.

Okha, the new Russian city created by the oil industry on the island of Sakhalin, is growing rapidly.

No Opposition

Wallace Shearer took one municipal barrier easily wit hthe vanishment of opposition for the reeveship of Harvey township last night. His expected opponent was eliminated by the requirement that his name must be on the voters' list, and apparently it was not there. So Reeve Shearer remains in office and is likely to go to bat at the January sessions for the Wardenship. The last Warden out of Harvey was the late "Bob" Shaw. He is likely to clash with Reeve Milby of North Monaghan, and the choice of the Smith taxpayers.

Contest For Reeve In Cavan Township

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 28.—An election for the reeveship emerged from the municipal nominations in Cavan township last night in the fact that Deputy-reeve T. Garnet Shield tossed his hat into the ring against Reeve W. Arthur Wood.

Councillor W. Wilbert Brown steps up into the Deputy's chair, and Harold Cathcart enters the council as a new member with Henry A. Fallis and John Smith.

Acclamation at Millbrook.

W. E. Ball, was named Reeve of Millbrook village with A. H. Jeffrey, D. Sheppard, R. A. Ford, and H. D. Bigelow as council for 1939 without a fight when three other nominees withdrew. School trustees were also acclaimed for the coming year with J. E. Allen, G. C. Ellsworth and Dr. J. W. Wright named. W. T. Wood and G. E. Burnham are members of the Hydro Commission by acclamation.

Mrs. G. W. Kerby, now of Calgary.

Commander Kerby went straight from the University of Toronto after graduating in mechanical engineering to service at Gallipoli, where he was wounded in the disastrous campaign against Constantinople. Later, in France, he engaged in aerial combat the great German ace, Baron Manfred Von Richtofen, who eventually was shot down by Captain Roy Brown of Toronto.

After the Armistice he served with the Royal Air Force in operations against the wild tribesmen on India's northwest frontier and at Singapore, the Empire's "Gibraltar of the East."

Serving with Commander Kerby in troubled China is another Canadian officer, Major-General A. E. Grasett of Toronto, who for the last two months has been general officer commanding British troops in China. Gen. Grassett, a graduate of Upper Canada College and the Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., previously served with distinction in France and India.

Bringing credit to Canada's military reputation in India is Brigadier Francis Maynard of Ottawa, another R.M.C. graduate, who won a companionship of the Bath for his work in helping put down the Fakir of Ipi's rebellion in the northwest frontier province last year.

Savings deposits in Germany decreased $60,000,000 in the month preceding the Munich agreement.

Seeney Is Returned In Havelock But Fight On For Council

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Dec. 28.—Reeve Ernest W. Seeney has received an acclamation to the reeveship of Havelock for his fourth consecutive term, but a hot battle is expected for the four council seats, with three of the old councillors seeking re-election, along with four other candidates. James Wilde, Everard Chiles and D. Forde, members of the present council, have accepted the nomination, while Jas. L. Squire has decided to drop out. Among the four others whose names will appear on the ballots next Monday are ex-reeve Ernest J. Leeson, and three newcomers, Kenneth Green, Fred Pollock and James Ketchen.

The names of E. J. Leeson, Rred Pollock and T. P. Lancaster were also mentioned for the reeveship but all declined to oppose Reeve Seeney in the coming election. Those nominated for council but did not qualify were Bruce Curtis, Richard Sanderson, William Griffith, and Councillor Squire.

Acclamations were also received as follows: Three school trustees for the term of two years, Mrs. M. Brisbin, Bernard Smith and H. W. Roche; one school trustees for the term of one year, Mrs. Clare Price; one hydro commissioner for the term of two years, Richard Sanderson.

The public school board will now be composed of three women members and three men, as a result of the above acclamations.

Fight In Belmont.

A hot election is assured for the united townships of Belmont-Methuen, with Reeve William E. Griffith and Councillor Isaac Anderson contesting the reeveship, and eight candidates qualifying for the four council seats. Councillors Donald Plunkett, Frank Sophie and Joseph McNeely will seek re-election, in a field of five other candidates composed of ex-Councillors Thomas Bannon and Floyd Steenburgh, and newcomers, Eugene McLaughlin, Roy McArthur and Carl Purdy.

The contest for the reeveship from all appearances will be quite a battle, with Reeve W. E. Griffith, a veteran in municipal affairs in this district for the past 32 years, being opposed by Isaac Anderson 34-year-old and youngest member of the council, but the oldest in point of experience, having served for seven consecutive terms on that body.

Cold, Snow Garble Railroad Order and 93 Die As Trains Collide In Roumanian Holiday Jam

BUCHAREST, Dec. 28—(AP)—Fatalities in the worst railway accident in Rumania's history mounted today to 93 as more of the victims of the Christmas Day collision of passenger trains near Etulea, in Bessarabia, succumbed to injuries.

Investigations by cabinet ministers indicated that during the holiday travel rush some trains were operated in spite of a partial breakdown of the railways' telephone and telegraph dispatching lines. Apparently an order to have two trains pass at a station other than the normal one was misunderstood because of the wire trouble, attributed to cold and snow.

One railway official, a dispatcher and two station masters have been arrested. The trains which crashed, both locals, were crowded with persons making Christmas visits from village to village.

Flemings And Cobourg Rd. Schools Scenes Of Christmas Concerts

HASTINGS, Dec. 27.— The pupils of Fleming's School S.S. No. 12, Percy Township, under the direction of their teacher, Arnold Bates of Campbellford, presented their annual Christmas program on Wednesday evening. The school was nicely decorated, emphasizing the Christmas spirit. The entire program was the production of the school pupils except for a piano duet by Miss H. Nicholson and Mr. Bates. Ernest Stevenson was chairman and presented the following program:

Welcome, Mary Lewis and Walter Fleming; chorus, "Merry, Merry Christmas," Juniors. "This is Merry Christmas," Seniors; recitation, Jack Lewis; musical recitation, Wilma Beamish; acrostic, Christmas, Juniors; piano solo, Clifford Beamish; recitation, George Bebee; chorus, "Just a Smile of Holly," Seniors; reading, Mary Fleming; Fleming's Carollers, six Seniors; recitation, Julia McConnell; piano duet, Miss Helen Nicholson of Campbellford; recitation, Marilyn Forde; physical exercises, Seniors; play, two-part recitation, Grades 3 and 4; play, "The Good Christmas Brownies"; closing chorus, "A Jolly Sleigh-ride," entire school.

The pupils presented their teacher Mr. Bates, with a beautiful pair of book-ends as a Christmas remembrance. Santa arrived and distributed gifts from the well-laden tree.

Cobourg Road Concert.

The pupils of the Cobourg Road School, together with the young people of the section, held their annual Christmas concert on Wednesday evening, the school being filled to capacity. The program was under the direction of the teacher, Miss Kathleen Crossan and Donald Beamish was chairman.

The school looked attractive with Christmas decorations and the prettily decorated Christmas tree, well laden with gifts for everyone. The following program was given:

Opening chorus, Christmas Welcome; recitation, "Christmas Greeting," by Isabelle Beamish; recitation, "Christmas Comes," by David Cook; dialogue, "Whipping Johnny Didn't Get," by Jack Lamey and Lillian Smith; chorus, "The Winter Time Is Here"; recitation, "Jack Frost," by Eddy Smith; recitation, "Santa Claus," by Dannie Cleary; recitation by Howard Richardson; dialogue, "Mrs. Brown's Visitors," by Lillian Smith, Marguerite Kelleher, Marguerite Lamey and Donna Beamish; chorus, "Jolly Old Fellow"; recitation, "Jolly Old Fellow," by Lyle Cook; dance, Marguerite Kelleher; recitation, "My Christmas Gifts," by Billie West; duet, Howard Richardson and Isabelle Beamish; dialogue, "Christmas Cookies," by Bruce Cook, Helen Lamey, Billie West, Lillian Smith, and Mary Smith; recitation, "I Wonder Why," by Bruce Cook; recitation, "Frost Fairy," by Donna Beamish; dance, Marguerite and Jack Lamey; dialogue, "Lucinda's Mistake." By Isabelle Beamish and Helen Richardson; chorus, "Up in Santa Land"; dialogue, "Trouble in Santa Claus Land"; chorus, "Oh, come all ye Faithful."

Following the school program a three-act comedy, "Look Out, Lizzie," was presented by the young people of the section. The drama exhibited a somewhat unusual plot, full of interest, quick movements, and with romantic developments. The cast was filled by amateurs, who were well chosen and who did their part sexceptionally well. The characters were: Silas Long, John Gibson the farmer; Sarah Long, his wife, Irene Oliver; Hazel Long, the daughter, Kathaleen Kellehar; Hank Blink, the hired man, Leo Gibson; Minnie, the stage gossiper, Alice Whitred; Mr. Fichard Biltmore, the hero of the play, Eric Puffer; Lizzie Blank, the hired girl, Irene Gibson; and Dave Hinkle, Howard Porter.

Marguerite Kelleher and Marguerite Lamey were well applauded as they did the Sailor's Hornpipe between Acts 1 and 2. Helen Lamey, dressed in pale blue, looked most charming as she sang sweetly "My Sweet Little Alice Blue Gown."

Miss Crosson graciously thanked everyone for their co-operation in making the concert a success, and then Santa arrived and distributed the gifts.

BONARLAW, Dec. 28.— Rawdon township, at a meeting held in the town hall Monday at Harold, and attended by a record crowd of ratepayers, decided to avoid the expense of an election and returned Reeve Geo. E. Thompson, Deputy-Reeve Bert Bedford, and Councillors W. J. Tanner, John Morrison and Wilfred Spencer by acclamation as their council for 1939.

Township Clerk W. J. Barlow ably acted as chairman and called on the various members of the council. Other speakers were Councillor Post of Huntingdon Township, Councillor F. Stapley of Stirling, and H. R. Tompkins, editor Stirling News-Argus.

There was some discussion regarding the advisability of adopting the road commission system instead of statute labour. Most of the speakers were in favour of the former and more up-to-date system which they pointed out would give the township better roads for less money. A vote taken to decide the feeling of those present resulted in about 2 to 1 in favour of the road commission system, although a vote of the whole township has consistently been in favour of statute labour for a number of years. It is felt that the question is more thoroughly understood now than ever before.

The meeting was very orderly and attentive throughout the entire proceedings.

Railway trains ran far behind schedule and bus trips in the area north of London were cancelled. Intermitten breaks in the Hydro-Electric power service at Kincardine were blamed for a $25,000 fire in a business block. The wind handicapped firemen in fighting the blaze.

Hockey games had to be called off all over Western Ontario and the Penetanguishene team was snowbound on its way to Owen Sound for a game. A provincial government snowplow was unable to get through to the players.

Reports of storm damage and communication breaks came from all parts of the province. More snow, colder weather and strong northwest gales were predicted for Sault Ste. Marie. Business was cut almost to a minimum as snow swirled about Toronto streets. Waves mounted in Toronto harbor and the roof was blown from a factory building.

A shortage of bread and milk was reported by storekeepers in the Orangeville district. Fergus district farmers said many motorists had abandoned their cars and stopped at farmhouses overnight.

250-Foot Buffalo Slaughter "Falls" Kills 3 Fighting Indians

HARDIN, Mont., Dec. 28—(AP)—A golfer who looked down a 250-foot cliff and saw the bodies of three Crow Indians lying in the dry river-bed below was one of the witnesses called today to an inquest in the deaths.

The victims were Fred Old Horn, 50; Anna Door, 26, and Pete Charges Strong, 45. They had been drinking, the sheriff said.

Cy Copeland, of Hardin, discovered the bodies Saturday while playing on the Fort Custer golf course at the top of the cliff.

The perpendicular cliff above the Big Horn River was one of several in Montana once used by Indians as a "buffalo falls." The Indians would stampede bison over the "buffalo falls," then shoot the helpless and wounded animals with bows and arrows.

Blood stains on sage brush at the top of the cliff indicated there had been a fight, Sheriff Henry Ulich said, but nothing was found to show whether the trio fell, jumped or was pushed over the cliff.

The Indians' automobile was found parked 100 yards away. Sheriff Ulrich said he was investigating a repo.t another automobile was at the top of the cliff about the time the three died Friday night.

Conant Plans To Ease Sunday Laws

Bear Heavily On Poor; Alliance Group Leaves Dissatisfied

TORONTO, Dec. 29 (CP). — Spectator games and public amusements on Sundays in Ontario were discussed yesterday when Attorney-General Gordon Conant received a Lord's Day Alliance deputation.

"It is far better that our people should have an opportunity for some recreation and amusement than that they should be compelled to pass the whole day under the restraint that now exists," said Mr. Conant.

The Attorney-General said the province had the right under the Lord's Day Act to permit games and performances on Sundays. If they were permitted, perhaps after two or three o'clock in the afternoon, the good accomplished would outweigh harm done, he thought.

It was Mr. Conant's opinion the present law bore more heavily on the poor than on the well-to-do. The rich man had his golf club, his trout stream, his yacht and other things for Sunday recreation. The poor man had none of these. He stayed at home or perhaps broke the law by doing something the law says he can't do on Sundays.

Rt. Rev. A. R. Beverley, Toronto, Lord's Day Alliance president, headed the deputation. It was organized because of concern over a recent speech by Mr. Conant in which he urged liberalization of laws governing the Sabbath.

The alliance deputation included representatives of labor organizations worried because some workers might lose their weekly day of rest should Sunday laws be radically changed.

The Bishop Interrupts.

Bishop Beverley, while Mr. Conant was making his reply to the deputation, interrupted to bring the hearing to a close by saying the attorney-general's hearing was not very sympathetic and that unless Mr. Conant had something further to discuss, there was no use wasting time.

Mr. Conant said it would be impractical to send provincial police into the municipalities to enforce the Lord's Day Act as it now stood.

"As long as the present system continues, we can't do any more about enforcing the Sunday laws than we are doing at present."

"I have been greatly impressed," Mr. Conant said, "with representations made me from one of the northern mining districts, containing the following statement:

"'Sunday is really the only day the miner has free. Consequently he is, in some respects, the victim of circumstances, as far as recreation is concerned. With a long winter ahead, he cannot see many hockey games as by the nature of his job he has to work on different shifts. In the summer the same thing applies to baseball and football, which, as you know, are two major sports in the Porcupine.

No Mitts, Arms Frozen In Grip To Sleeper Car Job Seeker Is Rescued Off Fast Express

OTTAWA, Dec. 29 (CP)—His hands, arms and face badly frozen, John Moran, 32, of Ottawa was in hospital today in a serious condition. He was found early today at Arnprior, 41 miles west of here, riding between two sleeping cars of a Canadian Pacific passenger train.

Moran told train officials he had been on the train since it left Montreal and he was headed west in search of work. When found, he was huddled against the rear of one car with his feet braced against the front of the next and was hanging on with both arms which were so badly stiffened he could not release them from around the rods without help.

He had been travelling without mitts or gloves.

Defense Of Girl Gets Convict Shot, Pals Toss Pair In Powderhouse, Blast Rocks Dakota For 50 Miles

SIOUX FALLS, S.D., Dec. 29.—(AP)—Lee Bradley, convicted bank robber awaiting trial on a charge of murder, in an interview today told an amazing story of how he shot and killed Floyd Parker, also a former convict, and then tossed his body into a powderhouse near here where it was blown to bits by seven tons of explosives two years ago.

A quarrel over a woman, Helen Sieler of Sioux City, Ia., described as Parker's "girl friend," led to the shooting, Bradley said. The Sieler woman also was shot and left for dead in the powderhouse, but managed to crawl away before the blast which created one of the midwest's sensational crimes.

Bradley, who served about 10 years of a 15 year term after pleading guilty to robbing a bank at Ft. Pierre, S.D., in 1925, was arrested near Yakima, Wash., last August after a 19 months search.

Two other men are already serving prison terms in connection with the powderhouse crime. William Nesbeth, Sioux City bartender, is under life sentence after his conviction here of 1st degree murder, while Harry (Slim) Reeves, also of Sioux City, is serving a 40 year sentence in Iowa after pleading guilty to a jewelry store robbery at Sioux City.

Getting Life Anyway.

"I guess I haven't a chance to beat this rap anyway," said Bradley detailing events leading up to the powerhouse blast which shook the countryside for 50 miles around on New Year's Eve in 1936. "This story won't do me any good, but can't do me any harm, because I'm slated for the limit—life."

Bradley denied the blast killing was premeditated, gave an account that conflicted at many points with testimony in the Nesbeth trial.

He told of planning and carrying out the robbery of the Ehlermann Jewelry Company in Sioux City with Reeves, Parker and Nesbeth a few days before the blast, but denied Parker was slain to keep him and the Sieler woman from "squealing" about the crime.

After the Ehlermann robbery, Bradley said, the five came here on Dec. 31 and his companions became "lit up on marihuana." The trip here was made, he said, to obtain dynamite, and it was while he and Parker were attempting to break into the powderhouse that the quarrel broke out when he made a disparaging remark about Miss Sieler.

Resents Crack About Girl

Parker, Bradley said, struck him from behind with his fist and then attacked him with a hammer, but he managed to draw his gun.

"I shot. He fell like a log," Bradley said calmly, his voice neither raised nor lowered. "I rolled him over and he was dead. I had shot him in the heart."

When Nesbeth, Reeves and Miss Sieler came up, Bradley continued, Reeves said "What are we going to do with the woman? She'll squawk."

"She knelt over Parker and as she did Reeves grabbed the hammer and began hitting her over the head. She keeled over. Then when she cried to Billy (Nesbeth) for help Reeves shot her.

"I guess we must have all thought of the same thing at the same time 'Let's get rid of these bodies' so we picked them up and tossed them into the powderhouse. I thought Sieler was dead too because she didn't make a sound.

"We all helped toss the bodies in, but I won't say who lit the fuse. Then we ran to the car and were five or six miles away when the explosion came."

(The blast of seven tons of dynamite and black powder shattered $20,000 worth of plate glass in the downtown district, five miles from the scene of the explosion, caused near panic among New Year's Eve revelers and was felt as far as Pipestone, Minn., 50 miles away. Only a few bits of Parker's body were found after the explosion.)

Chinese Buys $2,000,000 In Trucks, Parts From Detroit Firms

Kwang Pu Chen, a former resident of Shanghai, said the trucks would be used for strictly commercial purposes in southern China, but added it would be a great help to the army to have goods moving smoothly and new credits coming into the country through the sale of the products of the South.

Farmer-Author And Wife Missing In B.C.

MISSION, B.C., Dec. 29.—(CP).—Searchers fought over snow-drifted trails east of this Fraser Valley city to-day seeking trace of a farmer-author and his wife, unreported since Monday.

British Columbia Police Constable Russell Taylor and three neighbors of Jack Tanner breasted the two and three foot drifts along Suicide Creek, the route Tanner and his wife were believed to have taken on a hike seeking material for a book he is writing.

Carrying rations of oatmeal and raisins to last them two days the couple set out from nearby Dewdney just after dawn Monday despite the urgings of a farm hand not to attempt the trip in the face of a heavy snowfall.

When they failed to return last night police were notified and a search was organized immediately.

The searchers headed upstream from the Tanner farm toward a small cabin where it is believed the Tanners may have sought shelter after bucking the drifts which sometimes pile over three feet along the trails. The rescue party was not expected to reach the cabin until late last night and if they located the missing couple there, would probably start back to-day.

Meanwhile eight other persons reported missing during the two-day snow storm which struck the British Columbia lower mainland Monday, were found safe. Two young couples drove to Harrison Hot Springs several days ago, then abandoned their automobile there because of snow conditions and returned to Vancouver by rail.

Four others reached Howe Sound resort yesterday in their gasoline launch after being delayed en route by rough weather.

Bark In Bag, Clue To Girl's Murder

KINGSTON, Pa., Dec. 29.—(AP).—Shreds of tanbark reported found in the burlap bag into which the nude body of 19-year-old Margaret Martin was stuffed sent police today on a search of a nearby tannery on the theory she may have been slain there by the man who lured her from her home with the promise of a job.

The girl's body was found hidden in Keelersburg creek, 20 miles north of here, last Wednesday, four days after she disappeared from home with the promise to her mother, "I'll be right back."

A coroner's inquest yesterday disclosed only the girl was a victim of "murder by strangulation at the hands of an unknown person or persons."

State police have checked the possibility the bag might have come from supply stores at the little communities of Noxen and Kunkle, a few miles from the heavily wooded section where the body was found.

There is a tannery near Noxen.

Dollars Easier As Famed Broadway Spots Turn Away Calls For New Year's Madcap

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP) — The Manhattan merry-go-round whirled faster today toward its annual madcap climax on New Year's Eve, with advance reservations heralding a $10,000,000 dusk-to-dawn celebration as '38 clicks over into '39.

The larger hotels were swamped:

Night club proprietors in the "fabulous fifties" mournfully turned away late-comers eager to plank down anywhere from $15 to $30 a couple.

Prices were about the same as last year, with a noticeable restriction of the give-away gadgets such as noisemakers, favors and free bottles of champagne to lure patronage — indicating that dollars are easier, both come and go.

Broadway theatres shared heavily in the seasonal prosperity. Yesterday was the biggest matinee day in the Times Square belt since 1929. Ten shows played to standees and others received near-capacity patronage.

British Vessel Bombed On High Seas

S.O.S. Reports Crew Adrift In Boats Off Spanish Coast

LONDON, Dec. 29—(AP).—Lloyd's agent at Gibraltar reported to-day that an SOS had been received from the 4,239-ton British steamship Marionga, which read:

"Bombed. Crew took to boats."

The vessel's message gave its position as 39.12 north latitude, 1.7 east longitude, between Castellon, on Spain's eastern coast, and the Balearic Islands. (Palma, on Mallorca, largest of the Balearics, is a Spanish insurgent base).

The Marionga is a freighter carrying a crew of about 30 and left Oran, Algeria, Saturday for Spain. Her owners are Neill and Pandelis of London.

The area in which she is reported to have been bombed is on the route of Spanish insurgent bombers flying from the base at Mallorca to attacks on mainland cities and towns.

A Government spokesman in the House of Commons recently reported 120 attacks on British ships since the outbreak of the Spanish civil war. Most of these, however, were on ships within Spanish Government territorial waters, where the British Government refused protection.

The Marionga apparently was bombed on the high seas where such an attack is deemed "piracy" by the British government.

The owners said the ship was carrying a general cargo to Barcelona and had a non-intervention observer aboard.

Second Zero Wave Rolls Over States

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—(AP)—Another severe cold wave, more frigid than the first this week, rolled into the northwest United States from Canada today.

The bitter chill was felt today in Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Idaho, Montana, the Dakotas, Kansas, and Western Wisconsin. Weather observers said the Arctic blasts would reach the Eastern States by tonight or tomorrow.

Forecaster J. R. Lloyd at Chicago said the new wave was really a "second section" off the first and that there was no indication of warmer weather for the balance of the week. The new wave, he said, would be more intense because the first has already cooled the atmosphere.

Shippers were told to prepare for temperatures of zero to 25 below in the northwest, zero to 15 below in the west and north, and zero to 10 above in the east and south.

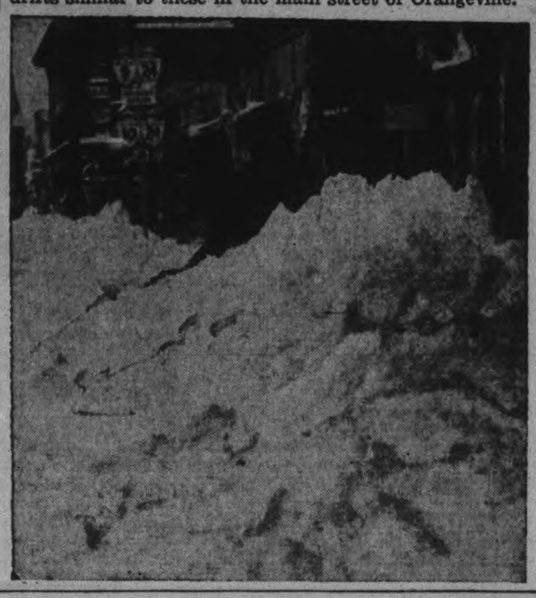
Snow was predicted for most of the New England states, New York, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey, Virginia, Tennessee, West Virginia, Kentucky and the Distrct of Columbia.

At least 28 persons were victims of exposure or accidents attributed to weather conditions.

An airplane pilot dropped food Wednesday to three crewmen on a boat locked since Monday in the ice of Copper River near Cordova, Alaska. A coast guard rescue boat was held back by a wind-storm.

Piled High

Scores of Ontario towns were completely isolated following the worst blizzard to hit the province in recent years. Hundreds of citizens began digging themselves out from under the blanket of snow which, driven by heavy gales formed drifts similar to these in the main street of Orangeville.



Ignoring Bars, Gas, Guns, Guards 2 Boys Beat 'Impregnable' Mint

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 29.—(AP).—The new armor-plated and heavily guarded United States mint was raided last night by two 15-year-old boys who got in by scaling a wall and raising an unlocked window.

Police Inspector Max Reznik identified the boys as Paul Francis and William Gallagher, residents of an orphanage at San Rafael. They were held for juvenile authorities.

"We wanted to see if we could do it," officers quoted the boys.

Bedlam broke out in the huge fortress of granite and steel—supposedly impregnable—when a guard saw two prowlers in the copper store room and turned in an alarm.

Lights went on, bells sounded and angry-voiced men with machine guns appeared.

Inspector Reznik said the boys had tossed out of a window a big sheet of copper from the room where pennies were made.

George Maher, captain of the mint guard, asked the two orphans how they managed to enter the building, protected by great walls, by impenetrable steel, tear gas equipment, heavy bars, numerous burglar alarms and a large force of guards.

Paul and Wiliam said it was simple.

"We went around to the Octavia street side of the building, climbed up a pipe to the second storey and crept around a ledge until we found a window partly open," police quoted them. We just pushed the window in further and dropped down inside. That was all there was to it. It was easy. We didn't mean no harm. It was all in fun."

LONDON—Prime Minister Chamberlain in a new year's message to the Conservative party tonight declared that in dealing with other nations he would make no "concessions to force."

Nightmares Feature Women's Dreams While Men Thirst

Richmond, Va., Dec. 29 (AP)

DREAMS of men and women are different. There is more beauty and more of the fantastic in women's dreams and more of the practical side in men's dreams, Dr. Charles Diserens of the University of Cincinnati reported today to the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Women, he said, dream of hearing music more often, see colors more often and have more nightmares. Men have less anxious dreams, more that are embarrassing and more that they are thirsty. Both sexes tend to dream in the latter part of the night.

Lad Dies On Road Hit-Run Victim

BRANTFORD, Ont., Dec. 29.—(CP)—Keith Bowen, Boston, about 19 or 20 years of age, was identified up a pipe to the second storey by his father today as the victim of an alleged hit-and-run mishap on No. 24 Highway about half-a-mile north of Wilsonville.

The body was found today by George Bains, 23, Galt, and Tim Eaton, Brantford, who were returning with other Brantford men from an orchestra engagement at Hagersville.

According to the police Mr. Bains while driving along the highway towards Brantford, noticed an object almost in the middle of the road. He swerved his car to miss it and as he passed passengers in the car noticed it was a body.

They notified Provincial Traffic Officer Robert Dukes, Brantford, and Dr. L. J. Stuart, Scotland, who attended. The victim was dead when the doctor arrived. He died of multiple injuries including a fractured skull. It was not known how long he had been on the road before he was discovered.

The accident happened in Norfolk county, but the body was taken to Scotland in Brant county. It was later removed to Norfolk county and officials there have not yet decided on an inquest.

His father and mother, Reg, an older brother, and two younger brothers and sisters survive. Keith was a former member of the Norfolk County Junior Farmers Association and was an active member of the organization.

Mr. Bowen is a cattle farmer and resides about a mile southwest of the village of Boston. An inquest will likely be held in Waterford, Norfolk county.

58 'Pay-as-you-go' Debbies Barred Presentation At '39 Courts

LONDON, Dec. 29.—(AP).— The dreams of nearly three score young women of being presented at court in 1939 were reported dashed today—because they, in effect, tried to "buy their way in."

The Lord Chamberlain, the Daily Mail said, has decided to reject 58 applications for presentation on the grounds the applicants paid hard-pressed peeresses to sponsor them.

The entire procedure for presentation is being changed radically because of what has been described as "presentation for private gain." More than a few purse-poor peeresses sponsor London seasons for socially ambitious women in return for cash. Titled women run "blind" want ads in London papers almost daily in quest of someone to sponsor.

In an effort to stamp out this practice, the Lord Chamberlain's office this year has made an unusually rigid investigation of applications—resulting in the prospective wholesale refusals.

No applications for presentations at 1939 courts will be considered after next Monday. A number of peeresses then will be informed their applications have been rejected—but the letters will be politely phrased and will contain no slurs.

No dates have been set yet for the 1939 courts. Two probably will be held in the spring before the King and Queen visit Canada and two others during the summer after their return.

Lone Widow's Shop, Alleged Bootlegging Joint And Cigar Store Victimized; Part Of Cash And Gun Found On Men

TORONTO, Dec. 29 (CP).—John Brown, alias John Russell, and Walter (Honey) Huen, captured by citizens last night following the armed holdup of a cigar store, will be placed in a police lineup today as suspected members of a gang that has been terrorizing the illicit liquor traffic in downtown Toronto the past few months.

Huen and Brown appeared before Magistrate Brown in men's police court today and were remanded to Jan. 5. Crown Attorney J. W. McFadden announced there would be no bail. Three joint charges of armed robbery were read against the pair.

Disregarding the advice of his counsel, Brown declared that he wanted to lodge a complaint against the police.

"When I was arrested last night they beat me over the head with blackjacks," he said. Nobody appeared to pay any attention to his remarks.

They are charged with robbing John Ittas of about $50, with robbing Nathan Davis of about $3 and with robbing Bert Rosen of about $100. They entered no plea to any of the charges.

A third man escaped after the robbery of the cigar shop in which more than $150 was taken by three armed bandits who forced five occupants of the store to lie on the floor.

Earlier in the night, three gunmen entered a private home, allegedly a bootlegging establishment, and departed with $28 and some clothing after searching the house for a larger amount of money they claimed to be there.

Two men and a girl were in the house when the gunmen entered. They threatened to "burn" one of the men if he did not reveal the hiding place of the money, but after taking him for a ride around the block in their automobile, they released him.

Later, one of the occupants left the house to look for the gunmen and was assaulted by another gang. He suffered jaw and rib injuries.

Widow's Till Looted.

A short time after the cigar store holdup, three armed bandits entered a small confectionery store in downtown Toronto, held up Mrs. Gertrude Marcus, widowed operator, and fled with $3.75 from the till.

Mrs. Marcus said she was afraid "they'll come back and kill me." She said that if "they will hold up a

50 p.c. Canadians Get 80 p.c. Of All Wages

DETROIT, Dec. 29 (CP).—Half of Canada's wage-earners receive 80 per cent. of the national wage bill, and the low wage class shows the heaviest unemployment, R. H. Coats, Dominion statistician, told the American Statistical Association here last night. Mr. Coats delivered his presidential address at the centennial banquet of the organization and recalled that in its 100 years of the association's existence this year marked the only occasion on which a Canadian had held that post.

His address emphasized the value of statistics to all phases of social activity. Statistics, he said, had long been the handmaid of the exact sciences, apprenticed in the scullery, but now promoted to housekeeper, "eating with the family."

On the matter of unemployment in Canada, Mr. Coats said it had surprised some people that in 1931 there was nearly as much employment per capita as in 1921, when there was no such commotion as a depression. But there was also more unemployed, the reason was that "in the meantime while the total gainfully occupied in Canada increased 20 per cent., the total working for wages increased 30 per cent.

When The Boom Broke.

"Under the stock-market boom the wage-earners curve siphoned a great hump out of the workers own account,' he said. "When the boom broke the hump was unemployment—the boom-made jobs were gone, the painter was cut with the old status."

A second element was that as industry became mechanized, centralized and rationalized it constricted labor, and the rejects became casual.

"Further, the problem is not that all or most workers are sometimes employed and sometimes not," said Mr. Coats, "but a differentiation which is hardening into two classes—the seldom unemployed and that seldom employed. Thus the unemployed are, first, a sort of human scaffolding set aside when an expanding stage in enterprise is over; second, a series of discards as enterprise works out its operating requirements."

Real Estate Man Shot In His Car

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 29 — (AP). — Police investigated gambling alliances in Hollywood to-day in search of clues to the slayers of Weldon Irvin, 49, big-scale real estate promoter accused of felonious bookmaking.

Irvin, shot twice, was found dead in an expensive new sedan only a block from busy Hollywood Boulevard yesterday afternoon. He was scheduled to go on trial on January 9 on bookmaking charges.

Irvin was developing a land tract in Morongo Valley near Palm Springs and building a hotel at Indio, Calif. His Morongo lodge was a rendezvous for Hollywood celebrities.

Detective-Lieut. Thad Brown said it was possible the man had been killed because of underworld belief he had "talked" concerning bookmaking activities, or because he had failed to keep a promise of police protection for bookies.

Actress Suicides To End Illness

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Dec. 29—(AP).—Florence Lawrence, 52, the original "Biograph Girl" of the early day screen, was listed as a suicide in police records to-day.

Unable to regain her health, the Canadian born actress said in a farewell note, she swallowed poison yesterday at her Westbourne Drive home.

Her passing followed by a few hours the funeral of Harry Myers, once a top comedian, who died of pneumonia Christmas Day.

"I'm tired," Miss Lawrence wrote. "Hope this works. They can't cure me, so let it go at that. Lovingly, Florence."

A postscript to "Bob," a studio worker who, with his sister, shared the actress' home, said: "You've all been swell guys. Everything is yours."

Dr. Lester Laurian said he had been treating her for 18 months for a bone disease which produces anaemia and depression.

It was in 1907, 31 years ago, that Miss Lawrenec entered motion pictures. She had made her stage debut at the age of six as "Baby Flo, the Child Wonder."

Beautiful Visitor

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Dec. 29—(CP).—A cardinal, its scarlet plumage standing out against the snow, is attracting attention here. The bird, seldom seen in Ontario even in summer, has taken up residence in the backyard of Dr. M. E. Branscombe's home.

Ransom Saves British Banker Arab Torture Dress Suit Keeps Warriors Quarreling

JERUSALEM, Dec. 29 (AP)—Louis De Bouvier, British manager of the Ottoman Bank, missing since Monday, arrived here today unharmed and said an Arab band held him for ransom until friends paid for his release.

Le Bouvier, who is fluent in Arabic, brought home a "passport" assuring him of safe passage. It was signed by the widely-known Chieftain Suleiman.

Le Bouvier said his captors quarrelled over whether to shoot him but the biggest squabble was over the dress clothes found in his luggage. It ended with one Arab wearing his patent-leather shoes and another his dinner jacket and strutting before their comrades.

The amount of the ransom was not disclosed.

Second Blast Slows Mine Rescue

Hopes Dwindle 2 Men Trapped Day, Half Will Have Survived

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont., Dec. 29 —(CP).—Deep in the bowels of Lake Shore mine, rescue crews attempted during the night to dig their way through to two men trapped a day and a half by an air explosion in the big Ontario gold mine. A second, small explosion hampered rescue efforts last night.

There has been no word from the men, John Holubec, 33, and Vito Vialsevgevch, 40, since the explosion imprisoned them late Wednesday night in the stope where they were drilling. The blast, felt all over Kirkland Lake, left a heap of shattered fra[illegible] and rock blocking the men's escape.

A member of one of the four crews attempting to drill a passage to the men expressed doubt last night that they would be reached before tonight. Other rescue workers were without hope the stricken miners would be found alive.

Half-Hour Shifts

Rescue crews, working in half-hour shifts, pressed forward with still greater effort after the second blast showered them with rock. Both explosions occurred at about the same place, near the 2,700-foot level. Company officers estimated yesterday about 40 feet of rock and debris would have to be drilled to reach Holubec and Vialsevgevich.

The two miners were working in the stope, or drift, sloping upwards from the 2,700-foot level when the explosion on the level below collapsed the stope. Fellow-workers near them suffered shock and were treated after being rushed to the surface.

A complete medical staff with an ambulance maintained a tireless vigil in case the men were brought out alive. Friends and fellow-workers of the men who were not members of the rescue crew stood by in the mine office awaiting word of the rescue operations and ready to offer whatever help they could.

lone old woman at pistol-point they are capable of anything."

In the cigar store robbery, proprietor Bert Rosen and four customers were forced to lie on the floor while the three bandits went through their pockets. Rosen was robbed of $102 and another man approximately $50. Police said $148 was found on Brown when he was searched.

Police are searching for Brown's car, believed used in the Rosen store robbery. Authorities also believe a fourth man was involved and that he escaped in the car. Two guns, allegedly used by the trio, were recovered by police. A red handkerchief was found near one of the guns.

Flying Tackle Gets One.

The thugs backed from Rosen's store and fled north on foot. Brown was captured a few blocks later by Robert Stanley, a former amateur wrestler who pinioned his man with a flying tackle and held him until police arrived.

Huen jumped on the running board of an automobile driven by Julius Sokoloff, Toronto. The motorist stopped his car and grappled with the man. Ernest Kratz, a taxi-driver came to his aid and allegedly wrested a gun from Huen. Sokoloff held Huen until police arrived.

Frank Cater, a police probation officer, saw the three men get out of a car before the robbery. He was suspicious and waited in the vicinity. A few minutes later the bandits fled with occupants of the store screaming "stop thief" and "holdup."

Cater took after two men and caught up with a man alleged to be Huen and held him. An instant later a man alleged to be Brown jammed a gun into Cater's back and told him to let Huen go or he would shoot. Police probationers are not armed and Cater complied.

Cater then blew his whistle and took up the chase again. Another probationer, George Tomlin, heard the whistle and joined the posse of citizens chasing the men.

Cater was in the lead as the crowd closed in on Huen. Meanwhile, Stanley refused to give his prisoner into custody of Tomlin, dressed in nondescript clothing in line with his special duties in the downtown district. Stanley was finally persuaded that the poorly-dressed man was a police officer and turned over Brown.

Brown is alleged by police to be leader of an underworld gang who is wanted here on charges of armed robbery and for jumping a $3,000 bail warrant. He is also alleged to be wanted by Hamilton police on charges of shopbreaking.

Police said Brown escaped Dec. 14 while a companion, Frank Barnes, Hamilton, was taken into custody after a chase. Police were questioning them in connection with stolen radios as they sat in a car in downtown Toronto, when the men fled.

$2,100 Contributed Red Cross Campaign

A special meeting of the Red Cross Campaign committee was held Wednesday in the Toronto Savings and Loan office to check up on the returns of the recent campaign and confer with N. R. Vinton, field secretary of the Ontario division. Mrs. John Mills, chairman of the women workers, reported that the women's canvas was complete. D. A. Loomis, chairman of the men's workers, stated that a few more cards had yet to come in. To date $2,100 has been subscribed and with all the funds yet to come in it is expected that a total close to $2,500 will be realized.

Employees' lists circulated among the factory employees are just now beginning to come in. The Christmas holidays have interfered with their circulation but the committee urge that these lists be completed as quickly as possible and returns made. Receipts and membership cards for all those contributing one dollar or more will be mailed out in a few days.

The campaign committee passed a very hearty vote of thanks to the following for special services in the campaign:

Farmer Badly Hurt By Falling Tree

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Dec. 29.—The condition of Thomas Rose, aged South Bay resident, who was crushed beneath a falling tree near his home last week, is regarded as serious, hospital authorities announced Wednesday.

Injuries of the elderly farmer consist of a fractured spine, a broken leg and lacerations, it is reported.

Rose was assisting in the felling of a large tree near his home, and had walked to what he considered a safe distance when the tree crashed down, pinning him beneath a heavy branch.

Lad Fractures Wrist.

Bobbie Fobert, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fobert, suffered a fractured wrist, when on stepping through the door onto the verandah, he slipped and fell on the wrist, fracturing it.

Cars Tangle.

First aftermath of the gale-like wind that sprang up early yesterday came shortly after eleven o'clock when Frank Harris, Wellington garageman, suffered slight injuries after his car had been struck by a light delivery truck driven by Trueman Ferguson, near Potter's greenhouse.

According to Highway Traffic Officer Sam Ervine, who investigated the accident, Ferguson's truck caught by the strong wind, whipped sideways across the highway and crashed into the car driven by Harris, which was proceeding in a southerly direction, forcing it into the west ditch. Both vehicles were badly damaged. Ferguson was unhurt.

Snow-Tied Towns Get Supplies In By Sleighs

(By the Canadian Press.)

Cutters and sleighs traversed the county roads to-day and Provincial Highways Department snow equipment cleared the last of the heavy drifts on main traffic arteries as Ontario emerged from beneath the effects of its worst blizzard in years.

Villages in Western Ontario, cut off from principal food supplies after many feet of snow came piling down on Tuesday, were supplied with milk and bread by sleigh to-day. Only in the Owen Sound and Durham district were main highways still blocked. Villagers in the neighborhood of Orangeville said they were content to await snowploughs after bread, milk and other neecssities were brought through by sleigh yesterday.

A death toll of five, and possibly six, was counted in Ontario after the storm. Two men died at London of heart attacks suffered as high winds swept the streets and another at Toronto of injuries suffered when he fell on a city street.

Near Lucknow, 20 miles north-east of Goderich and in the heart of one of the most seriously affected areas, an unidentified man was found frozen to death on a sideroad. Fifteen miles south at Clinton, Henry J. Fremlin, 68, was reported missing after the storm, but his description did not tally with that of the man whose body was found near Lucknow.

Fear Caretaker Lost.

It was feared Fremlin, a church caretaker, might have become lost in the blinding snow and been buried in a snowdrift. At St. Mary's, another church caretaker, George Yardley, died of a heart attack, attributed to exertion in the gale.

Ontario Motor League officials were able to assure 600 persons who called by telephone yesterday at Toronto that provincial highways were being cleared rapidly. Railway schedules were bac kto normal in most parts of the province, and it was expected other forms of transportation would follow quickly. Road workers said the snow was feathery and easy to remove except in those places where drifts piled high.

As high winds dropped, Hydro-Electric power line crews were able to make repairs on breaks west of Stratford, and Wingham was the only community without regular power service to-day.

bers at work, while others showed a decrease. The increases aggregated 31,000, the decreases 24,000.

"You would expect less unemployment in the first category," he said, "but there was not. The reason was that though the numbers at work increased, the number attached to these industries increased in equal measure. Meanwhile the industries that had 24,000 fewer jobs had actually fewer unemployed because 30,000 workers got out of them —and not mainly to the increasing industries."

Race and sex had little bearing on this problem. The old were not more apt to lose their jobs, but it was harder for them, once unemployed, to get new jobs. Also, seasonality was not the bugbear it had often been painted.

It had been customary to regard labor as homogeneous, and high prices of raw products as counteracting high industrial wages during a boom. The problem had to be analyzed closely if proper remedies were to be applied. There was all the difference in the world, said Dr. Coats, between th entire working force losing two weeks a year and five per cent. of it losing a whole year. Unemployment was unsuitable for abstract theorizing in general terms. The figures he had cited showed the insufficiency of dosing the patient without looking at him.

The Situation in Canada.

Those who counselled Canada on the point of having a population of only 11,000,000 should appreciate the growth process of the Dominion. Canada's population had increased four times since 1850, but so also had the area populated.

"Our settlement proceeded in outbound rings from points which were of definite saturation," he said. "Eighty-seven inner counties out of 219 have smaller populations than 40 or 50 years ago. On top of this a city growth, likewise spreading, has worked itself out. We are told that populations do not act in that way, but ours does."

A by-product of that question was that while there were 350,000 American-born in Canada, there were 1,250,000 Canadian-born in the United States, mostly in clusters over th border. "Only," added Dr. Coats, "we don't call them Sudetens."

ARTIST PRAISED

EDMONTON—(CP). — Work of Eric Freifeld, 19, Edmonton artist who worked his way to England this year on a cattle train and boat, has been accepted by London's leading art centres. "Prelude, Vancouver," a water-color, is on display at St. Martin's School of Art, London. A London newspaper, commenting on his work said: "He has put his foot on the first rung of the ladder of fame."

UNUSUAL COURT RULING

MELBOURNE, Victoria—(CP).—Police might believe a man drunk but they were not entitled to express that opinion in court, said W Young, J.P., when he dismissed a charge of drunken driving against Archibald Henry Lee. Mr. Young said the only person entitled to express such an opinion was a doctor.

It Won't Be Long Now

And it won't be long in more ways than one, which is to say that soon all the fashionable Beau Brummels about town will be wearing the new short coat as introduced here by Cyril Mills, LEFT when brother Bernard, RIGHT, unveiled a memorial to James W. Selby in London, Eng., recently. Selby was the greatest coaching whip in British history.

20 Loyalists Downed, Rebels Boast In Greatest Dog Fight Of War

HENDAYE, France, Dec. 29—(AP)—An insurgent communique boasted today 20 government planes were shot down in the greatest air battle of the offensive into Catalonia.

Despite the aviation success, however, the insurgent land drive slowed almost to deadlock. Gains reported were of minor consequence, although in six days insurgents have claimed conquest of 380 odd square miles of territory.

The air battle was over land lines near the Albages-Borjas Blancas road, 70 miles to the west of Barcelona.

Twenty-four of General Franco's fastest fighting planes swooped down from a high altitude to a large government fleet which insurgent dispatches said consisted of 55 fighters and six bombers.

Land fighting in the area dwindled as the bombers dropped their explosives and headed for their base, leaving fast pursuit planes to fight it out.

Brief government accounts said both German and Italian planes made up the insurgent air squadron.

Troops Cheer.

While soldiers of both sides watched and cheered, the two airfleets dove, wheeled and turned, spitting death until squadron leaders of both sides ordered ships still aloft back home. At the end of the battle, insurgent dispatches said, 20 of the government planes had crashed, some of them in flames. Government dispatches said two insurgent planes were brought down in combat and that three other ships, each containing a crew of three, were shot down by anti-aircraft guns.

Despite an insurgent communique that on land "all red (government) efforts to check the impetuosity of our troops were sterile," neither official dispatches registered important gains yesterday.

Advices on both sides showed that fighting on the central and southern Lerida fronts was intense.

In the north, insurgents spent the major part of the day attacking Mt. Boada, a hill several miles north of the textile town of Artesa.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Dec. 29— (C.P.). — Futures prices scored fractional gains in quiet trading on Winnipeg wheat market to-day. Good support from outside interests and month-end covering aided the firm tone and at the close values were ¼ cent higher to unchanged, December at 61⅜, May 63⅛ and ¼ and July 63⅝ to ⅞ cents.

Only scattered export business was reported but fair support from overseas buyers and export houses led to the belief some deals may be in the making.

A firm display at Liverpool carried closing prices 1¼ to ½d higher. Buenos Aires remained unchanged in dull trading, while United States markets chalked up small advances following news of a severe cold wave in the winter wheat belt.

Canada's Baby Railway Optimistic Despite Dwindling Profits

HUNTSVILLE, Ont., Dec. 29. — (CP).—Ice and snow cover the north Muskoka lakes and the two dinkey engines and other rolling stock of the Huntsville and Lake of Bays Railway Company, the shortest railroad in the world, are laid up in the roundhouse awaiting the opening of the 1939 navigation and tourist season.

The automobile has wrought great changes in the transportation of Ontario's playground. Passengers no longer travel in large numbers over the steep portage from Lake of Bays to Peninsula Lake. But the little train, once known as the "Corkscrew Limited," makes daily trips each summer over the one-mile, narrow-gauge road.

Built in 1906 at a cost of $40,000, the road winds around huge rocks and hills, skirts a small lake and climbs an elevation of 130 feet in a half-mile from Peninsula Lake to Lake of Bays. It runs over an Indian trail that for 100 years was used by the Algonquin Indians in trading throughout the area.

Capt. George P. Marsh, operator of a passenger vessel on Lake of Bays, then known as Trading Lake, conceived the idea of a railway to link the lakes and aid travellers in making boat connections. He worked for years seeking support for his plan and lived only to make one trip over the completed line. It then was taken over by C. O. Shaw, who still retains ownership.

The Equipment

Two street cars purchased in Toronto, 150 miles south of Huntsville, make a combined passenger coach and baggage car. Two engines, brought from Hull, Que., pull the car over the steep grade on rails laid 32 years ago. There never has been an accident and no passenger ever has been injured.

In the days before the coming of the motor-car the railway paid good dividends. The passenger coach was crowded upon the arrival of every boat and as many as 150 people have crossed the portage on one train. No highways have been built around the lakes. Rail and water traffic have suffered.

The road is one of the world's transportation novelties. Many railway officials have inspected it, marvelling at the success of its operation under the difficult conditions of construction and operation as Peninsula Lake is 110 feet higher than the Lake of Bays.

Engine power fails "mighty seldom" on the 130-foot grade, says George W. Thompson, driver of the "lead" engine since 1919 and dean of H. & L. of B. employees. When it does "we back down and take another run at it and we get up."

In The Fullness Of Time

The Examiner news columns record the death of Mrs. Winnifred Elliott of this city at a time when she was nearing her 96th birthday. A picture in the paper shows her seated in a chair which seems to be comfortable, and on her head is a lace cap. Whether they are worn much now by older ladies we know not, but in this picture it seemed just the right thing.

In the story telling of the death of Mrs. Elliott it was stated she never complained, "but was ready to accept things as they were unless she could better them herself." It was also stated that those with whom she lived always found here a joy in the home and were happy to have her with them.

After looking at the picture in the paper one is convinced that the tribute paid to Mrs. Elliott is correct. There are people of that nature and the world is better for their presence and richer by reason of their memory. It is so easy to complain that the one who does not do so stands out in bold and welcome relief at times. And there is a great deal in those few words, "she accepted things as they were unless she could better them herself." Possibly these traits of character made it possible and truthful to say it was a joy to have her in the home.

Yes—old age has its place, something which all too often we fail to recognize. The ripened years may mean a lessening of physical activity but compensation comes with sweet-tempered maturity and the kindly disposition which is not readily provoked. The departure of such a valiant soul as she neared the milestone marked 96 is surely adequate exemplification of what it means to take final leave in the fullness of time.

The Better Way

Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation has forwarded $3,500 to needy teachers in Saskatchewan. The secretary of the Ontario Federation said he had cause to believe the need among the Western teachers was as great as it was a year ago.

There are a number of teachers who will share in the $3,500 and possibly not any one of them will receive a great deal, but that does not for a moment detract from the plain fact that the Ontario Federation did something which they considered needed doing.

An action such as that will do more to produce a degree of national unity in Canada than having it stated by our Premier that Ontario is the milch cow for the West. The voice of those in authority is not always the voice of the people. We prefer to think that the Teachers' Federation in sending aid to fellow teachers in Saskatchewan is giving adequate expression to the feeling of people in Ontario.

A Council Protests

Municipal councils are becoming more than ever sensitive to any situation which causes people of a community to lose their place of employment. A fair enough example of that was revealed at the last meeting of the Chatham council when it was explained that the custom of stores selling bread at a loss was causing some of the local bakers to lose their employment.

The bread is sold at a known loss at three loaves for 19 cents, and the stores know they are losing money at that price, but work on the assumption that people who come to buy bargain bread will be likely to do other shopping at the same time and take away goods at regular prices.

It may seem strange to find a city council passing resolutions on the manner in which a store conducts its business, but when it is found that local bakeries have to reduce their working staffs as a result of the cut-price selling then one can understand how it becomes the business of a city council to see what can be done about it. The council has not the power to stop the practice, but it can at least protest and forward its protest to the provincial government. And that is what was done in Chatham.

Winning By Quality

National Research laboratories in Ottawa are now equipped with X-ray machines which work readily through six inches of steel, and six inches is the width of three ordinary newspaper columns. It is claimed the equipment can see through that just as readily as a man can look through a pane of glass with the naked eye. Similar equipment exists in several plants where work is being done on airplane construction.

There was a time when the business of making planes in this country was under the handicap of suspicion. It was claimed it would be much better to import castings from Britain or United States because firms there had more experience and were known to be reliable. Our Defence Department did not want to take any risks.

The introduction of the X-ray equipment has done two things, (1) it has shown up anything which looked like a deep-seated flaw in a casting, and (2) it has now demonstrated that Canadians can make castings of quality equal to anything which has been imported. The reports from Ottawa go even farther and admit that Canadian castings are becoming superior in strength and texture to those which were previously imported. So that seems to be one way and the right way to make more work in this country—turn out a product better than that which can be imported.

May Cause a Protest

It cannot be charged against the people in England that they are wanting in a sense of humor. They seem to inherit it in a delightful and rather subtle way. Some of the coming generation are exploiting this sense in a more forceful manner, and this was done by students of University College.

They decided it was time for a demonstration of some sort, and seized upon the European custom of the dictators who are demanding that they be given territory here and there and that colonies be restored to them. The students carried a large sign on which was printed "Students Unite — Demand America."

Others carried smaller signs which said, "We Want Detroit," "Give Us Back Our Colonies," "Give Us Back America, Hanover, France, Heligoland and Corsica." There were few parts of the world which were not demanded by the student body.

It is now suggested that Hitler and Mussolini may enter protest on the plea that the English students were ridiculing them. Truth is they were.

Storms Affect Us More Now

There was snow, a cold wild and near zero readings and then the papers began to carry long stories about the storm, about the roads being blocked, about buses, cars and even snowplows sliding into ditches. In other places the centre of interest was that the power failed and the community was without lights. So it would appear that things in general must have been pretty bad.

But it is well worth taking apart a little. There have been other years when we had much worse storms in this country and the event received little notice in the papers. A gentleman was in this office today and he told of a storm some 43 years ago when roads were blocked in his district for days; out in the country there were no fences to be seen.

Things are different today. Forty-three years ago we were not travelling around in cars. Most people were walking to work then, and if they wanted to go from one community to another they took the train. So there were no stalled cars, and none of them was sliding into a ditch. So no person was getting hurt and there was really very little to report.

Same things when the power goes off in a district. Forty-three years ago there was no power to go off in most places. The lighting of rural homes was done by coal oil lamps, and in many cities by the same means or by gas. The lights did not go out because there was a heavy wind storm so once again there was nothing much to report.

It's different today because we are used to making use of highways every day in the year and we depend almost entirely on an outside agency for our power and lighting. So a storm of equal severity forty-three years ago and today would affect us a great deal more right now. And that of course is why there is so much more written about it.

The Vision Is Dwarfed

Brenda Diana Duff Frazier is 17 years old; lives in New York and is an heiress to the extent of some three or four millions of dollars. There was a party given for her to mark her "coming-out" and that of course gave reporters a chance to refer to her once more as the "No. 1 Glamour Girl" of 1938. The party cost $50,000.

It may be Brenda Frazier is fond of being called a "Glamour Girl," but a person with a sensitive nature would surely bring suit for damages against any individual who tied such a name to a girl.

Details of this remarkable party are given in generous measure. We learn there were three bars with champagne and Scotch whiskey and also a supplementary bar where there were concoctions to cure what is termed a "hangover." That is, if some of the guests got plastered they could go there and see what could be done to bring them to a state approaching respectability.

As a rule this paper has not the least objection to a person spending $50,000 because it puts that much money in circulation, and a number of people would thus get their share of it.

But that is only part of it. Brenda Frazier at 17 is little more than a child, and she is being brought up to know and realize that she is somewhat out of the ordinary. She is an heiress; she is apparently destined to have just about everything she may desire in life, and it may be she has come to the conclusion that she can use her money to purchase happiness for herself and her friends. So at the start she is self-centred.

Probably she never paused to consider the effect of her display on the people who stand in bread lines in New York or who find warmth and a degree of cheer in soup kitchens and no place else. We believe there comes a time of testing for all people, and Brenda Frazier and her folk are proving they are not large-size custodians of great wealth. Their millions are being used to place this girl separate and apart from ordinary people. An honest appreciation of the trusteeship of great wealth should cause a widening of the mental horizon and an awakening of the vision so that it will include those whose lot is cast in unpleasant places. In all kindness we must say frankly we find little or nothing at all about which to grow enthusiastic after reading about Brenda Frazier's $50,000 coming-out party.

NOTE AND COMMENT

When Mayor James Hamilton comes into his second term as chief magistrate we suppose it would be right enough to refer to him as James II.

Weather in Edmonton has been 38 below zero, but of course the people who live there always declare they do not feel the cold so it really doesn't matter.

It is well that Hitler told the folk in Germany at Christmas time that they were the happiest people in the world. Without such assurance they might have been somewhat doubtful.

Then there was the announcement made from the pulpit on Sunday that "on Tuesday evening the young people will present a play "Home They Brought Her Warrior Dead—in three parts."

The new trade agreement between Canada and United States becomes operative on Sunday next, and we bet the minister will take a crack at carrying on like that on Sunday.

There was quite a bad storm over a section of Ontario, and we notice where one paper records that "Blizzard Blows Itself Out." Fortunately human blizzards generally do the same thing.

France will pay off her $90,000,000 railway debt, but like many another nation will do it with borrowed money. So the question is—after a debt has been paid in this way is it actually paid at all?

No cabinet meeting was held at Ottawa this week because the ministers are away. Christmas and New Year holidays give them a great chance to do a lot of handshaking in the home riding without attracting too much attention or arousing suspicion.

Hon. Phillippe Roy, retiring Canadian minister to France, has been created an honorary citizen of Paris by a vote of the municipal council. The beauty of a distinction like that is that it comes at no cost to the donors and means a great deal to the recipient.

Phil Plant, heir to 15 millions, was married to his third wife in New York recently and started on a honeymoon to Africa "for a quiet time when we will hunt leopards." There used to be a saying that some people's taste is all in their mouths and it seems to apply here.

According to reports of the Ontario Department of Agriculture the value of a cow depends somewhat on where the cow lives. From Frontenac comes the news that $35 to $50 is the price for fresh milkers, and in the same bulletin the Temiskaming report says cows are in demand at prices ranging from $50 to $70.

HOUND DOG

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I can't help liking dogs I claim, of any breed or any name, they're friendly in their way; my hound has lots of common sense, and never seems to take offence, no matter what I say.

¶ If he does things I know are wrong, why I can talk at him quite strong, I think he understands; I know by looking at his eye, before I leave the house he'll try, a spell of shaking hands.

¶ And if he wants to play a bit, when I desire to rest and sit, the hound don't seem to care; he'l just lie still and look at me, and wonder when the time will be, when I will leave my chair.

¶ And if I say that he can't come, when I've an errand to be done, he'll go back home and wait; I know for certain without fail, that he'll be there to wag his tail, when I come through the gate.

¶ Nor is he picky on his meals, no matter how he looks or feels, he'll always clean his plate; he won't complain of being on time, nor will he start to yap and whine, if feeding time is late.

¶ On days when things have not gone right, and I am cranky by the night, and when I'm feeling sore; the hound don't seem to mind at all, for he will greet me in the hall—and wag his tail some more.

How We Wasted Many Millions

R. G. STEVENS of Englehart, Ont., believes it is possible for promoters to cause governments to do things for which no sound reasons exists. Writing to the Globe and Mail he presents his case:

The Hudson Bay Railway should always be remembered as one of the very best proofs of the terrible waste of our democratic form of government. Both parties at Ottawa did everything possible to prevent the construction of that road, short of sacrificing votes. Every bit of scientific data on hand at the hydrographic surveys branch showed it was impractical. The Government had all necessary information to prove the impracticability of the railway, but thanks to the Winnipeg Free Press the people were misled. Back in 1922, Premier King tried hard to tell his audience at Winnipeg that all facts were against the scheme. The Free Press scorned his efforts and tried to show them as merely side stepping. Mr. Meighen tried his best to get through the campaign without making a definite promise to build such a "white elephant," but he was assured there would be no votes in the Prairie Provinces if he did not make an unqualified promise, which he later made. This was a case where both parties had to make a definite promise to build the road or be defeated at the polls. When Government officials attempted to give the facts, which should have shown the folly of ever bringing the matter up, they were branded as trying to do the West out of a cheap route to Liverpool. The Hudson's Bay Company was asked for facts, and compiled records from its books for a hundred years back.

Exactly the same condition prevailed with regard to the extension of the Timiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway to Moosonee. Beyond Fraserdale there was no revenue in sight, and never was except in the minds of the Cochrane people. Cochrane people were repeatedly shown this fact, but they wantd the railway, and facts only hindered a start on the construction, as far as they were concerned. The writer spent a year with the hydrographic survey in James Bay in 1912. The two previous years the party, under Engineer Parizeau, had surveyed Nelson and Churchill. Captain Gusheau of Conception Bay, Newfoundland, was captain of the ship, and previously had been first mate for Bob Bartlett, with Peary. Captain Gusheau claimed it was easier to navigate a polar party than to be certain of getting a ship into the Bay anywhere near on schedule. The Government no doubt would like to build the St. Lawrence Waterway, which seems to have some merit, but it is a sure thing that they did not want to build to either Nelson, Churchill or Moosonee.

Apparently, clever leaders, with modern methods of propaganda, can force a government to spend tens of millions of dollars for projects they know to be of no benefit to the taxpayers who will foot the bills, and again, those desirous of blocking a worthy project can do so with the same methods.

Democracy is on trial. If it fails, a leader can be put in charge of affairs in the same manner as it is possible to secure the building of a railway, or the blocking of a waterway.

JEWS WHO LIVE IN TERROR.

HAROLD CALLENDER, well-known London correspondent of the New York Times, has just reached Paris after a tour of Germany and Czechoslovakia. Some of the things he is cabling to his newspaper, things which he saw with his own eyes, seem incredible; sound like a frightful nightmare.

In a South German city he called on "Mr. Z", 60 years old, a once distinguished and popular merchant, tells this:

Mr. Z's store had been locked up. He expected to get scarcely anything for it after he had paid levies of the state and the party, but that did not worry him now. He and his family would be happy to cross the frontier penniless.

"They had had a prosperous business, a house and motor cars. The family had been in Germany for centuries and had helped to endow a university, hospitals and libraries. Now they ventured into the street only to buy food. They lived like hunted animals, fearing what the next day might bring."

In another South German city Mr. Callender visited "a cultivated, middle-aged man" with a shaved head, which is the mark of the concentration camp.

"He had fought for Germany in the World War and received the Iron Cross. But he had passed a fortnight in a prison camp and upon emerging read official decrees forbidding him to wear the uniform of the nation he had served in the trenches ....When his children had written him in prison they had been obliged to address letters to 'Protective Custody Jew No. —.'"

Mr. Callender found it hard to get people to talk; there was terror everywhere. "The sound of a doorbell arouses something like panic among the Jews, for they now scarcely receive any visitors save official ones, who often bring tragic news."

"One woman was at a Government office applying for papers that might hasten the release of her husband from a concentration camp when the mayor of her village telephoned that the husband was dead and that the body would soon arrive from the camp.

"Sometimes the remains come in the form of ashes sent through the mail. There is never any explanation of the cause of death."

Mr. Callender estimates there are now 50,000 Jews in concentration camps. Others await in terror their turn; or await a worse fate; scores of thousands are preparing to flee the land, to become penniless wanderers in the world.

DOES DREW WANT HIM?

Premier Hepburn has announced that he will remove his former colleague, Mr. Arthur W. Roebuck, to the Opposition benches at the next session of the Legislature. Surely it's the height of vindictiveness to turn him over to Mr. George Drew.

Letters To The Editor

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics

WAKE UP

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—In reading the correspondents views on different subjects in your valuable paper I decided to send a few lines to you.

In my opinion the greater cause of present conditions is due to lack of public interest in the welfare of the state. Governments, municipal and those higher up, are machinery made. Retiring bodies generally arrange who their successors shall be, while the general public sit quietly back and brood over the condition of things until they become Communistic or otherwise allow the country to drift under a dictatorship.

If something could be done to arouse public interest and to allow free speech to some extent I believe it would not be too long before conditions would improve.

We have read a great deal about relief and where Mitch. Hepburn claims the unemployed consider the present an era of paternalism. Well, I would wonder what Mitch. would call it in the district where I live. None other except Liberals need apply for work on any of the government jobs.

One of your writers has said he considered that narrow-mindedness went out years ago, while in my opinion it only came in a few years ago. However, we hope the day will soon come when we can all work together for the common good of all and have the country organized along those lines.

CHRISTMAS EDITORIAL

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Permit me to congratulate you upon your Christmas editorial, which appeared in the Saturday issue. Judging by most of the leading articles on the subject of Christmas which were featured in our daily papers, to the minds of the writer the great central figure associated with this feast is Santa Claus. Now, Santa Claus was a saint who lived in the fourth century, and who used to dispense his gifts surreptitiously by shoving them in through the open windows of the homes of the poor. His name was St. Nicholas, the Latin form of which, Sanctus Nicholaus, has been abbreviated into Santa Claus.

Even the heads of our universities in their Christmas messages are beautifully vague about the reason for all this rejoicing. They make some reference to spiritual values, for which there appears to be no sanction, for one would gather from their remarks that Christmas had no objective reality, but is a mere symbol created by men to give expression to their generous impulses.

Of course the real reason for the rejoicing should be that "A Child is born to us," and the real reason for the gift giving should be that "A Son is given to us," the second person of the Blessed Trinity who was present in the stable at Bethlehem. That you should have stressed this truth is only what should be expected, but it is so rarely done in the secular press that your article deserves commendation.

Just today, I read of an amusing incident that happened in a city church. When the people were assembling on Christmas morning, the pastor discovered that the infant was not in the crib, and he immediately instituted a search for the missing bambino. It was found that a little boy was hauling it in a sleigh down the street. When apprehended he explained that he had promised that if Santa Claus brought him a new sleigh for Christmas, the first one that he would give a ride in it would be the infant Jesus. I opine that that little boy knew more about the significance of Christmas than some college professors.

DIFFERENT TIMES

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Relative to your editorial in the Dec. 27 issue "A Young Man's Problem." This young man starting out on life's journey consulted the Examiner as a means of obtaining a sound and unbiased opinion concerning his future prospects. This was frankly given by the Examiner, but as to whether the solution offered is the most advisable to follow is a matter of opinion. Evidently his parents have played their part in making him an intelligent, useful and honest citizen. Just how far these qualifications will carry the young man remains to be seen. Due to force of circumstances in the labor market the supply is outnumbering the demand; this unfortunately is detrimental to a good many seeking employment.

The young man in question has been offered work at eight dollars per week. Naturally this he refuses to accept and no doubt from the fact that it will eliminate a great deal of mathematical and hair splitting problems as to how he would get ends to meet. The Examiner backs up its courteous advice by stating there are plenty of adult men in Peterborough and every other community who did not make that much in a month when they started work. The period referred to by the Examiner, was when a dollar's worth of merchandise required the service of a truck to remove it from one place to another; now a dollar's worth of goods can be shipped to any part of Canada or the British Isles with a three cent postage stamp.

ALEX MURRAY.

• He Lends Money To the World

IT IS almost a commonplace to say that Great Britain could only stand out for a short time if her imports of food supplies and raw materials were cut off. This is repeated frequently in time of crisis, and it applies indirectly to the vital need of adequate naval protection. But even with her enormous trade, she still sells much less in goods to other nations than she buys from them. She has what the economists call an "adverse" balance of trade. How does she make up this deficit?

There are many ways in which it is met says the Hamilton Spectator. Her great shipping and other services are among them. But first of all is the immense capital investment that John Bull has placed in all parts of the world. From these investments flows the steady return of interest payments, estimated by experts at around $1,100,000,000.

In Canada for instance, Britain has some $2,750,000,000 placed. In South America she has a heavier investment.

There are huge sums in other dominions and colonies, altogether about $8,600,000,000.

In short, peoples abroad owe John Bull about $15,000,000,000 or about $300 for every Briton.

There is at present a sort of competition in foreign lending in which Germany has taken a hand. Turkey is a good example of this. And it is interesting to note some of John Bull's investments which are not so familiar outside financial circles.

Here are some of John Bull's debtors, with the amounts the governments owe him:

Russia (czarist bonds are almost worthless)	$1,500,000,000
Japan	375,000,000
Mexico	300,000,000
Turkey	210,000,000
Rumania	160,000,000
Portugal	150,000,000

It is apparent from this that Britain's commitments are of immense value in the real international sense.

• Certain He Was a Nice Man

A LADY who lives in the suburbs piled into her car her own four small children and one belonging to a neighbor. At one point, where they were stopped by a traffic light, they drew up alongside another car, the driver of which was in altercation with a motorcycle policeman. When the light changed, says the Baltimore Sun, the lady drove on. About a block farther she was suddenly whistled down by the same policeman. He said that she didn't appreciate the value of human life. She opined that she did and pointed, as proof, to the array of youngsters in the car with her. She demanded to know, also, in what manner she had broken the law.

This question suddenly quieted the policeman. "You know, lady," he said, "I believe I have made a terrible mistake. I can't explain how it happened. I was talking to that other fellow and he was so impudent that I lost my temper. I lead a terrible life. I am here to persuade people to drive safely and to save life, and all I get for it is a lot of bawling out. Sometimes I hate all automobiles and everybody who drives them. After a while I lose my head. I think I lost it when I started after you. You didn't do a thing that I can remember. I'm afraid I'm not fitted for this job."

The lady replied that she understood exactly, that no apology was necessary and that she hoped he'd have a Merry Christmas. She told me that in spite of the fright he gave her she still thought he was a nice man, and that if I told the story I should be unjust to him if I didn't make it clear that he was a nice man and in her opinion is wholly fit for his job.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

BLESSED be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ: according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love: having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved. In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace.... Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself: that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him.—Eph. 1, 3-7, 9-10.

JOE KENNEDY.

IT IS EASY to understand why Joe Kennedy is a popular Ambassador in England. He defies the notions of those who libel the English by assuming that they have the highest regard for Americans who imitate them. The truth is that their favorite Americans, aside from the film stars, are people like Joe Kennedy, who have no "side", make all sorts of natural human errors, feel terribly about them and then make some more. We live no more in the days when the faux pas of an Ambassador are likely to set off the tinder box, but a well-liked Ambassador can put in much fruitful labor in the vineyard. The present Ambassador to the Court of St. James has done a lot of it, even if he did get too close to the line in the co-operation-with-dictators speech.

Any way you take him, Joe Kennedy is a more satisfactory diplomat than the "I am afraid I cannot discuss that" variety.—Baltimore Sun.

AIR RIFLE MENACE.

CLAIMING that air rifles are "an infernal nuisance," Chief Constable Draper of Toronto asks that the sale of such weapons be prohibited. He was commenting on a wound received by a Toronto lad from the bullet of one of these guns.

Certainly air rifles are a danger, says the Windsor Star, especially in an urban municipality. The bullet carries a sufficient distance, with enough speed, to seriously wound anyone whom it might hit. There have been many serious accidents from this source.

The weapons are of no particular use, and their prohibition would not be a hardship to anyone. They are more of a menace than high-powered sling-shots. In Toronto, they can be purchased in stores, but there is a bylaw preventing their use within the city limits—a rather untenable situation. If they cannot be used, and they should not be, then there is no sense in selling them.

A Bit of Nonsense

Hard Bargain

Jones had been away for some time and when he encountered Green on his return he had quite a number of questions to ask him.

"By the way," he said, "how are you getting on with that old car you bought so cheap?"

Green looked at him sorrowfully. "Old man," he replied, "I'm learning just how hard it is to drive a bargain."

Boat Crushed In Grinding Ice Pack Scientist Drowns In Arctic

CHURCHILL, Man., Dec. 28. — (CP)—Silence cloaking the Arctic and the intrepid men who explore its frozen secrets was broken today with word that R. J. O. Bray, 28-year-old ornithologist, drowned late last September when his small boat was crushed in the ice pack.

Bray and another young English scientist, Patrick Baird, nephew of Canada's governor-general, Lord Tweedsmuir, were making a hazardous journey north from Churchill when their 29-foot craft was trapped by ice in Foxe Channel near Igloolik, island outpost off the northern tip of Melville Peninsula 200 miles within the Arctic circle.

The ornithologist, making his second trip into the Arctic as a member of the British-Canadian Arctic expedition, drowned in the cold waters but Baird managed to scramble to precarious safety on the ice and make his way over the shifting pack to Igloolik.

How Baird withstood exposure, how far he had to travel to Igloolik or whether he salvaged food or equipment from the wrecked boat were not indicated in the brief report flashed here from Repulse Bay, 600 miles north of Churchill and 250 miles southwest of Igloolik.

An Eskimo reached Repulse Bay on the west coast of Hudson Bay yesterday with word of the tragedy and his report was wirelessed here last night.

Leaves Widow, Baby.

Bray, graduate of Oxford University and clever photographer, is survived at Oak Tree House, Claygate, England, by his widow and baby daughter, born last Aug. 10, just three days before Bray and Biard set out from here for the Arctic.

The two explorers intended to establish a base for winter exploration at Igloolik and sailed from here in motor ship Therese, Roman Catholic Mission supply boat.

Heavy ice prevented the Therese from reaching the 'Lonely Island' and the vessel was forced to turn back, although Father Paul Schulte, the "flying priest," made survey flights over the ice in vain efforts to find a channel through which the boat could proceed north.

Two men travelling on the Therese to establish a Hudson Bay Company post at Igloolik abandoned that plan. But Bray and Baird unloaded their supplies and 29-foot boat on a small island, expecting to reach Igloolik alone.

Baird and Bray with G. W. Rowley, another member of the British-Canadian expedition, returend to civilization in 1937 after 18 months in the Arctic on their first trip and were returning to rejoin the 24-year-old leader of the expedition, T. H. Manning.

Rowley went north from here last autumn on the motor ship Severn as far as Repulse Bay and continued by dog team, expecting to meet Bray and Baird at Igloolik. Mowley and Baird are expected to "come out" next September.

Havelock Dance Jolly Affair

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Dec. 29 — Glowing with color and soft lights the Havelock town hall was filled to capacity Monday evening for the ninth annual Christmas ball sponsored by the Havelock Albion club. The event proved a decided success, being one of the largest dances in the club's history, with the attendance over the three hundred mark. The decorative scheme was especially elaborate and striking being carried out in appropriate Yuletide colors, red white and green. Covering the walls on either side of the auditorium were attractive mural drawings, depicting Santa, his sleigh and reindeers, cleverly done by Jack Clark, local artist and member of the club. A false ceiling effect was created with streamers running the entire length of the hall. In an ornate stage setting, delightful music was provided from 9 p.m to 2 a.m. by Jack Grant's Aces.

Lucky spot dance prizes were won at different intervals during the evening by Mrs. F. McArthur, Campbellford; Miss Reta Leeson, Peterborough; Douglas Dart, Trent River; and Don Miller, Havelock. Lunch was served at the midnight hour in the basement.

United Church Concert

The Havelock United church Sunday School held it's annual Christmas concert last Thursday evening in the church basement, with a capacity audience of pupils, parents and friends. LACROSSE HEADS TRY TO STOP CANUCK EXODUS TO CALIFORNIA

Forty Players Under Spell Of Pro Invite

TORONTO, Dec. 29. — Selfish financial motives of an erstwhile Canadian in Los Angeles and his promises, oftentimes in the past unfulfilled, of lucrative professional lacrosse contracts, has again cast nearly forty Canadian players under a magnetic spell.

The promoter in the Sunny State, a Mr. Sweeney, working through Bill Curran, veteran of Orillia teams, is said to have secured about eight players from the Ontario Lacrosse Association, while twenty from British Columbia have been approached. Those tentatively secured from this section are Bill Curran, Ernie Curran, Vern Stegall, Goaler Ted Hall of Orillia Terriers; Shipwreck Kelly from Cornwall; Freddie Hatton of Mimico; Moe Thompson from Brampton; Toar Munro, formerly of Brantford but last season with New Westminster.

Players Warned.

The California league is financed at a meagre $6,000, it is understood, and from this, unless the league is a success—and it hasn't been in the past—must come the salaries of the forty players over a ten to twelve week period. Condemning the almost annual plague from the South, the Canadian Lacrosse Association has been working frantically to protect its interests. Gene Dopp, secretary of the Ontario Lacrosse Association, has telegraphed all players he knows have been contacted to warn them of the automatic two-year suspension they will incur from the parent body in Canada. The British Columbia branch of the C.L.A. has been working in close co-operation with the Ontario group and as recently as last night Dopp was in receipt of a wire stating the players with California intent were "undecided" now about the project.

"We don't mind developing players for lacrosse in Canada," Mike Kelley, immediate past president of the C.L.A. said last night from his sick-bed. "But we do object to fostering the game for purely selfish motives of those outside of Canada. If the United States can organize its own association we'll give them all the co-operation we can."

Apart from the fact the Ontarions and those of British Columbia are openly violating their cards, which state they "cannot play in any place but Canada without the permission of the C.L.A." they are also becoming professional lacrosse players and as such unable to play in leagues here. This creates a curious situation, because professionals of any other sport can play amateur lacrosse here. Professional lacrossists, however, cannot play under the banner of the O.L.A. or C.L.A. in the accepted letter of the word.

It is understood the majority of Ontario players who may make the trek to the Sunny State are from the Cornwall Indian Reserve, and are lacrosse players of no great ability. If it were only those who weer affected, the O.L.A. would wish them god-speed. As a matter of fact, most of the eight players from this section listed above are generally recognized as being near the end of their playing days.

To the C.L.A. another unfortunate angle is that if the Los Angeles pro league operates it will clash with a series of lacrosse games planned for the San Francisco Fair in March of 1939. Selected players of Ontario and British Columbia would make the trip to San Francisco as guests of the Fair.

It is not known when the transient players will make their move from these parts, if they move at all.

Skylark Skier

Even a non-skier can become enthusiastic about the up-and-down hill sport on occasion. You may have heard this pretty miss singing on the radio at some time or other. She's Jean Dickenson, and in addition to her vocal talent, which, incidentally, she is exercising here, she does a pretty fair turn on the wooden runners.

Harness Racing Is Cancelled At Toronto "Ex"

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—Announcement that harness horse races will not be conducted at the Canadian National Exhibition next year leaves the Standard Bred Horse Society in the market for a new place to stage the annual Futurity for 3-year-old pacers and trotters.

Often referred to as Canada's Hambletonian, the Futurity is the richest prize for the youngsters of harness racing, and this year a purse of approximately $7,000 was split between the pacers and trotters.

Reason for the discontinuance of racing in conjunction with the world's greatest annual show is said to lie in the fact that a clear view of the action on the track is not afforded the spectators. Particularly is this so in the backstretch, where the scenery and trappings erected for the performances in front of the grandstand block the spectators' view.

Ultimate disposition of the Futurity will not be made until the Standard Bred Society holds its annual meeting in February. Then it will go to the highest bidder.

Among the prominent harness-racing centres said to be bidding for the Futurity are Strathroy, Stratford and London. It is reported that Strathroy already has tendered an offer of $2,200.

There is still a possibility that the Futurity will remain in Toronto, a local harness-racing official stated last night, as the Royal Ascot Club will stage a summer meeting at Dufferin Park in August, with purses ranging up to $10,000 for the four-day meet.

The Yankees have three prospects—in addition to Outfielder Tom Henrich—for Lou Gehrig's first base post, when and if the great man knocks off...One is Eddie Levy who is to play first at Newark, another is Johnny Sturm, going to Kansas City to replace Harry Davis, who is on the market, and the third is Fred Collins, a converted left-handed pitcher...If tradition means anything Collins should be the best bet.

Gehrig and the great George Sisler were left handed hurlers before they went straight....Archie San Romani, who aims to win back his position as one of America's great milers this winter, is getting plenty of help from his six-months-old daughter Amelia....She hits the hay at 7 p.m. and plays shuteye till 6 a.m. which gives papa plenty of rest, too.

Canadien Bosses Not Interfering

MONTREAL, Dec. 28.—(CP)—The shakeups that have become regular fixtures with the slumping Montreal Canadiens are through, as far as Club President Ernest Savard is concerned.

From now on, Savard announced last night, executives of the National Hockey League club intend to keep their hands off the team and let it work itself out of its cellar-place difficulties. Any player shifts will be strictly up to Manager Cecil Hart.

In Canadiens' two big slumps of the season—first a seven-game losing streak and the current six-game flop—players failing to produce have been shuffled frequently between here and New Haven of the Int.-Am. League. Savard said tonight he thought the threat of demotion had been affecting the team's play.

Canadiens will line up from now on just as they did in last night's game they lost, 4-1, to Chicago Black Hawks here, the club head declared. The veteran Armand Mondou and Rookie Marcel Tremblay, who came up from New Haven to get the lone goal last night, will stay with Habitants. Rod Lorrain and Don Willson will go to the farm team. Willson played last night, but Lorrain didn't.

Pete Lepine, veteran of more than a decade with Canadiens who is player-manager for New Haven, will not be brought up, Savard said. It had been reported here for several days the ancient "Pit," travelling at a great gait in the Int.-Am., would be recruited to strengthen the Flying Frenchmen.

Calling in Lepine would be "unfair both to himself and the New Haven club," Savard asserted.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

It is getting nearly time to don the heavy underwear, and we noticed this particularly last e'en while doing a jitterbug shake as we watched the Petes practice on ice harder than a kidnapper's heart. Nice snappy hockey weather, and the boys had a swell workout — dragging off the frozen aqua dripping plain sweat and plenty of it. They need lots of that stuff, though, as rival teams won't loaf around and wait politely till the Petes get their wind once the O.H.A. tilts begin. Coach Frank Buckland was on skates and had them going through a lot of training antics, as well as staging a game with six aside for a time. The gang practice every night at seven, except Friday when there is a junior joust. Buckland has a pretty fair idea of his team now, but there are a couple tough decisions to make yet.

* * * * * *

There are always a few chuckles to a caustic observer at a workout, and we noted some of the lads toiling with glee. Gees frinstance who had trod the primrose path in the off-season and were now toiling like Trojans to get back in a week or so what they had piffled away in several months. And o'er-heavy chaps who strove valiantly to get back the school-boy figure before the season opened. And skinny lads who conserved themselves and loafed at one end of the rink but looked positively dazzling as they swept hotly by the spot where the coach's critical eye could spot 'em! But on the whole the boys were working real hard and looking right promising. We can't at this stage crab any at the Petes' puck prospects.

* * * * * *

Some Of The Gang

Tommy Miller, local manager, was in one goal—he used to tend goal quite well here—and Gord Clarke looked after the other net. But Gord isn't fussy about playing this season, despite the fact that he is a fine cord custodian and has a fair chance of copping the job. Some of the defencemen on deck were Don Crowe, Lorne Gray, Archie Weir, Dude Brady and Bill Flack. A good forward line will be Bun Kingdon, Eddie Starr and Honey Tompkins. Other forwards noted were Joe McNulty, Shrimp McDougall, Don Coughlin and a few more. We can't recall them all, as it was too chilly to try jotting down names. Shrimp and Don were going okay, too. The team ought to get lined up shortly, and will be pretty fair again.

* * * * * *

Looking the lads over, you couldn't help recalling how sports intermingle. Miller, known as "Bing" then, swatting 'em in softball came back to your recollection. And you saw Clarke once more sprawling on the ice against the Fliers early last winter as he beat 'em in Belleville but lost the goalie job. And Don Crowe weaving through Brooklin lacrossers and hanging onto the ball despite cuts about the head and shoulders. With Weir playing first in intermediate ball and doing well, too. You remembered Flack swapping punches with Manorek of the Beachies on the gridiron. And Kingdon playing swell ball for the Petes in the Falls. Ditto Eddie Starr all through the diamond playoffs. McNulty on the grid and Shrimp mixing at the Armouries in indoor softball—we recall that—before he played for Owen Sound! Gardner, who missed this drill, tangling with Red Creighton in the ring. And so on. Yeah, it is quite a picture in the mind when ya think back on it.

Game Ala Exhibish

There will be a senior exhibition hockey fray here next Tuesday night, the Toronto Telegram playing the Petes at 8.30 o'clock. Coach George (Shirt) Ewens, Art Upper, Bob Porter, McPherson and all that gang of topnotchers—the Tely crew romping through to win the first section of their loop easily. So it should be a swell scrap for the Petes to start off with. By the way, tickets are now on sale for the Petes' first game, the idea being that those who are regular customers can get the same ducats all season. Just get in touch with Cliff Cadd, R. M. Glover, Jim Dorris or the rink.

That O.H.A. junior opener here tomorrow (Friday) e'en at 8.30 in the Brock between Lindsay and Monarchs ought to be a worthwhile number. The Monarchs will be picked tonight after their workout and Pete Vitarelli has plenty of excellent young material to pick from, husky lads who can skate fast and most of 'em with Junior City Loop experience. Morrison of Lakefield will be in goal, but the coach wont' name his starting lineup till after tonight. A big squad worked out last p.m. and showed promise. Fans can bank on plenty of action and excitement when this new junior club makes its debut against a good outfit like Lindsay—it'll also be the debut of hockey here for this winter. We look for a lively scrap and a big crowd of cash customers at the Rue Brock on the morrow.

Kinda Big Midgets

Lindsay Post says of the Midgets (who play the Monarchs): "The present indications are that defence will be stronger than last year. The two pairs, Elliot and Ferguson, Leahy and Fairbarn, are using the body a great deal more and they are a meaty rearguard. Such forwards as Cook, Brennan, English, Ellis, Owens (former Brantford junior), Charlie and Joe McDonald, Jake Wilson (an Oshawa boy), etc. Two goalies, Dutch Turner, former Oshawa player, and one o fthe Eberts boys of Lindsay. Others are out yet, too." The Midgets went a long way in playdowns last year and are tougher now.

* * * * * *

Comes an item from the Oshawa Times this morn: "We hear today that things and trouble are still brewing in the junior 'B' circles of the Lakeshore hockey clubs, and the latest rumor is that the other clubs are going to form their own loop and leave Oshawa out in the cold—with a bye. It's about time the local hockey men put the problem up to the O.H.A. and let the official body make a decision." Yes, it's true, George—in fact this six-team grouping was formed nearly two weeks ago, schedule drawn up and play opens here Friday! Oshawa was dropped 'cause that club tried to buck the majority and refused to line up in a six, seven or eight-team group. Just recall your advice to Whitby, when they were dictatorial. It's good advice.

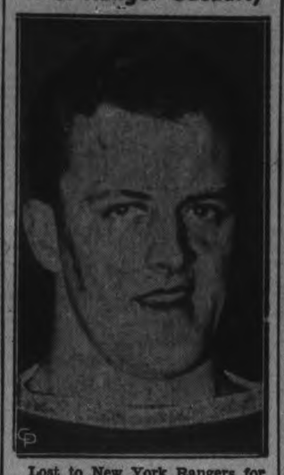
First Ranger Casualty



Lost to New York Rangers for a week or two is Lynn Patrick, above, son of Manager Lester, who underwent an operation for water on the knee. He is the season's first casualty on the Manhattan squad and his place, temporarily, is being taken by George Allen, brought up from Philadelphia Ramblers. Substitute Allen started off on the right foot by bagging two goals and an assist in his first game.

Looking Back On '38 Sports

(Can. Press)

A rugged band, St. Catharines Athletics charged their way in 1938 to the lacrosse championship in three straight games over New Westminster Adanacs, who had beaten New Westminster Salmonbellies, 1937 titlists, on their way to the final in Toronto. Athletics beat Orillia Terriers, perennial representatives of the east, in the Ontario playdowns.

Among the better individual performances during the year were Hugh (Bummer) Stirling's second successive win of the eastern football scoring championship; Frits Hanson's capture of the western scoring crown despite injuries that kept him out of the Winnipeg lineup half the season and the 1:02.4 swimming time Gord Kerr of Windsor, Ont., set for a Canadian record in the 100 yards backstroke event at the Dominion championships. Isabelle McKean, only 13, tied the senior mark of 7.8 seconds for the 60- yard dash at the women's track and field championships.

The best Canadian amateur sculler of the year was Johnny Coulson of Toronto but was no match for Joe Burk of Philadelphia, North American and Diamond Sculls champion who beat Coulson at the Canadian Henley. Bob Pearce of Hamilton, Ont., easily defended his world professional sculling title against Evans Paddon, Australian champion, in a three-mile match race at Toronto's Canadian National Exhibition.

Eyes Reveal Age

DETROIT, Dec. 29.—(CP).— The eye was termed an index revealing accurately the date of one's death in an address by Dr. Felix Bernstein to the American Statistical Association during its annual convention.

The professor of biometrics of New York University said he had worked out a formula whereby the eyes would reveal the age of a person over 40 and how long he may be expected to live.

Terry Gambling On Five Positions Especially Weak On Mound May See Giants Down In 5th Hole

By Gayle Talbot
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—(AP).—A great number of uncomplimentary things have been said and written about boss Bill Terry of the baseball Giants but from here on no man will ever accuse Bill of not being a gambler. At least, it will have to be admitted Terry is willing to play them high, wide and handsome as long as another man supplies the blue chips.

Charles Stoneham, youthful president of the Giants, is buying the chips, and he has good reason to believe in Terry's judgment. Still, after looking over the list of 30 players who have been mailed 1939 contracts by the Giants, here's one bet that Stoneham is more uneasy on than he looks.

If Terry guessed wrong, and unless he gets more breaks than the law allows, the Giants are likely as not to tumble as far down as fifth place in the national league race. They have no margin of safety.

Hubbell and Schumacher?

First, Terry is staking the works on the recovery of his two key pitchers, Carl Hubbell and Hal Schumacher, from operations on their salary arms last fall. There is no guarantee that either will be back with anything like his former ability, and the odds are prohibitive against both making the grade.

That leaves Terry with one top-notch starting pitcher. Cliff Melton, and Cliff was no ball of fire last year. The mound staff has only one new man, Manuel Salvo, who won 22 games for San Diego last season. He can't be counted upon to do that in the National League.

Next, Terry is counting on Burgess Whitehead to return after a year's convalescence from an operation and play second base like he used to. Maybe he will, but many baseball men doubt it. If he doesn't, Alex Kampouris will have to take over the job, and Alex couldn't satisfy Terry last year.

And Zeke Bonura?

The biggest gamble of all is on Zeke Bonura's ability to play first base acceptably. The Giants got the big New Orleans boy from Washington after he had been waived out of the American league. It seems impossible that eight American league managers could have been completely mistaken.

Terry is counting upon Bonura to drive in a wagon-load of runs, which he doubtless will, but men who have been playing with and against him vow that Zeke will let in an equal number of runs on balls that go whizzing past him. Zeke simply covers a minimum of territory.

In his three-cornered deal with the Cubs, Terry got Frank Demaree to play centrefield, gambling that the Californian will get his legs back in shape and shake off the slump that gripped him last season. To get him, Terry had to turn loose Hank Leiber, who for years has been the apple of president Stoneham's eye. There may be some strained relations next summer if Demaree should flop and Leiber begin pounding the ball like he did in 1935.

CURLING

By HERB MARTIN

The 1938-39 curling season got under way last evening when every available sheet of ice was occupied and many curlers were unable to play and had to be content to look through the glass.

Looking over the crowd we noticed the president, himself, the Green brothers, all of them; J. T. Braund back as large as life; the C. G. E. deputation headed by the newly elected commissioner, E. R. Shirley; Wallace Harvey; Charlie Westbrooke and Co. from the Lock Works; Jack McWilliams and the boys from the DeLaval; and a host of others from every part of the town and from every walk of life. It was just like "Old Home Week". Everybody was shaking hands with everybody else and offering each cigarettes—the Christmas kind. Just a crowd of good fellows come together for an evening's sport—and if last night's attendance is anything to go by, our advice is to get to the rink early.

We expect to have the schedule books out by tonight.

Full announcement of New Year's Day, Pres. and Vice.-Pres. will be printed in Friday's paper.

We may spring a bonspiel on Saturday afternoon. Watch for it.

Finally Gets Lost

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Pa., Dec. 29.—(AP).—To put it mildly Frank De Ganahl, White Plains N.Y., gold prospector, is exasperated with "Pete," his pet German police dog. "Pete" never once lost his bearings on trips through the wilds of Africa and British Columbia, then got lost in Bucks county woods. De Ganhl is advertising in an attempt to find the dog.

At third base Terry is putting his trust in George Myatt, who is a great base runner, but can't hit a lick and has difficulty throwing as far as first base. With Bonura on first, this latter failing will be pretty serious.

Outside of all that, Terry won't really have a thing to worry about. He has good men in catcher Harry Danning, shortstop Bill Jurges and outfielders Mel Ott and Joe Moore.

HAVELOCK WRECKERS DEFEAT NORWOOD JRS. IN FIRST GAME

Visitors Win 5 To 0 Playoff Game

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Dec. 29—The playoffs for the Kawartha Junior League hockey championship which were postponed last spring due to lack of ice, commenced last evening in the Norwood Arena, when the Havelock "Wreckers" swamped the Norwood juniors by a 5 to 0 score. Their first game of the season the locals showed good form, despite lack of practice, and won the first game in the two-out-of-three series quite easily.

Peters starred in the Havelock nets, blocking shots from every angle with an accurate eye, and more than earned his shutout.

Norwood were handicapped greatly by lack of player strength, their two defencemen, "Mickey" Puffer and "Toby" Baskin being called upon to do almost sixty minutes each.

Play went from end to end during the first half of the initial period, Aboud, Pollock and Brunton, all missing some beautiful chances for the "Wreckers," while Puffer, Norwood defence star, came close on several solo rushes. Two penalties were handed out, Innis, of Norwood going off for slashing, while McCutcheon of the "Wreckers" received his for holding, but neither team could score even with the one-man advantage. The first goal of the game came in the dying moments of the period when Haggerty, flipped the puck behind McMaster, in a wild scramble in front of the Norwood net.

Norwood Peps Up

Opening the second period, Pollock of Havelock, drew a penalty for cross-checking Baskin, and Norwood applied the pressure. Fine defensive work on the part of Voyer and Brunton, however, saved the day, and back to full strength, Havelock started a series of passing attacks which resulted finally in two goals, the first by McCutcheon on a pass from Ketchen, and the second by McMullen, with Aboud getting the assist. Tempers began to flare slightly towards the end of the period, Webb and Haggerty finally engaging in fisticuffs, Pollock also being involved, the former receiving majors and the latter a minor for their part in the fracas.

Six penalties were handed out during the last period, three to each team, and the play became very erratic in spots. Shortly after the opening whistle, however, the Wreckers notched their fourth counter of the evening, Pollock scoring when Haggerty laid out a nice pass from a scramble in the corner. The fifth and last goal came half-way through the period, McCutheon scoring his second of the evening, with Brunton getting the assist. Play was largely in the Norwood area during the latter part of the period, McMaster, their goalie, being called upon to block a regular barrage of shots.

Second Game Undecided

The date for the second game has not yet been definitely set but it is expected that the entire series will be completed by the end of next week.

The teams:

Norwood: Goal, M. McMaster; defence, B. Puffer, B. Baskin; centre, W. Webb; wings, D. Clarke, D. Bedore; alternates, G. Innis, K. Thompson, F. Gill.

Baker Banking Heavily On Hutchinson

SEATTLE, Dec. 29—(AP).—Del Baker is staking all his diamond chips on three righthanders—a $50,000 rookie, a grownup schoolboy on the comeback trail and a frail but dependable money hurler—to pitch his Detroit Tigers into the running in the American league this year.

Freddie Hutchinson, schoolboy Rowe and Tommy Bridges are the blue chips, Baker, Detroit manager, admitted while here this week to sign Hutchinson to a Detroit contract.

"We're banking heavily on Hutchinson in our pitching plans for 1939, and from what I have seen of the boy, he impresses me as being determined to go places in the fastest baseball there is," Baker said.

"Smart baseball men have told me Hutch is the best prospect to come out of the west since Joe Di Maggio. I was in the Pacific Coast league long enough to know that a pitcher must have plenty to win 25 games. When he hits over .300 and drives in almost a run a game in addition to his hurling, then he has to have plenty."

Won 25 Games

Hutchinson won 25 games and lost 7 for Seattle in the Pacific Coast league last year, and his earned run average of 2.46 was the lowest. He hit .313.

Neither Baker nor Hutchinson would disclose the figures in Hutch's contract, but the young pitcher said terms were "highly satisfactory." Detroit bought him for $50,000 and four players.

"Schoolboy Rowe and Tommy Bridges, two of the greatest pitchers in baseball a few years ago, are my hopes for the return of pitching for the Tigers," Baker continued. "I talked to both of them a few days ago and they're feeling fit. If they go, we'll be up there."

Rowe had a successful season in the Texas league last year, where he was shunted when an ailing arm dented his effectiveness. Bridges, the frail righthander, won 13 and lost 9.

Germans Are Beaten 8 To 0 By Trail

HAMBURG, Dec. 29 (CP). — Palying their third game in Germany and their fifth in Europe, Trail Smoke Eaters last night defeated a picked German hockey team here 8-0.

The British Columbia players have won all their games since they began their European tour at The Hague, December 21.

Eleven thousand spectators saw the Canadians give an exciting exhibition of fast hockey.

In the first period Trail scored five goals in fast succession. The Germans tightened up in the second period, holding the Canadians to a single goal. Two goals were scored in the third period. The German players were constantly on the defensive.

A Japanese and a Chinese clergyman presided at a Communion service in Chester Cathedral in Chester, England.

Puck Trickles Past Thompson As Seibert Scores

There are more Detroit Red Wings in this picture than there are Chicago Black Hawks, but just the same the Hawks were getting a goal. The little black disc can be seen just sliding over the goal line past Tiny Thompson, Red Wing goalie, propelled there by Earl Seibert, LEFT, Black Hawk defence star. The other Wings who couldn't do anything to prevent the score are Ebbie Goodfellow (5), Sid Howe (8) and Hec Kilrea (12). Seibert got two goals in this game, but it ended up a tie, 3-3.

Juniors Here Open Season

Peterborough's 1938-39 hockey season opens here to-morrow (Friday) evenin gat 8.30 o'clock in the Brock Street Rink when Lindsay Midgets meet the local Monarchs in an O.H.A. junior scheduled fixture. It will be the first hockey seen here this winter, and should draw a huge crowd of fans, coming just before the long New Year holiday weekend. The fans have had to wait longer than usual this winter for an O.H.A. tussle, and to-morrow night's tilt should fill the bill for them all. It promises to be a typical junior fray, wide-open, fast and exciting between two clubs that (unknown as yet) promise to be strong contenders in their six-team junior grouping this year.

Coach Pete Vitarelli of the Monarchs has picked a powerful young band of boys, many of them having played either in Junior City League ranks or O.H.A. minor company before. They are husky, fast, and with a fair amount of puck experience. This is a new club, but promises to be one of the best of the district. The Lindsay squad is generally rated about the class of this section on pre-season figuring. The Midgets made a great showing in O.H.A. playdowns this year, and have bolstered considerably since. So these youthful rivals ought to dish up a slam-bang hockey game to pry off the lid before a big crowd of home rooters to-morrow night.

Football Year A Big Success

Football enjoyed its best season in 1938 and its best Canadian Rugby Union final for the national championship. Argos won the title from Winnipeg Blue Bombers 30-7 in Toronto when Red Storey, giant halfback, put on the season's outstanding individual performance for 18,500 fans, record attendance for the game. Storey scored three touchdowns and paved the way for another as Argos roared from behind with 24 points in the last quarter.

Regina Dales made their second successive bid for the "unofficial" junior championship a successful one by beating Montreal Westmounts 4-3 in the last minute of their game at Montreal. Dales travelled more than 4,000 miles for the game, arriving in Montreal the day of the game and departing for home a few hours after winning.

And in Golf.

Americans dominated the major Canadian golf tournaments with Slammin' Sammy Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., succeeding Harry Cooper of Chicago to the open crown after a 27-hole playoff thriller with Cooper at Toronto. Ted Adams, 21-year-old school teacher from Columbia, Mo., beat Sandy Somerville of London, Ont., for the amateur championship in an extra-hole final.

But Little Joe Thompson of Hamilton, Ont., tole some of the thunder from the Americans in their own amateur tourney. The Hamilton shotmaker, after eliminating Somerville in the first round, didn't go out until the quarter-finals when Pat Abbott, Hollywood movie extra, took his measure.

Somerville and Thompson won most of the plaudits for amateur golfers and Stan Horne of Ottawa proved himself the best professional by taking his third successive P.G.A. championship. He also competed in several international tournaments with moderate success.

Oshawa Rink Wins Spiel

OSHAWA, Dec. 29. — With three wins for a total score of 20 and a plus of 4, an Oshawa rink skipped by W. J. Brownlee took down first honors in the annual Christmas bonspiel of the Oshawa Curling Club, completed shortly after midnight last night.

Second honors went to Harvey Sproule's Cobourg rink, with three wins and a score of 20. Andy Grant's Royal Canadian rink, with three wins for a score of 15, won third prize, while Stouffville's rink, skipped by M. E. Watts, took down fourth honors with a score of 13 for three wins.

Fifth prize for highest two wins went to a Hamilton Victoria rink skipped by Dr. H. E. Walkey, with a score of 16.

The bonspiel was one of the best held in recent years, with the ultimate winners not decided until the final end. Thirty rinks were entered in the competition, with players coming from every section of Southern Ontario.

Remember When—

National League baseball records for 1937, released one year ago to-day, gave Joe Medwick, St. Louis leftfielder, the circuit's most valuable player award. Medwick led league batting with a percentage of .374. He also won the fielding honors for outfielders with a .988 average and tied with Mel Ott, New York Giants, for most home runs, 31.

Goodyears Win 8th In Nine Starts Scuppering Sailors 8-1 While Oshawa Blanks Falls 4-0

(By the Canadian Press.)

The point under discussion to-day in Senior A circles of the Ontario Hockey Association was whether Toronto Goodyears were a super-team or whether they were of average senior calibre and the opposition was not.

Unbeatable in the six-team circuit this season, Goodyears added to their prowess in Toronto last night by scuppering Port Colborne Sailors 8-1 while Oshawa was blanking Niagara Falls 4-0 at Oshawa.

It was Goodyears' eighth win in nine starts and left them five points ahead of the second-place Oshawans in the standings. Oshawa tied Toronto in a game three weeks ago and since then have won four straight to climb into the second stall from fourth position.

The Goodyear powerhouse, augmented in recent games by a dazzling power play, has scored 56 times against the opposition. Only 12 tallies have found their way into the Toronto nets in nine games.

Goodyears shot seven goals against the Sailors before the visitors scored on a sortie by Lloyd Fitzgerald in the third period. Johnny O'Flaherty and Eddie King each scored twice, with Don Metz, Hank Goldup George Imlach, and Frankie O'Brien counting one each. Imlach also drew two assists.

Score 3 on Penalties.

Three Toronto goals came while Port Colborne were short-handed through penalties. Another was registered when Toronto had a player in penitence. Two of the goals were separated by only eight seconds.

Lex Chisholm, clever centre, was the hero as Oshawa outplayed the Falls. Chisholm, one of the league's leading scorers, scored three times, twice on solo efforts. The other goal was scored by Carl Maundrell late in the opening period.

The game was fast and rugged and 14 minor penalties were issued George Grigor of Niagara Falls and Doug. Maundrell of Oshawa each drew three trips to the penitence pew in the first period.

Losses left Port Colborne in fourth place in the standing with eight points and the Cataract City club in fifth position with six. Three games are scheduled for to-morrow, with Goodyears travelling to Niagara Falls, Brantford at Port Colborne, and Oshawa at St. Catharines.

Heavy falls of snow in the Pyrenees caused drifts on the Tourmalet Pass in November.

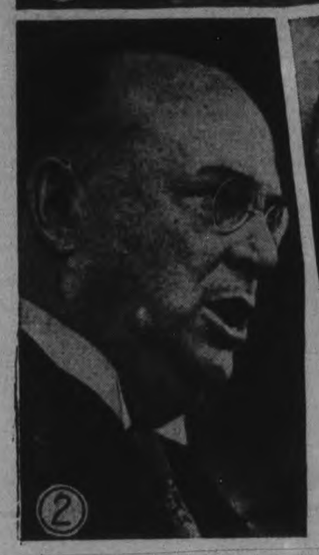
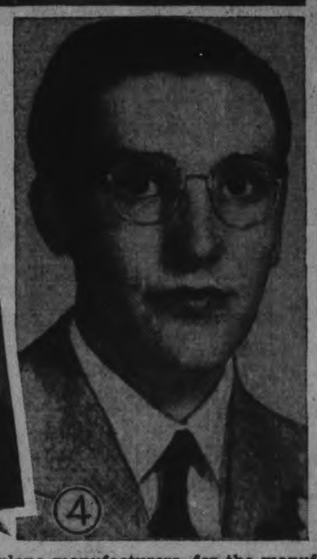
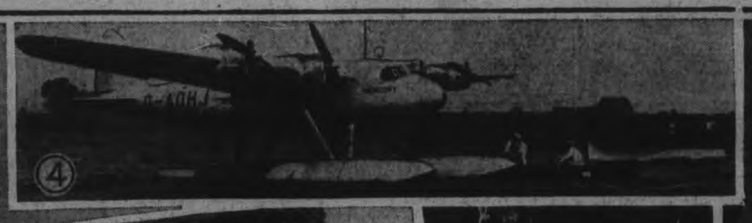
CANADIAN HEADLINES IN NEWS OF 1938 AS SHOWN IN PICTURES





News stories originating in eastern, western and northern Canada have combined to make 1938 one of the greatest news years in the history of Canada. Some of the events, interesting and affecting a large majority of Canadian people, are depicted, ABOVE, in pictorial form. 1.—Aviation in Canada made great strides in 1938 with the opening of regular airmail service between Montreal and Canada via Trans-Canada Airlines, and the awarding of contracts to Canadian airplane manufacturers, for the manufacture of bombing planes for the Royal Air Force, by the British government. 2.—With the resignation of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Canada lost one of her ablest statesmen. 3—The Conservative party acquired a new leader when Dr. R. J. Manion was elected to fill the vacancy created by Mr. Bennett's retirement. 4.—The death of Daniel G. Dodge, young heir to part of the Dodge automobile fortune and bridegroom of 13 days, who died following an explosion of dynamite at his summer home, Gore Bay, Ont. 5.—This picture of Prime Minister King and Premier Hepburn of Ontario was taken before the open warfare between the two Liberal party leaders turned them into bitter enemies. Charges that Premier Hepburn and Premier Duplessis, of Quebec, conspired to oust Rt. Hon. W. L. M. King from the Federal leadership of the Liberal party caused an open split between Provincial and Federal Liberals. 6.—Devastating forest fires, sweeping the Thunder Bay area in the vicinity of Ft. Frances, made scores of settlers homeless and caused millions of dollars worth of damage to valuable timber lands. 7.—Another bond of friendship between Canada and the United States was forged, when Prime Minister King and President Roosevelt officiated at the opening of the Thousand Islands bridge, linking Ivy Lea, Ont., with Collins landing, N.Y.



The activities of miners, churchmen, aviators and statesmen provided Canada with some of its most colorful news stories during 1938. 1.—The Yellowknife gold strike attracted Dominion-wide interest and sent scores of prospectors scurrying into the remote corners of Canada's great Northwest. 2.—The First International Eucharistic Congress ever to be held in Canada attracted more than 100,000 persons to the picturesque and historic old city of Quebec. 3.—Fire which swept the Sacred Heart College at St. Hyacinthe, Que., taking a toll of 46 lives, will go down as one of the great disasters to mar 1938. 4.—The landing of the Mercury, upper-half of the composite flying boat Maia, at Montreal after a flight from Foynes, Ireland, marked one of the year's greatest aviation feats. 5. and 6.—Twenty miners lost their lives at a mine disaster at the Princess Colliery, Sydney Mines, N.S., when a haulage cable broke and allowed a "man-rake" to hurtle down a mile-and-a-quarter incline with 250 miners aboard. 7.—The famous Niagara Falls honeymoon bridge fell victim to ice jams and was completely wrecked by giant ice blocks. 8.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King was greeted by United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull, when he arrived in Washington for the signing of the new United States-Canadian trade pact.

Lakefield Pupils Present Concert

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 29.—The Yuletide season never fails to produce a wealth of entertainment in concert form, and this year has been no exception. But no entertainment has been more keenly anticipated than the annual Christmas concert staged by the Lakefield Public school in the Memorial Hall her on Wednesday night.

The entertainment was the work of the united efforts of the public school staff who are to be congratulated on the thorough training which the pupils displayed. Vividly colored costumes lent considerably to the show.

During the evening Mabel Hopkins, winner of first prize at the recent Kiwanis spelling bee in Peterborough, was presented with a fountain pen by Trustee E. H. Northey on behalf of the Lakefield Public School Board.

Mr. F. L. Erskine, chairman of the Public School Board, acted as chairman for the evening.

The concert opened with a chorus of three songs, "My Own Canadian Home," "Bell Carol" and "Good Christian Men Rejoice," sung by pupils of Grades V, VI, VII and VIII.

"Hark the Lark" was sung by pupils of Grades V and VI and was followed by one of the highlights of the evening, a play entitled "The Babes In the Wood."

This play was by the junior pupils of the school who all took their parts well, displaying none of the stage-fright which on might expect from such youthful actors. The parts were taken as follows:

The king, Stafford Hill; the page, Jackie Richardson; the robbers, Barnardo, Bernard McFadden; Gracio, Carl Hill; the babes in the wood, Frances Erskine, Douglas Calberry; the birds, Charlie Ridpath, Billy Giraldi, Clayton Hutt, Aubrey Morrison, Freddie Abbott, Garry McCulloch; the fairy queen, Leeana Doubt; the fairies, Jean Giraldi, Lettie Wannamaker, Jean Coyle, Wanda Trude, Florence Orr, Carolyn Ann Erskine, Evelyn Spencer, Shirley Pearson.

The story of the babes in the wood was enacted complete with birds and fairies, who sang and danced most gracefully. The fairies were daintly garbed in white net and silver with the fairy queen looking particularly ethereal and altogther lovely in a filmy costume of sheerest net complete with silver crown. The birds looked very bird-like in costumes of black with red breasts and yellow beaks.

The next number, "The Children's Polka," was a graceful little dance by eight young couples from Grades IV and V. They were: Grace Millage and George Hopkins, Jean Eagleton and Morley Montgomery, Helena Giraldi and Herbie Knox, Mae Coons and Keith Montgomery, Clarina Foster and Jack Hudson, Mary Elizabeth Hamblin and Bob Eagleton, Winnie Orr and John David Grylls and Jessie Wong and Jack Chittick.

The second big play was entitled "Santa Claus Is Late" and gave an account of the efforts of certain courties to keep their king amused. This provided opportunity for a large number of pupils to display dramatic and musical talent. The cast included:

The children entered into the spirit of this play with enthusiasm and all performed so creditably that it is impossible to single out any of the performers. Jean Millar, with her considerable stage expereince put on an extra good exhibition of tap dancing and looked lovely in a court dress of palest pink satin, with train. Ralph Millage as court jester, livened up the performance considerably with his antics—and best of all Santa Claus arrived just in time to save the necks of King Colter's lords, whose execution was about to turn the delightful little play into a tragedy.

MORE ABOUT— Conant Plans

aside for recreation it would develop a greater community interest and spirit among the men employed at the mines, because the sport centre would be a common meeting ground for all section of the camp."

Mr. Conant said the situation in the mining country was "fairly common throughout the province due to the fact that many of our working people have no time or opportunity for recreation during the week."

The delegation, included members of church bodies, the Salvation Army, the Retail Merchants' Association of Ontario and the Toronto Trades and Labor council. It asked that the Lord's Day Act of 1906 be enforced "reasonably, sanely, consistently and on a province-wide basis"; that the provincial government seek repeal of the Dominion Lord's Day Act of 1845; and that the government make continued efforts to preserve one day's rest in seven."

Mr. Conant said he agreed with the deputation's claim there should be one day's rest in seven.

No Time Off?

"I am surprised at what one of your delegation says—that there are firms in Toronto where employees are not given one day's rest in seven," the Attorney-General said. "I intend to make further investigations."

Mr. Conant said, in reply to a request from the delegation, that it would be impossible to have Provincial Police patrol municipalities to enforce Sunday legislation.

"Imagine what the city of Toronto would think if Provincial Police undertook to enforce certain laws there," he said.

"We are all interested in the welfare of our people," Mr. Conant went on. "We approach it from different angles, that's all. We are in agreement on the obsoleteness of th law of 1845 and will take into consideration what should be done about it. As for your stand that the laws on our statute books should be respected, we are in agreement with that. It's the most important thing to-day—respect for law. We will see that the laws are enforced fairly and impartially."

OBITUARY

THOMAS MORGAN.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BONARLAW, Ont., Dec. 29.—Thomas Morgan, a well known and respected resident of Springbrook, passed away Tuesday evening in the General Hospital, Belleville, following an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Morgan was taken ill on Thursday of last week but thought at first he was suffering from a cold. When admitted to hospital, however, the appendix was ruptured.

The deceased was an attendant of St. Mark's church and a member of Marmora Lodge, A.F. & A.M. No. 222. The funeral will be held on Friday under Masonic auspices.

CHARLES RICHARD HOLLAND

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Dec. 29.—The death occurred in Coe Hill Red Cross Hospital of Charles Richard Holland, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holland. He leaves to mourn his loss his aged grandmother, Mrs. S. Holland of Coe Hill; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holland, besides four brothers and three sisters, all at home.

JOHN THOMPSON

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Dec. 29.—At Fort Worth, Texas, on Tuesday, John Thompson, a former resident of Madoc, died instantly as the result of a heart attack. The announcement of his sudden passing was a great shock to his many friends and acquaintances in this district.

The late John Thompson was born sixty years ago in Madoc township, his parents being Mrs. Thompson and the late Archie Thompson. When a young man, he taught school for a time and in the year 1906, he went to Winnipeg, where he entered the real estate business. In the year 1911, he left Winnipeg and went to reside in Fort Worth, Texas, where he engaged in the oil producing business.

During the time, he lived in the Madoc district he was popular with many friends and held a high place in the regard of all residents in the community. In religion, he was a member of the Methodist Church and was active in church work. At Fort Worth, he continued his activity in the Methodist Church and as a business man and a citizen he was held in high esteem. About six weeks ago he visited in this district, to attend the funeral of his brother, the late Charles Thompson and at that time he was apparently in excellent health.

Surviving him are his widow; one adopted daughter, Betty Joy; his mother, Mrs. Archie Thompson, Madoc; two brothers, Mr. Stanley Thompson of Fort Worth, Texas; and Mr. Percy Thompson of Edmonton, Alberta; two sisters, Mrs. Simeon (Ida) Ashley, of Madoc; and Mrs. (Rev.) Stanley (Tillie) Morton, Brockville.

Three Contesting Burleigh Reeveship

A three cornered fight for the reeveship of the Burleigh-Anstruther section has developed since Reeve Roy Brown, veteran campaigner announced his retirement. The three men who qualified, Norman Lean, Herbert Tucker and Norman Bolton, have marshalled their forces for a warm battle.

Five of the six nominated for council qualified, making an election for the four council seats. Those contesting are Vernal Windsor, Archie Wilson, Joe Church, Louis Blackwell and William Staples.

Madoc Township To Have Election

TWEED, Dec. 29. — In Madoc township, Reeve James Nickle, who has carried the municipal flag for the past four years, and who has received acclamations over that period of time, is faced with what is said to be a stiff battle. Opposing him for the reeveship is Benjamin Miller. Six councillors have announced their intention of contesting the four seats that surround the council chamber. These include, Messrs. Fred Sager, Fred Moocroft, John Gawley, John McCoy, Albert Caskey, John Chambers.

Contest in Sidney.

In the Township of Sidney, John Bush, 1938 reeve, will be opposed by the veteran Byron O. Lott. Clem H. Ketcheson, 1938 deputy reeve, will find opposition in Samuel Nicholson. The council, however, was re-elected by acclamation, when S. Dunford, B. Bleecker and Fred Wilson alone qualified.

ROYAL CATTLE SOLD

WINDSOR, England—(CP).—Owing to foot-and-mouth disease restrictions the King's cattle from the royal farms here, which should have been sold at Slough Chirstmas cattle show, had to be disposed of at Windsor Castle. Total realized was $8.175.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

Jabs and Jottings as Picked Up By Examiner Reporters.

10.30 SATURDAY NIGHT.

The night before New Year's falling on Saturday this year, the stores will remain open until 10.30 p.m.

BANK CLEARINGS.

A slight decrease in bank clearings was noted today for the past week as compared with the same week one year ago. Clearings today totalled $470,650 and for the same period in 1938 they totalled $494,919.

ALDERMAN JUBY BETTER.

Many friends of Alderman Jim Juby will be glad to know that Alderman Jim is showing slow but steady improvement. He has been able to be out of bed this week for short periods and will soon be well on his way to complete recovery.

COTTONTAILS PLENTIFUL.

A maze of tracks in the snow in backyards this week indicates that the cottontail population within the city limits has not dropped any since last winter. The rodents are a nuisance in that they gnaw the bark from young apple trees, other fruit trees and sometimes even attack rose bushes.

ACTION DEFERRED

A letter from Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., to the police commission suggesting a revision of the junk dealers' bylaw which he pointed out had been passed in 1906 was held over until the next meeting when the communication was read at Wednesday's meeting of the Commission.

CASH BONUS PAID

D. J. Fitzgerald, manager of Zeller's store in this city, announces that in keeping with the company's usual practice, cash bonuses were given to the store's staff for Christmas. Bonuses were also distributed in the company's twenty-three other stores throughout the Dominion, making a total of approximately $8,000.

IT COSTS MORE

It's a trifle more expensive to get drunk in North Monaghan than to over-indulge within the city limits, an Ashburnham youth discovered, to his sorrow, in police court this morning. Arrested Wednesday night by Constable Bruce Menzies, he pleaded guilty today and found himself fined $10 and $6.50 costs—two dollars more than the usual city level.

BUILDING CONTINUES.

December has not slowed the building industry to any great extent as the building file at the city hall shows permits for four new homes and alterations to the Royal theatre for a total close to $30,000. One supply man reported to-day that he has twelve new homes lined up for the Spring of 1939, another indication that the building is likely to boom.

A PRIZED CARD

Sergt. T. Miller, seven years with the Scots Guards, has received a Christmas card which he prizes highly, coming as it did from the Earl of Stair, K.T., D.S.O., and addressed in his hand to "an old comrade." The cover of the card is tied with the regimental colors, red and royal blue and also bears the regimental badge of the Scots Guard. Inside there is a reproduction of a famous painting showing the regiment in review.

BILL STEER IMPROVING.

Coffee Club patrons were pleased to hear this morning that Bill Steer, one of the regulars, was showing steady improvement at Nicholls Hospital. He underwent an operation on Monday of this week.

TRAVELLED LONG DISTANCE.

Probably the greatest distance travelled by any Yuletide turkey has been received by Mrs. D. White, 319 Burnham street. It came from her brother, George White, from Northern Alberta and was in perfect condition on arrival.

HIDDEN TREASURE.

George Martin, has found hundreds of articles under the seats of cars which have arrived at his place of business to be wrecked, but recently he made a discovery that tops the list. Cleverly hidden under the upholstery in the back seat of a sedan car he found a copper tank which had a one gallon capacity and attached to the tank was a small tap which protruded through the upholstery near the front of the car. There was a strong odor of whiskey still lingering in the tank.

BOTH CARS SUFFER

Cars owned by A. E. Cauley, 510 Homewood avenue, and Frank Clarke, Port Hope were damaged on Charlotte street, Wednesday in a traffic clash. Cauley driving east had stopped for a red light and Clarke, going in the same direction, found it impossible to stop his machine on the icy surface of the road in time to prevent contact with the Cauley automobile. The rear bumper, of Cauley's car was broken and the left fender, tail light and license bracket damaged while Clarke's windshield and right headlight were broken and the radiator damaged.

CAUSE OF RETIREMENT.

Because the man who nominated him was not a ratepayer of the township, Councillor Charles Flynn's nomination was invalidated, and Reeve Wallace Shearer was re-elected Reeve of Harvey Township by acclamation. Mr. Flynn's personal qualifications were in order, and he has been a member of the council for six years, but during the hour of receiving nominations it was not noticed that Mr. Flynn's proposer was not a taxpayer of the township, although he lives in it. When this fact was noticed, Mr. Flynn decided to withdraw from both the reeveship and council fields.

Marmora Man Is Remanded

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Dec. 29 (CP).—Isaac Neal, 50, of Marmora, was remanded a week today on a charge of attempted murder. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan changed the charge from one of assault causing grievous bodily harm.

Neal was arrested after an attack on Lum Lung, Chinese restaurant proprietor of Marmora. The Chinese was struck on the face and head seven times with a hammer. He was seriously injured.

Church Laymen Plan Banquet

A meeting of laymen and ministers from the various churches of the city was held last night in the Y.M.C.A. to consider the project of holding a union meeting of the men's associations and the churches of Peterborough during the month of January.

Ken Kingston, president of St. Andrew's men's association, presided and R. M. Hardie acted as secretary in place of Ross Thompson, who is absent from the city. It was decided to hold a united supper meeting of men on Monday, January 16, at the Y.M.C.A. at 6.15 o'clock, tickets to cost 25 cents.

Rev. J. R. Mutchmoor, M.A., B.D., of Toronto, an expert on social questions, will be the guest speaker, his subject to be "The church and social reform." A representative committee was appointed to arrange the details of the program, and consisted of the chairman, Ken Kingston, R. Mills, Dr. J. J. Craig, and Rev. R. T. Brain, M.A.

The usual toast to the King and Canada will be proposed by speakers from different churches, also solos and community singing will be heard. A committee composed of D. T. Crawford, C. S. Roper, R. Lewis, and W. P. Hetherington was appointed to make arrangements for the supper.

The purpose of the meeting will be to enable the men from the churches of the city, especially the younger men, to meet one another in a social way and to give inspiration in undertaking the tasks of the church in the coming year.

This is the first attempt of its kind in the city and the committee felt that with the co-operation of the officers of the association it can be made a real success. Ministers and laymen of congregations outside the city will be cordially welcomed.

Five Seeking Election To Lindsay Council

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Dec. 29. — This town will see a municipal election next Monday. Contrary to expectations five candidates qualified for four vacancies on the Council, much to the surprise of the citizens, who expected to save the money required to stage an election. M. E. Dickerson, who for the past few weeks, advertised his candidature for the local Hydro Board, withdrew his name and qualified as a candidate for the Council. The other four candidates are members of this year's Council.

Break Fish and Game Act.

Four men appeared in Police Court on Wednesday on charges of breaking the Game and Fisheries Act. A resident of Lindsay and a companion from Burnt River were charged with hunting deer in Somerville Township during the closed season, and were fined $20.00 and costs. An Eldon Township resident was fined $10.00 and costs, for trapping without a licence. An Ops Township man was assessed a similar amount for planting snares for foxes, which is strictly prohibited in Victoria County.

Reckless Driver.

Clifford Anstey, of Burnt River, faced Magistrate Gee, charged with reckless driving, failing to return to the scene of an accident, and driving without a permit. The accused crashed into a car driven by E. Voicey, of Eagle Lake, near Coboconk, on the week-end. Anstey failed to stop following the crash, so police state. The Voicey car is badly damaged. The accused was remanded.

Car Struck by Train.

Three Mariposa men, C. Barr, R. Rich, and H. Heatlie, had a narrow escape from serious injury when their car was struck by a C.N.R. train at Mariposa Station. They were carried along the track for some distance, but, strange to say, none of them were seriously injured. The car was badly damaged. Poor visibility as a result of the storm was responsible for the accident.

Contest in Ops.

Ops Township will witness a red hot contest next Monday. Four aspirants for the Reeveship are in the field — T. Hutton, Reeve W. Reeds, T. H. Reeds, and G. Byrnell. Five qualified for the Council, with four to be elected. Charles Logan wa seelcted Reeve of Verulam by acclamation, and there will be a contest for Council.

G. Donoghue, of Peterborough, was fined $10.00, and costs, by Magistrate Gee for failing to signal when turning left on an intersection in the town of Lindsay. The charge was laid followniig an accident when the accused, driving a truck, struck a car driven by Frank Moore, town.

V. O'Neill of Emily Township was given a year's suspended sentence by Magistrate Gee on a charge of common assault. The offence is alleged to have been committed at North Ops Amusement Hall, when the operator, W. Clarke, was struck by the accused after he had been refused admittance.

Healey Sentenced To Two Months

Two months in the county jail was the sentence imposed this morning in police court by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., upon John Healey, convicted last week of stealing cordwood from H. W. German, owner of a wood camp in Harvey township.

Sentence had been deferred until this morning in order that an investigation might be made into Healey's past. It was found that there were several previous convictions, the last in 1933.

"Owners of wood lots must be protected against this sort of thing," Magistrate Langley remarked. "They cannot keep men watching their property all the time."

A sentence of two months was imposed, to date from December 20.

Kinmount Man

Claiming that he had just arrived in town from Lindsay by bus Wednesday evening, a Kinmount man, charged in police court this morning with having been drunk last night, vehemently pleaded not guilty.

"I was as sober as you are now," he told the Magistrate. "I hadn't been home for Christmas for seven years and as I missed again this year I decided to go home to spend New Year's and was on my way."

The police were not ready to go ahead with the case today as the witnesses were off duty so the accused was remanded until tomorrow.

"I'll make the bail $100 so you can get out if some one will put it up for you," said Magistrate Langley.

"You made her high enough," protested the Kinmount man, who went on to inform the court that he thought he could arrange the bail by wire.

His arrest Wednesday night followed a complaint from a local restaurant as to the man's actions.

Loretta Stands By Him

William P. Buckner is pictured in Hollywood with Loretta Young, screen actress. Buckner, accused in New York of defrauding investors in a $1,000,000 Philippine railway bonds case, was given court permission to go to California on a two-week business trip. While denying they would announce their engagement at this time, Miss Young said her feelings for Buckner had not been changed by the charges against him.

Campbellford Couples Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversaries

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 29. — In a dining-room beautifully decorated with red roses and yellow chrysanthemums twenty guests were seated around the dinner table to honor Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hume, who celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Following the dinner, T. J. Hume, the older son, spoke briefly, wishing his parents continued health and happiness, and then called upon his daughter Phyllis, who presented her grandparents with a gold and yellow reversible blanket, on behalf of their sons and daughters. Alexander Hume, the groom of fifty years ago, replied, recalling the rainy December evening he took Jennie Mather to be his wife, and the many changes which had transpired in those fifty years, particularly the added comforts and conveniences of home life. Following this all of the adults present were called upon to say a few words.

Message and wires of congratulation were read from J. P. Hume, Mrs. Charles Rannie, the Official Board of Seymour charge of the United Church, Stephens' United Church, the ratepayers of Seymour Township, the officers and directors of the Seymour Agricultural Society, and others.

Among those present were Miss Elsie Hume, Mrs. R. Hume of Cobourg, Miss Annie I. Hume, Windsor, Rev. and Mrs. Hugh Shaw of Menie, Mr. and Mrs. William Rannie, Campbellford, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hume, Miss Alice Hume, and T. J. Hume.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 29. — Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Clarke, Front Street, received congratulations from friends and relatives on Christmas Day, which was the occasion of their fiftieth wedding anniversary. The day was marked by a celebration at the home of their son James Clarke in Seymour West, when a large number of friends and relatives were present. On Monday the celebration was continued at their own home in Campbellford, which was appropriately decorated with flowers for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Clarke received many lovely gifts, including a floor lamp from their former neighbors in Seymour West, and table lamps and other items from their friends in town.

Mrs. Clarke, whose maiden name was Jean Todd, became the bride of Mr. Clarke at the Presbyterian manse here in 1888 when the Rev. John Hay was pastor. From that time on they resided in Seymour West. Mrs. Ellen Clark, a sister-in-law, 84 years of age, was the only one present who had attended the wedding fifty years ago.

Edmonton Warmer At 32 Below Zero

WINNIPEG, Dec. 29.— (CP).—Bitter Arctic winds spread across the prairies to-day, fifth day of the current cold wave. No relief was forecast.

Far below zero temperatures were recorded as the icy winds whipped in from the north. And from the previous 24-hour forecast of "decidedly cold" the weather forecaster changed to "very cold" his prediction for to-day.

Storm deaths totalled two, both men, who died in the Christmas eve blizzard, the start of the present cold snap. The storm claimed the life of J. O. Johnson, found dead near Hanley, Sask. W. H. Fraser, 50, died near Nanton, Alta. His body was found in a snowdrift Christmas Day.

Edmonton, which held the all-Canada record of an official 44 below zero and an unofficial of minus 55 yesterday, was "a bit warmer." The official temperature was 32 below in Alberta's capital last night. The Winnipeg minimum was 24 and Prince Albert in Saskatchewan's cold spot at 42.

It was cold in British Columbia as highway workers sought to keep roadways open after a heavy snow and sleet storm. At Prince George the low reading was 38 below.

Australia now has 1,371 motion picture theatres with 1,100,000 seats.

Financial Statement Of City Commended By Thomas Bradshaw

Commendation of Mayor Hamilton's financial review as published in the Examiner a short time ago has come unexpectedly from Thomas Bradshaw, president of the North American Life Assurance Company, and former treasurer of the city of Toronto. The letter follows:

Toronto, December 24, 1938

Mayor James Hamilton,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mr. Mayor:

I have just received a copy of the Examiner of December 20 containing your statement of the affairs of the city of Peterborough for the years 1938.

"First let me say how much I am sure the ratepayers of your municipality must appreciate the publication of the simple, direct statement which you have made, dealing with the essential facts of the year's operations of your city. So often it happens that the record of the municipality is presented in such an unattractive form and which is difficult for the ordinary citizen to follow that it is rarely read and very seldom understood. The statement you have presented is in very great contrast to this.

"It is gratifying to note the progress which you have made during the year, the improvement in tax payments, in your borrowings, reduction in debenture debt and in several other essential matters mentioned. Unfortunately your relief expenditures have increased, but this I think is generally the case in fairly populous communities.

"With all good wishes for Christmas and the New Year, believe me to remain,

Yours sincerely,
T. Bradshaw.

No one at the city hall today had any idea who forwarded the copy of the Examiner to Mr. Bradshaw, but his letter created a pleasant impression as an independent opinion of the council's administration of the city's affairs.

Lonely Settler Is Pleased With Old Organ

An old reed organ that has gathered dust in the backshed of a Peterborough home for many years has brought happiness to a lonely settler in the Rainy River district.

On Christmas day the 65 year old settler sat in his new cabin home nestling in the snow 20 miles from Fort Francis in the section devastated by forest fires last September and with tears in his eyes and a prayer on his lips for the person who so kindly donated the organ, played Christmas carols. The hushed melodies were food for his music hungry soul and he sat alone thoroughly content, with a dog lying near the stove and perhaps a few wondering snowshoe rabbits in the snow outside as his only audience.

This in brief is the happy ending to a near tragic tale but the story had its beginning last September when the forest fire whipped across the entire Rainy River district, and the settler living alone made a futile effort to save his beloved musical instrument, then rushed from the cabin only to collapse from a heart attack a few hundred yards from his humble cabin. The fire levelled the cabin and with it went the organ and all his worldly possessions. He escaped and was found lying unconscious by rescue workers a few hours later, and revived.

Burned In Fire.

On November 25th N. R. Vinton of the Canadian Red Cross addressing a group of Red Cross workers from the local branch told the pathetic tale and remarked on how the man was grief stricken because the old reed organ had been burned. At that time a story was written in the Examiner and an appeal made to the readers to donate another organ.

When Vinton returned to the burned area on November 28th he told the committee there that an appeal had been made in Peterborough and he was confident a reed organ would be donated.

Days passed and none came and finally the old settler arrived in Fort Francis and made enquiries at the depot to determine if an organ had been shipped. That same morning Mr. Vinton received a letter from Alderman R. M. Glover telling that two organs were being shipped by freight. The question now was whether the shipment would arrive in time for Christmas, but on December 20th the station agent notified the committee that the organs had arrived. The settler was notified and arrived the next day to make his choice.

Talented Organist.

Describing the scene when the musician arrived to an Examiner reporter this morning Mr. Vinton said the old fellow was speechless as he brushed his hands gently across the keys of both instruments. Both were in a remarkably fine state of repair. Soon he sat down in the committee room and started to play, and it was quite evident the man was a talented organist. In a short time all the Red Cross staff, even to the office girl had gathered round and the sound of Christmas carols echoed down the main street. A prominent organist of Fort Francis who was passing came in and later invited the man to play the organ in the church on any Sunday he happened to be in the settlement.

Arrangements were completed by the committee to transport the organ to the cabin 20 miles out in the country on the edge of the burned over area, and on Christmas Day, the Peterborough organ was the one thing that made Christmas a happy day for the fine old man.

"No single feature of the entire rehabilitation program in the Rainy River district has caused as much favorable comment as the gift and delivery of this musical instrument" said Mr. Vinton. He added that the settler is a beloved character, and a courtly man of good breeding. Besides he is an Oxford graduate and why he buried himself in the Canadian wilds is one of the many mysteries in the Rainy River district.

Another reed organ which was donated at the same time will be given to one of the schools or else placed in one of the community halls when they are built.

The Red Cross built the settler a new cabin, furnished it, gave him new clothes and sufficient food to tide him over until the spring again, but all of these physical requirements were as nothing compared to the old man's yearning for the beloved musical instrument. So the Red Cross branch in this city and the person who donated the organ can take full credit for bringing genuine happiness to a cultured old man who loves music.

$2,500 Stolen Daily Around Detroit By Drug Addicts

Detroit, Dec. 29 (CP)

INSANITY decreased during depression times but the number of persons committing suicide increased, Dr. Ernest R. Mowrer of Northwestern University has discovered. He informed the criminology section of the American Sociological Society in session here today of recent studies of the by-products of depressions.

Professor Edward C. Jandy of Wayne University reported drug addicts make up the worst class of thieves. He said the 500 criminal drug addicts in Detroit steal $2,500 a day to help buy $3,000 worth of drugs they need a day.

Harold Albert Visitor To City

One of Peterborough's most interesting Christmas guests left today for Hollywood, via Toronto, Chicago and Arizona. He is Harold A. Albert, the distinguished London author and traveller, who has been spending the holiday with his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Evans, of Lansdowne street.

Mr. Albert is at present engaged in a tour of the American continent and writing of his experiences in the English newspapers, the Sunday Sun and Sunday Mercury. He has already written a special article on his experiences in Peterborough.

"My chief impression has been one of prosperity and expansion," he told our representative today, "it is certainly one of the towns the King and Queen should not miss on their visit next year, and I intend to raise the matter in official quarters in England."

Author of "Cafe People" and other books, Mr. Albert is one of the leading members of the younger generation of British authors. In Hollywood, he is to tour the studios and will meet such stars as Mickey Rooney, Joan Crawford, Martha Raye and Clark Gable.

"Breakfast with Claudette Colbert," he said, "is one of my most intriguing coming assignments."

Mrs. Albert was formerly Miss Winnifred Evans. Married in Paris in 1932, they have since toured practically every country in Europe and in the past twelve months alone have visited Norway, Sweden, Denmark, France, Switzerland and Italy.

School Trustees Are Re-appointed

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Dec. 29. — Annual meetings of school boards in Hastings and district were held yesterday. In a good many cases trustees were re-appointed for the current year.

Brickly Separate School

Officers: J. L. Doherty, chairman and secretary, Thomas Convey, Patrick Jones and Daniel Coveny. The financial report showed a creditable balance. Plans were discussed for redecoration of the interior of the school this coming year. Painting will be done and new household science cases built. About $125 was spent on the exterior this past summer.

Hastings Public School

All officers remain the same for 1939. They are Sidney Spooner, William West, Henry McMillan, John C. Wilson, A. B. Smith and Arthur Fleming.

Hastings Separate School

John F. Jones was retiring trustee and J. L. Doherty was elected for the vacancy. Other trustees re-elected were: Father P. Costello, M. A. O'Shea, Bart Crowley, T. A. Coughlan, David Walsh.

Two New Cars Ordered For City Police

Peterborough's police department will be equipped with two new automobiles for 1939 as the result of the decision of the Board of Police Commissioners at the regular monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon to purchase new cars and turn in the present rolling stock of the department.

Tenders were received from Gillespie's, Lillico Motors, Howson Motors, Hood and Cumming, Foley and Wilson, C. H. Elliott, J. K. Hughes and J. J. Duffus Company.

After the various offers had been considered it was moved by Judge Smoke, chairman of the Commission, and seconded by Magistrate E. A. Gee that a Nash-Lafayette four-door sedan, specially equipped with a conditioner air unit be purchased from Foley and Wilson at a price of $1196 less the turn-in price of $675 on the Chrysler Royal car now owned by the department and a 1939 Pontiac Arrow sedan be purchased from J. J. Duffus Company by turning in the department's Plymouth and paying in cash a sum not in excess or $250.

The motion was carried. A surplus of over $800 left from this year's appropriation of $29,825 will finance the car deal.

Bylaw Is Ready

At long last the tax bylaw is now ready to be put through its final stages. The way was cleared at Wednesday's meeting when the commission decided to abandon the compulsory insurance clause which has been a stumbling block to the passing of the measure. The decision to scrap that feature for the present was facilitated by the announcement that none of the cities from which City Clerk Armstrong had heard in regard to taxi bylaws had compulsory insurance for taxis.

"I am still of the same mind as I was before that taxis should carry insurance," said Judge Smoke, "but to allow the bylaw to pass and to obtain reasonable control of taxis I am willing to waive the matter for the present."

Magistrate Gee and Mayor James Hamilton expressed similar views and with the dropping of compulsory insurance the measure is now ready for final revision and passing.

CHAPTER 37

A FOREIGNER placed suddenly on Main street of Houston, Texas, on this December night, would surely have said that civil war had come to America. Bedlam broke loose about sundown. At 7 p. m. a mob had assembled at Main and Lamar streets and, urged on by the most excited and skilled of agitators, had started an invincible march.

Four abreast, the mobsters stormed down Main street, in the very heart of town. The noise they made was deafening. They literally overwhelmed everything that opposed them. Automobile traffic came to a standstill. Gentler citizens stared in awe, and not a few were openly fearful. The police were helpless, and wisely made no attempt to stop or even to control the mob; on the contrary, a few officers actually aided the marching women and men.

The mob was not intent on defying any government or storming any bastile, but simply on letting the entire universe know that Rice Institute had defeated the University of Mexico in the big international football game. They verified what the extra editions of newspapers and the radio announcers were proclaiming.

They wanted the world to know that one Mr. Robert Osborne Towne, Rice end, had speared a lateral pass with one hand, stiff-armed two tacklers, shaken off two more, and galloped 35 yards to earn the only six points scored on Rice field that afternoon.

The mob included every physically able person, including janitors and cooks and gardeners who had anything to do with Rice at all. Beaming like the benign old president that he was, even Dr. E. O. Lovett was in the downtown throng. The old gentleman was immensely happy to see his collegians so exhuberant; secretly he yearned a little for his own youth, wishing that he, too, might turn handsprings on Main street. He felt his pluse quicken when "Yea-a-a-a-Rice!" reverberated like collegiate thunder among the downtown buildings.

Thornton Holgate, caught in the rush to town after the game was over, found himself hooting and yelling with the others. The contagion of happiness was strong enough to engulf him, and when 8 o'clock came he was almost hoarse. People might have mistaken him for a hilarious senior, not a sedate instructor in the mathematics department. But at 8:30 the marching had ended, and he remembered — with sudden alarm — that he had a date that evening. He chartered the first available taxi to rush him back to the campus.

Thornton wanted to be dressed perfectly for this ball. He had decided (at Sara Sue's urging) to wear his tuxedo. Most of the boys would do so, she had known; and he looked fine in it. Full dress would be too formal, and business suits too informal.

As a matter of fact, many people were going in Mexican costume, especially many girls. For this was an international ball, not only to break training at the end of football season, but to honor the visiting squad from Mexico City. The Mexican guests would be resplendent in gold-braided pantaloons, boleros and serapes and great picturesque hats. A renowned Mexican orchestra — Los Charritos—had been brought over from San Antonio, most Latin of all the Texas cities.

These things had all been inspired partly by the fact that the Mexican theme always is beautiful, and partly by the fact that such a ball would be a courteous gesture which could help build international good-will. Astute student leaders had already pulled the necessary political wires to get national attention for this social function, and so already had telegrams from President Roosevelt and President Cardenas to be read as a surprise during dance intermission tonight.

At 9:10 Thornton was dressed, but he telephoned Sara Sue before going to Peaches' home.

"Sara Sue? Sorry to interrupt you—you were dressing? —but I wish advice on one more detail. Shall I drive my own car tonight, or take Peaches in a taxicab?"

Sara Sue smiled. That was just like him! He was still a kid, despite his years and degrees. He needed big-sistering. He still was not sure of himself. He probably was jittery with nervousness.

"Doesn't matter," she ruled. "Or maybe—yes, take the taxi. It will keep your attention free. And—your arms!"

"I beg pardon? Oh, arms! Ha ha. Yes."

What would be expected of him in that regard? The thought startled him.

"Shall I—?" he stammered into the phone. "It would seem—ill timed—that is, in view of the—"

"Listen, Thornton Holgate," Sara Sue cut in, not too gently nor sympathetically. "I am not telling you what you should do tonight, but I am telling you that every man who had ever made any headway with Geraldine Pomeroy has been a heavy petter. . . . Yes, petter. Necker. Whatever you want to name it. She flings woo. She likes her men—"

Sara Sue halted, ashamed of herself. That sounded spiteful, and was, however truthful it was also.

"—Oh, I'm afraid I've done all I can, now, Thornton. You'll have to paddle your own canoe tonight, old dear!" She was a little bit exasperated with him—as well as terribly in love with him. She couldn't—just couldn't—tell him any more, tonight, about making love to another girl!

At 9:30 o'clock Thornton was helping Peaches into his taxi.

Their greeting had been most cordial. He had, in all truth, been momentarily dazzled by the brilliance of her. For the first time he had seen her—so to speak—in full array. Her black eyes and hair, her expert makeup, her natural eagerness to go to this dance (and with one of the current campus heroes) made Peaches gorgeous to behold. Nobody in fact had ever denied that Miss Pomeroy could be beautiful.

Tonight she had paid special attention to her costume, for a very special reason. It was known about the town and campus that Don Romero del Celiedor, captain of the Mexican football team, would lead the grand march at midnight with whatever American girl he should choose. Inevitably there would be competition! Moreover, the other and momentarily greater campus hero would be there—he who of late had been neglecting Peaches.

Her Spanish evening gown was of whitest satin. It was tight, almost too form fitting, from the shoulders to a line below the hips —then it flared theatrically with a hundred tiny ruffles. Her hair dress was in loose flat waves close to her shapely head, a complete change from the styles of the past spring and summer, but the small low knot behind was concealed by Peaches' mantilla, a gorgeous white lace on a golden comb.

Two spots of color adorned her further. One was a half-open red rose over the left ear. The other, not colorful in itself, nevertheless held all of color and seemingly all of beauty known to this universe, caught and reflected and held and displayed dazzlingly the pageantry around her. It was a bracelet of diamonds—a rather well-known bracelet given to Peaches by her father when she had been chosen for the Rice yearbook beauty pages the year before. Many a man, and many a girl, had already admired the Pomeroy bracelet. The expensive piece merited all the admiration it had received.

Poor Thornton tried with reasonable success to tell the truth—that Peaches looked beautiful. Any man could have been proud of her, then. Nevertheless, he persistently looked glum. And felt glum. He wasn't sure why.

They talked some in the taxi. He lapsed into his rather cold formality, with no cause, wondering at the conflict of emotions within him. He thought, almost hysterically, of the possibilities of petting. He could not bring himself to touch her, and yet could not tell himself why.

"You may find the crowd a bit slow at first, Thornton," she was saying. "I don't know what you are used to back east—you are new in Rice—but some of this gang knows how to have a good time."

"Oh, I dare say!"

"The party will get peppy later," she winked, meaningly, "even if it starts off slow. It always does."

He swallowed hard. He felt that he understood, too well.

It meant that a couple of hours would be necessary for her and her cronies to become sufficiently intoxicated. It meant that most of the conventions would then be discarded. It meant that Peaches would expect him to go the pace with her.

He took a deep breath. We'll, he had asked for this. He wasn't meeting anything blindly, and he wasn't going to be a nonconformist. Again he resolved to go her pace this night, even if it killed him!

DOROTHY DIX

There Are Times When Husbands And Wives Can Be Too Good To Each Other; It Pays To Offer Constructive Criticism If It Is Not Tinged With Bitterness

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—Can a husband be too good to his wife? I know one who started out to be a model and who almost broke his neck trying to live up to what he thought was the feminine ideal of the perfect husband. He kept up the love-making. He always noticed what his wife had on. He kept an anxious eye on the calendar for anniversaries and came through handsomely with gifts. He never failed to compliment his wife on her housekeeping. It was impossible to put up new curtains without his noticing it and hoping that she hadn't tired herself out on the job. But instead of this making a hit with his wife it seemed to get on her nerves, and one day she burst out with: "John, if I served you scorched steak with paris green sauce you would say it was fine. Why can't you ever complain about anything? Don't you have any opinions? Don't you think I want to feel abused once in a while and have a good cry?" Well, the husband saw the light and he began to find fault and assume authority, and the wife was delighted and told me that he had improved and developed force of character. Can you beat it? Women! You figure them out, I can't.

A MERE MAN.

ANSWER:

"And Spring would be but dreary weather if we had nothing else than Spring," sang the old poet. That applies to marriage as well as to climatic conditions. We have to have rain to make us appreciate the sunshine; storms to make us know how beautiful a clear day is.

All of us dream of the perfect husband and wife, but, fortunately, none of us get our hearts' desire. For we would be bored to death with it if we did. No man could stand living with Patient Griselda, who bowed her head meekly to all of her husband's orders and never answered back when he berated her for everything she did and didn't do. Nor could any woman endure a husband who babied her and yes-yessed her and who gratified her every wish. It would be as nauseating as living on a diet of chocolate creams.

The trouble with being a good husband or a good wife is that it is so difficult to know just what the party of the other part wants and when one is giving satisfaction. Every man, for instance, thinks that he wants his wife to be a cooing dove and for her to be home-staying and domestic and a rubber stamp of himself. Yet let her be all that and he complains that she is dull and smells of the kitchen. He hunts up some livelier lady with a supply of wisecracks and new ideas that make him sit up and take notice.

It is the same way with a woman. She thinks she would like to be married to a man who will bill and coo over her and let her lead him around by the nose, and who will be a fireside companion. But if one gets one of these perfect-lover husbands who is a kissing bug, watch her turn the back of her ear to his lips. If she marries one she can boss she has a contempt for him. If he is a stay-at-homer she is always lamenting that he isn't a stepper-outer.

Perhaps the truth is that both husbands and wives enjoy a grievance and don't want a mate in whom they can find nothing to complain about. Certainly a husband and wife never really love each other until they come to love each other's faults just because they are John's or Mary's little ways.

• • • • • •

DEAR MISS DIX—My husband and I have a young son and he is determined to name him Philip, while I want to name him Roland after my father. Philip is not a family name with my husband, so I can't see why he is so set on it. He was divorced and some of our friends tell me that the name of Philip may have some association with his first marriage. If this is true, I wish my baby had never been born if he has to be called Philip. I love my husband, and every time I think of his first wife a cold shiver goes over me but I know he doesn't love her. In fact, he has forbidden me ever to mention her name to him. My greatest happiness is in pleasing my husband, but if this is true about the name of Philip I just don't see how I can give it to the baby. What is your advice?

HELEN.

ANSWER:

Name the baby to please your husband. You can name the next boy after your father. And, for heaven's sake, quit borrowing trouble over nothing. For you haven't the faintest shred of evidence that the name Philip is connected in any way with your husband's previous marriage.

And another thing. Give up the so-called friends who are trying to sow the seeds of suspicion in your mind about your husband. They are not your friends. They are your enemies, who bode you no good, as the old-fashioned melodramas used to say. The sooner you break off all relations with them the better for you.

Many people have a fancy for some one particular name, so there is nothing to be alarmed over in your husband liking the name of Philip. I, myself, think it is a very pretty name and a sensible one and one he will not be ashamed to be called in after life. That is the main thing to be considered in naming a baby, not to give it some name that will sound ridiculous when he is a grown man.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am married to a man who is fine in every way. He is kind and good and a good provider and we love each other, but we are continually quarreling. One minute we are happy, the next minute we are at each other's throats. What is the matter with us? And how can we stop it?

DISHEARTENED WIFE.

ANSWER:

The only way you can reform any bad habit is just to stop it. Quit it. Use some self-control. When you find yourself getting irritated at something your husband does or says get up and go out of the room until you have quieted down. Shut your teeth on the bitter word that will provoke a still bitterer one from him. Avoid the subjects that you know will be the fighting words to him. The time to stop a quarrel is before it gets going good.

Orchids Bloom Happily in Home-Made Terrarium

Grow Rare Plants under Glass

What a thrill! Orchids you've raised yourself!

These dainty cypripediums, or "lady-slipper" orchids, come in fascinating deep pinks or exotic yellows touched with green and bronze. And you can also grow at home the gorgeous cattleyas, the showy purple orchids of the florist shops.

Since orchids like lots of moisture in the air, fit your terrarium with a bottom pan—such as a cake tin—to hold water. Place wood slats across top of pan (see diagram), and set pot containing your orchid plant on the wood slats. Then use prepared fibre to conceal pot.

Then observe these simple precautions: Keep your terrarium out of direct sunlight, cover with a cloth at night if temperature drops below 55 degrees, raise lid ¼ inch during day for air circulation.

Our 32-page booklet explains the planting and care of all kinds of lovely inexpensive glass and dish gardens. Orchids, African violets, gardenias. Ferns, foliage plants, cacti.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of GLASS GARDENS AND NOVELTY INDOOR GARDENS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, December 30.

An extremely lively but not entirely happy state of affairs is predicted from this day's planetary aspects, both lunar and mutual. While there seems to be a culmination or crisis in the affairs, with new contracts and plans relegating old matters to the limbo of the passing year, there also are difficulties, obstructions and depressing circumstances to be manoeuvered to the new order. The stress may be in connection with an elderly woman, an affliction or a bereavement.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which much has to be adjusted, amicably and with discernment, to a set of new conditions incident to winding up affairs of the passing year. New contracts and agreements are under encouraging rulership, but there also is an adverse sign to be handled with fortitude and optimism. It may concern the passing or grave danger of an elderly woman, through whom, however, financial or legal benefits accrue.

A child born on this day may have a rather gloomy or pessimistic nature, which may account for barriers and misunderstandings with those having kindly interest and friendship to offer. Its morbidity, apprehensive and studious tendencies should be directed to an optimistic philosophy of life.

With a shortage of skilled doctors in rural districts, India may increase its number of subsidized practitioners.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

No one was as happy as the big red balloon. Father had bought it for the children one afternoon from a man in the park who had a great cluster of them. Each one of them was attached to a little stick. When they were all together in the man's hand, they looked like a huge bunch of colored grapes.

All day long th children had carried the balloon. Then, when evening came and they went off to bed, they left it standing on its stick in a corner of the playroom. There's where Knarf and Hanid, the shadows of the two children, found it.

"I'm very happy to make your acquaintance," the balloon said to them cheerfully, as it bobbed around in the breeze that came from the open window. "My name is Balloon. What are you called?"

"My name is Balloon."

The two shadows told it their names. They explained that they were shadows.

"Well, being a shadow is all right, I suppose. But being a balloon is much, much better. I'm as happy as can be, being a balloon. It's a pity you can't be one, too."

"Do you have much fun?" Hanid asked it.

"Fun! Why, I have the most fun in the world! I feel as light as a feather. If it weren't for the fact that I'm tied to this stick, I'd fly away—far away — straight up into the sky until I reached the moon."

"Humph!" grumbled Knarf, who thought the balloon was boasting too much. "I don't think you can do it."

"You don't think I can do it!" it exclaimed in surprise. "I've never heard of anyone doubting my word before. You don't know much about balloons, that's clear. Here—just untie that string for me, will you? Once I'm loose from this stick I'll show you how high I can fly."

"No! Don't do it!" Hanid said in alarm as she saw Knarf stooping over to untie the string.: "It will fly away. Oh! Please don't do it! The children will be terribly disappointed if it should get loose."

But Knarf didn't pay any attention to her. Instead, he untied the string. The next instant the balloon went flying up.

"I'm free—free!" it shouted. "I'm off to the moon. Good-bye—good bye....!"

Did it go to the moon? No. It just bumped against the ceiling and stayed there. Oh! how Knarf laughed to see it. "I knew you'd never get to the moon," he said. And when the children saw it way up at the ceiling the next morning, they laughed, too! Poor little balloon!

Looking Back
On This Date

Another landmark in the history of Winnipeg. On this date, Dec. 29, 1878, a locomotive was driven across the ice of the Red river and 6,000 people, whose hopes had been almost shattered during the last years of the Mackenzie ministry, cheered as they saw this actual proof that the John A. Macdonald government, just restored to power, meant business and that the Canadian Pacific railway was to go on without any further interruption.

J. J. Hill, the American railway magnate, just then getting into his stride, and eager to get into the Canadian west, was permitted to take over from the contractor a line built from St. Vincent, Minn., into Winnipeg, and operate it.

For operation it was, of course, necessary to have a locomotive, and so an engine was procured from Hill's American railway, renamed the John G. Haggart, in compliment to the "big fellow from Lanark county, Ont., and brought up to the Red river. There another "man from Canada," one Donald D. Mann, agreed to build a track across the ice. He was laughed at, as he often was in other undertakings later on, but he laid the track and the engine steamed over it into Winnipeg, to be a mate for the older Countess of Dufferin.

Donald Mann had the habit of "doing the impossible," and that day he convinced even the worst pessimist in Winnipeg that things were "goin' ahead."

One sequel to this railway across the Red river in 1678 was the building of a similar railway across the ice of the St. Lawrence at Montreal for the South Eastern when the C. P. R. took it over.

I wonder what became of the John G. Haggart? Does any oldtimer in the west know?

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK —By R. J. Scott

Laurel's 4th Wife Leaves, Asks $1,500 Monthly

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 29.—(AP).—Life with wry-faced Stan Laurel was just one sleepless night after another, with his two former wives disturbing her slumbers at "ungodly hours," blond Illiana Laurel charged to-day.

The Russian dancer, who married the motion picture comedian three times during 1938, demanded $1,500 monthly in a separate maintenance suit.

Climaxing a hectic marital life which began last New Year's Day with an elopement to Yuma, Ariz., continued with frequent tiffs and as many reconciliations, including solemnization of the two extra marriages, Illiana's suit asked ejection of the comic from his Canoga Park home, title to all community property and $25,000 attorney's fees.

She claimed that "by reason of his attitude toward his former wives," they annoyed her by having police and firemen visit the house any by causing persons to write anonymous letters.

Laurel, he said, refrained from "demonstrations" of love, and added that he "ignored and repulsed" her attempts to show affection. She said he often became intoxicated, on such occasions, using "vile and loathsome" language. The separation, she set forth, occurred Nov. 18.

A Tangled Affair.

Almost as tangled as his marital afafirs are Laurel's finances. At present he's out of a job, having been deemed by Producer Hal Roach to have broken his contract. Harry Langdon has replaced him as the comedy mate of rotund Oliver Hardy.

Here, as far as the records show, is a recapitulation of his married life and the settlements of the three wives and another he claimed to be a common-law wife:

Mae Laurel, the comedian's vaudeville partner for six years, who said she became his common-law wife in New York in 1919 and sued for $1,000 monthly separate maintenance, dropped the action for a cash settlement.

Lois Laurel, whom Laurel married in 1926 and who divorced him in 1933, last April was denied $1,355 a month for support of a daughter, Lois, 10, when she admitted in court she possessed $274,000 in cash and property, most from a property agreement at the time of the divorce.

Virginia Ruth Laurel, whom he married in Mexico in 1934, was granted five per cent of his income when she won an interlocutory decree Dec. 24, 1936.

Eleven Persons Injured As Blizzard Blocks Ontario Highways

Eleven persons were injured, five of them seriously when two automobiles, three trucks and a bus were involved in one of the worst accidents of the Niagara peninsula, during a blinding snow storm. The accident occurred five miles west of Niagara Falls, Ont., when an oil company's truck skidded on the icy pavement and nose-dived into the ditch, leaving the tanker spread across the highway. Coming along shortly afterwards a truck pulled up just behind the tanker only to be struck by two automobiles, followed closely by another oil tanker. An eighteen-ton Detroit bound bus swerved into the six-foot ditch to avoid running over passengers of the two automobiles who were hurled to the pavement following the crash. The 21 passengers aboard the bus received minor cuts and bruises and were loud in their praise for the bus driver who averted a much more serious accident by swerving into the ditch.

Making Africa Cruiser-Proof

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 29 (CP)—Arrangements have been made by the Union of South Africa Defence Force to man and strengthen the coast defences of the Union.

Officers and non-commissioned officers have been drafted to Durban to carry out exercises in manning the southeast coast. These men have been transferred to Durban as part of the scheme outlined by Defence Minister Pirow, for making Durban more "cruiser-proof."

In his survey of the Union's defence plans, Pirow said at least two Union harbors would be more strongly fortified than those of any other dominion. The equipment, he said, was weak, but that weakness was about to be remedied.

Perparations for manning the coastal defences of the Cape are almost complete following announcement by General Sir Pierre van Ryneveld, chief of the general staff, that these defences would be manned as a general exercise for the Coast Artillery Brigade.

Two hundred officers, N. C. O.'s and men from the artillery school at Roberts Heights will be drafted to Simonstown and the batteries around Cape Town. The men will be given intensive training in gun drill. The "mobilization" will last three weeks.

The East London batteries will be augmented by four six-inch mobile guns from Cape Town.

Possibility that the South African station of the Royal Navy at Simonstown may be strengthened by increasing the number of ships and shore staff, was mentioned by R. A. Carey, M. P. for Eccles, England, in an interview.

Carey, who was visiting Cape Town, has devoted much of his time to defence problems, and last year visited the station at Singapore.

"Simonston, to be of use to the Empire, must be equipped to undertake any emergency," he said. "I can say with confidence that money will soon be expended on the African station."

Once In Lifetime Enough Says Netherlander Attending First Movie At Age Of 70

MONTREAL, Dec. 29 — (CP). — Theodore Nollen, 70-year-old Netherlander who came to Montreal more than 25 years ago, today attended a cinema performance for the first time to find out what other people probably have sought for years—why the movies have proved such a popular form of entertainment to young people.

Nollen, father of six children, admitted he was unable to answer the question after his first visit but he described the experience, and the program, in three words: "It was nice."

"The music was good, too," Nollen said, marvelling how voice and action could be co-ordinated. A colored cartoon favorably reviewed by many critics, he compared to the "Sunday funnies," while praising a newsreel as the best part of the program. A comedy was uninteresting and the feature picture, he declared, "Didn't seem true to life."

Asked if he planned to attend the theatre again Nollen replied: "At my age, once in a lifetime is enough."

We Noticed

...At the P.C.V.A. At Home last night....a gown of turquoise taffeta with gathered bodice and a bouffant skirts tacked up at intervals with wine velvet bows to reveal white petticoats, ruffled and hooped. Wine velvet mittens finished with a frill of turquoise taffeta completed a quaint ensemble that might have stepped from an old-fashioned portrait gallery.

...Another striking gown had a paneled skirt in black, cerise and chartreuse. Taffeta flowers in the three shades decked the neckline, and matching flowers formed a wrist corsage.

...Dainty as the first spring snowflake was a white net dress with a very full skirt looped at the hem with dainty bows, and worn with a white angora bolero. Like the ladies of the '90's, she had tied a ribbon of black velvet 'round her slender throat. New, and decidedly the top of the mode, was the black taffeta gown that was banded around the decolletage with white fur, and had a white muff to match with a fragrant corsage of red roses.

Need For Used Clothing Is Very Urgent

An item which appeared on the Christmas Bulletin of All Saints' Church deserves a wider publicity, and is printed here by request. The simple, thought-arresting lines entitled "Empty Hooks" reveal the kindly, homely philosophy of Edgar Guest, who says:

"Within his closet I dared to look
And my eyes discovered no empty hook.
But far in the back I chanced to note
What I knew was last year's overcoat.
And I thought to myself, that shouldn't be there,
It's warm and fit for a man to wear,
The hook it hangs on is made of steel,
The blasts of Winter it cannot feel.
And an empty hook is a handsomer thing
Than a man on the street a-shivering.
So for all who suffer and all who need
Let's empty those closet hooks, I plead."

In view of the great need for good used clothing at this time—greater than for several years past—there are no doubt many who will be glad to take a hint, and as the suggestion comes to us from one of the city churches, we suggest that you have a look in the clothes closet and get in touch with the minister of your own church, who will tell you where that spare garment can be used to good advantage.

DASH OF SCOTCH IN THE AUTUMN MODE

By ALICE ALDEN

The visit of Britain's King and Queen to Scotland last summer gave a dash of Scotch to the autumn mode. For, in honor of Elizabeth, proud daughter of a Scottish house, the designers went in heavily for plaided fabrics. There have been plaided wool evening coats and hats and Scottish tams. Now comes a negligee of plaided fabric. This lovely model is worn by Maureen O'Sullivan.

Lots of smart shops are selling hostess gowns of this type and there is quite a run on evening coats that are almost identical, except for the train. Many of the coats have a basque top and a full skirt.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by Mrs. MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Will you please send me a recipe for pork pie? I can't find my recipe anywhere and I only make it at Xmas time so I never remember. I think it is made with hot lard.—Mrs. F. H. B.

ANSWER: Thank you for your letter.

Pork Pie

This is the famous Melton Mowbray Pork Pie.

One and one-half pounds lean pork, 1 onion, salt and pepper. For the crust for raised pies: 1 lb. flour, ¾ cup lard, ½ cup water, salt.

Remove all bone and gristle from the meat, put it in a saucepan and cover with cold water. Bring to boiling point, skim, add the onion, season with salt and pepper and simmer gently for 2½ to 3 hours. Remove the meat from the saucepan, cut it in dice, and springle with salt and pepper. Boil the lard and water together for a few minutes, add to the flour, with which a good pinch of salt should be mixed, and stir until cool enough to knead. Work till perfectly smooth, cover and stand in a warm place or by the fire for half an hour. Knead the dough again, take off enough to make a lid, and raise fitted into a round or oval form. Fill with the meat, moisten with a little of the stock made from the bones, etc., cover with the lid press down the edges, make a small hole in the middle of the lid, and surround it with the dough. Brush the whole with beaten yolk of egg mixed with a little milk, and bake for about 2 hours.

The oven should be very hot at first, about 450 deg. Fahr. When done pour the remainder of the stock into the pie through the slit in the top. Stock should be reheated when added. Sliced hard cooked eggs are sometimes added to the meat in the pie. Let pie stand until cold, serve cut in thick slices or wedges.

We hope this is what you want, and that we can help you again.

QUESTION: For quite some time I have been a frequent reader of your page. Have you on hand a recipe for Butter Tarts? I would appreciate it very much if you could print it as soon as possible—Miss D. M.

ANSWER: Thank you for your letter.

Butter Tarts

This is what used to be known as Banbury Tarts, except that Banbury tarts are made in shape of covered triangle.

One cup chopped raisins (or currants), 1 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons very fine cracker crumbs, 1 egg beaten, 1 tablespoon melted butter, ¼ teaspoon salt, juice and grated rind 1 lemon. Mix all ingredients in order given. Fill into lined tart tins, using either puff or rich plain paste to line the tins. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr, for first 10 minutes, reducing heat to 350 to finish baking.

Puff or plain paste may be rolled ⅛ inch thick and cut into 3-inch squares. Put a teaspoon of the tart mixure in centre of each square, wet edges of paste, and fold to form a triangle. Prick several times before baking as above. This amount makes 10 tarts.

QUESTION: Please mail me a recipe for the exact amount of ingredients needed for 9 pie shells, also for 12 pie shells. Whenever I make them, when rolling the dough out it breaks so I imagine my ingredients are not right. I would appreciate it if you will mail me exactly what to use and how to go about it.

I enjoy your page each week and I have most of your recipes on file so that is why I am coming to you for assistance. Thanking you.—Mrs. H. D.

ANSWER: Thank you for your letter.

I know a lady who makes four or five pies at a time each week and she finds that Hot Water Pie crust is the best recipe to use. She has tried many over the year and still thinks this is the best method when a large number of pies are needed.

Hot Water Crust (nine large crusts)

Pour 1 measuring cup plus 2 tablespoons boiling water over 2¼ cups lard. Stir until the lard is melted, then add 7 cups sifted flour, 2¼ teaspoons salt and 2¼ teaspoons baking powder, sifted together, to the lard and water. Stir with a fork until smooth. Chill at least 4 hours. It must be chilled or it is too tender to handle (it may be made the day before needed, wrappd in wax paper and towel and chilled overnight). Roll out as needed, for this will keep for a week in the ice box.

Amounts for twelve crusts (using above recipe): 1½ cups boiling water, 3 cups lard, 9½ cups flour, 3 teaspoons salt, 3 teaspoons baking powder.

Wife Preservers

When slicing the yolks of hard-boiled eggs, wet your knife before cutting each slice. The yolk will not crumble so easily

Do You Know?

Silks that are waterspotted can usually be restored to their original beauty by sponging and pressing the entire garment. Be sure that the dampness is distributed evenly.

When adding nuts to conserves, slice or cut them into pieces of uniform size so they will be distributed evenly through the mixture. Nuts do not need much cooking, so don't add them until about 10 minutes before the conserves are to be taken from the fire.

Composer Of "Abide With Me"

Dr. W. H. Monk wrote the tune which popularized the hymn "Abide With Me" all over the world.

There is a beautiful little chapel dedicated to Dr. Monk's memory in the Church of St. Matthias, Stoke Newington, London, where he was organist from 1853 to 1889. Dr. Monk and his collaborator at Stoke Newington, the late Mr. Spenser Nottingham, introduced to English churchmen those grand Rouen and Mechlin Cathedral melodies that enrich Dr. Neale's sublime translations of the Eucharist hymns of St. Thomas Aquinas, the two St. Bernards, and other mediaeval hymn writers.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Annual Collegiate 'At Home' Gala Event of This Week

With fun and gayety reigning supreme, Wednesday night's twenty-eighth annual "At Home" of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational School was undoubtedly the most successful in years. Over six hundred young people swung out to the lilt of Jerry Wooll's merry music, and though a winter motif formed the basis for the decorations, there was certainly nothing frigid about the atmosphere.

Streamers in the school colors of garnet and grey draped the lights, and feathery garlands in the same shades swayed above the whirling dancers. A silver half sheil outlined in garnet and resembling an arctic igloo formed a setting for the orchestra which, incidentally, was providing something very special in the way of dance music. Even the piano was included in the color scheme of garnet and grey, and wore a dress of silver trimmed with musical notes of garnet.

Original and very clever were the amusing caricatures done in chalk that lined the walls of the gymnasium. Teachers were pictured indulging in winter sports on Peterborough hills, school room dignity laid aside. Students have worked for many a month on these drawings, which were outlined by Doris Glover and Hugh Kenner. Art students assisted in the coloring of costumes and background.

Pictured drifting among floating clouds far above the dull reality of school life was one teacher, and although equipped with dainty white wings, a latin book was still chained to her arm. A geometry teacher on skis was absent-mindedly bisecting angles and triangles with his ski pole while question marks floated in the air above his head. Wearing a serious expression, another professor ground out snowballs from a wonderful machine, and a cadet instructor, in a queer and colorful military uniform, peered anxiously down his rifle barrel and met the eyes of a pink and white rabbit. Surveying the amazing panorama from a throne beneath the school flag at one end of the room was a portrait of the principal, Dr. H. R. H. Kenner, wearing royal robes, and holding a sceptre in his hand.

Lending their patronage to the affair were Dr. and Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, Dr. and Mrs. G. Raymore Scott, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. R. David Brown, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Corneil, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Graham.

Much of the success of the evening is due to the Students' Council Committee, who were in charge of arrangements, and included Mr. R. D. Brown, Mr. R. G. Corneil (staff members) Alec Young, Catherine White, Margaret Westbye, Jim Sands, Joan Ottewell, Janet Prophet, Don Duncan, Warren Gamble, Bob Graham, Jim Harvey.

Southern Silhouettes

The Dutch boy jacket of this frock is fastened with huge wooden buttons, and hides the dress' sunback

Tryrolean hats of straw are worn smack on top of the head, or set far back.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

An illusion of a waistline is all the law allows these days, north and south. Watch out for a slim midriff in all cruise collections, Lanz of Salzburg's among them.

This master of more or less peasant interpretations designed both of the dresses sketched today. The two-piecer, left, gives a taut, smooth look through the middle and swishes out into a monkish skirt. It comes in lively contrasting shades of crush-resistant linen.

The princesse dress, right, in black, pink or natural linen, has an amusing trim — strawberries tumbling from a basket.

Relaxation Is Insomnia Cure

The value of muscular relaxation in health and sickness was stressed in a recent address by a physician.

People should prepare for sleep by ridding themselves as far as possible of all contractions and tensions. Rest is more important than sleep. If we have to have one or the other it is better to rest without sleep than to sleep without rest.

"Insomnia is largely due to the fear of not sleeping," said the authority, "whereas if you make up your mind to rest and give up the idea of sleep, you will be asleep in a short while."

The excess tension from which we suffer so much today results in frayed nerves, fatigue, loss of confidence and self-respect.

More serious conditions, such as stammering, and neuroses generally, arise out of tension. Relaxation does not replace medical treatment, but it helps one to benefit from any treatment one is given. Relaxation and personality readjustment will restore an individual's self-respect and self-assurance, and result in stability and poise.

Regarding the practical application of relaxation, the most difficult areas to relax are the neck, spine and eyes. For curative relaxation, just lying back in a chair with a book is not considered sufficient, but one has to lie flat on one's back, with the eyes shut and a complete "let go" of every muscle in the body.

Mental relaxation is obtained through physical relaxation. It is impossible to make one's mind a plank, but after a considerable amount of muscular relaxation a sense of ease will pervade the mind.

"Relaxation sounds and looks very easy but considerable practice is required before one becomes proficient," added the speaker.

Mother Is Many-Sided Genius

There is no measuring the many-sided genius that is mother's, not to mention the drab workaday routine she pursues to keep the family happy, writes Olive Roberts Barton.

She has her own ways to accomplish all this, of course. Many a mother works outside to provide the things her children need. Some, cellent managers, find extra time to carry on outside interests for the good of the community or merely to fortify themselves for the strain of home cares. Who can criticize this? Not I, for all I am such a staunch advocate of mothers in their homes, and the old-fashioned responsibility that I think every woman should assume upon the birth of her children.

FOOT TAILORING

By PRUNELLA WOOD

You must start from the ground up to look smart.

Do it in black suede, as shown at top, overlapped in front and patent-trimmed.

Or, settle on the same combination of materials in the high-cut tie, second from top. Scuff-resisting alligator is done up brown in the pump, right centre. It will be lovely with the new cinnamon and rust shades.

For sports, pigskin boots are designed with elastic-hugging insets, as shown lower left. The ever-neat oxford, lower right, is black suede with patent.

Platform soles continue to lead footwear's march into spring.

English Comedian Originated The Lambeth Walk

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Ballroom enthusiasts who nightly strut their stuff in the Lambeth Walk and hilariously shout "Oi!" in the most approved English style, may not be so proud of themselves when they learn that they may be imitating inmates of a lunatic asylum.

But facts are facts. Lupino Lane, famous little comic star of "Me and My Girl," now running in Victoria Palace, London, is the true inventor and begetter of the Lambeth Walk. Interviewed in his dressing room the other evening, Lane mused along:

How It Started.

"In the last show in which I appeared I acted the part of a Cockney and did a sort of Cockney walk. When one of the characters in the play asked me where I learned it, I replied 'Lambeth.' Naturally in the present show when I developed the thing into something like a real grotesque dance, I called it the 'Lambeth Walk.'

"Now your true Londoner is your true Cockney. And he is probably as old as London itself. As you know, as early as 43 A.D. London was a Roman city known as 'Londinium.' You remember at the shows in the forum when the crowd wanted to see a gladiator die, they turned thumbs down. If they wanted him to live, they turned thumbs up. Your Cockney of today when he swaggers along and is happy, swings his hands with his thumbs up. I adopted that posture in my 'Lambeth Walk.' It descends from these Roman Cockneys.

"Now the oldest hospital in the world for the treatment of insane persons is Bethlem Royal Hospital, which was founded in the Bishopsgate section of old London in 1247.

"In 1815 the hospital was moved to the region south of the Thames. It stood on Lambeth Road. People were admitted, for a time to the hospital to view the patients, as today they go to the Zoo.

"Right near to Lambeth Road is a street called Lambeth Walk, where the milder insane patients were occasionally taken for strolls by the keepers. They may have walked grotesquely. And your Cockney, quick on the uptake, may have adopted some of their steps. He takes anything that amuses or interests him and changes it into something that is typical of himself."

"Me and My Girl" may set new theatrical records for London. There are two performances nightly, six days a week. At each there is standing room only. Seats are sold three weeks ahead.

Lane himself is a member of the famous Lupino family which has given comedians to the London stage for three generations. For fourteen years off and on he acted on this continent.

Mistletoe Goes Back To Druids

Evergreens were considered as symbols of good luck by the ancients, the laurel in particular being regarded as an emblem of peace, joy and victory. It was adopted as such by Christianity, the English substituting ivy and holly in its stead.

The universal popularity of the use of evergreens at Christmas since the middle ages, however, is ascribed by many to the legend that all the trees and growing things of the forest blossomed and bore fruit the night of the Nativity.

Mistletoe was venerated by the Druids, who hung it over the doors to propitiate the woodland spirits. The tradition of the mistletoe kiss is derived from the myth that nothing but happiness could enter under the mistletoe.

The custom of giving Christmas "boxes" is traced by some to the "Priest's Box" placed by the Romans on all outgoing vessels and into which people were required to put money or gifts. When the ship returned, the box was set aside until Christmas when the contents were distributed among the poor.

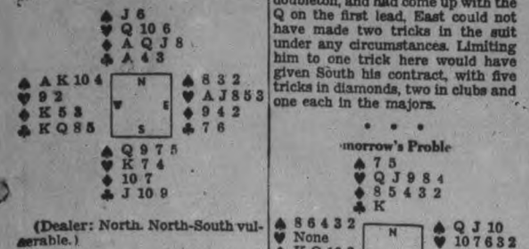
LIMIT YOUR LOSSES

FROM ONE POINT of view, the making of a contract depends upon the number of tricks that you take. From another, it depends upon the number that you lose. If you are able by one method of play to limit your loss of tricks in a particular suit to one less than would be given up by another procedure—without influencing the losses in other suits—you are obviously one trick better



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North began the bidding on this deal with 1-Diamond. South bid 1-No trump, West doubled, North passed, East 2-Hearts, West 2-Spades, North and East passed, South 2-No trump because he had stoppers in both adverse suits and also in clubs. North raised to 3-No trump.

When West led the heart 9, South covered with dummy's 10, and thereupon was doomed to defeat. East covered with the J, and his side was now certain to get two heart tricks at least, plus two in spades and one in clubs. South let East win that trick. A spade came back to the A, another heart to the A, a spade to the K, then the club K, to the A. South could run only eight tricks, then had to lose one at the end, to either the spade 10 or the club Q.

Had South reckoned that the heart 9 was probably the top of a doubleton, and had come up with the Q on the first lead, East could not have made two tricks in the suit under any circumstances. Limiting him to one trick here would have given South his contract, with five tricks in diamonds, two in clubs and one each in the majors.

U.S. Aim To Train 20,000 Civilian Fliers Each Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29. — (AP). —President Roosevelt's plans to train 20,000 civilian aviators a year provided another indication to-day of his determination to keep the United States high in the ranks of world air Powers.

The program, as disclosed at a press conference and by the civil aeronautics authority, contemplates experimental training of about 300 students in a dozen colleges this spring.

If the United States Congress votes sufficient funds, the training will be offered at several hundred colleges and universities in the fall. Mr. Roosevelt estimated it would cost $9,800,000 for a year's schooling for 20,000 pilots.

The cream of the new fliers, under tentative plans, would find opportunities for military careers in the expanded Army and Navy Air Forces.

"Only by such an approach," said the civil aeronautics authority, "can the United States adequately safeguard itself against the vast aerial militarization programs now being pressed with fanatic beal by foreign Powers."

The pilot training project was the first of the President's far-reaching rearmament plans to be made public in detail.

Steps already have been taken for a parallel training of aviation mechanics. In the view of some military officials, mechanics are even more immediately essential for a greatly expanded air force such as Mr. Roosevelt is believed to be ready to propose to Congress.

In general, the civil aeronautics authority is to direct the training of pilots, and the national youth administration the schooling of mechanics.

U.S. In Chill Grip Of Zero Wave

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—(AP).—The Arctic chill of the season's most intensive cold wave was felt today in the United States from the Rockies to the Atlantic.

Northwest winds carried an icy sting to the eastern seaboard and the south today while the mid- continent continent continued to shiver under a blanket of cold that sent temperatures below zero in some sections.

Weather observers predicted a slow rise in temperatures for tomorrow.

Wyoming, Colorado, Montana, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and the Dakota's were the principal cold spots in the United States weather map. Sub zero temperatures were general in Minnesota, and the Dakotas.

Scores of Christmas holiday visitors still were marooned in northern Michigan where county officials prohibited travel on snow-blocked or ice-covered highways. Five deaths were attributed to the cold, and slippery highways.

One death from exposure was recorded in Indiana where temperatures dopped steadily to zero and sub-zero levels. A veteran woodsman froze to death in northern Pennsylvania woods while walking to a lumbering camp.

The cold wave brought intense suffering to the poor. Hundreds sought shelter at police stations in the larger cities. Thousands of homeless slept in Ney York subways or in crowded Bowery missions and welfare department shelters.

Japanese Girl's Cremation Puzzles Police

VANCOUVER, Dec. 29.—(CP). — Police said last night an autopsy showed Emiko Yamada died from burns but did not indicate whether the 16-year-old Japanese girl had taken her own life or was slain by cremation in the furnace of her family's Fairview district home.

The body was found early yesterday partly consumed by fire generated from oil-soaked paper which had been shoved into the firebox. Other pieces of paper similarly treated and containing matches had been pinned to the front of the girl's clothing.

There was no burned matches outside the furnace but several unlighted ones were found underneath the firebox.

Officers added a bruise was found on the forehead but were unable to say whether it had been caused by a blow before or after the girl entered the furnace. They said they would make a further examination of the girl's home for traces of oil with which the paper had been soaked.

Seek Signs Of Attack.

Inspector J.F.C.B. Vance of the Police Bureau of Science was asked to examine the body for evidence the girl might have been knocked unconscious before entering the firebox.

Eichi Yamada, 15-year-old brother of the girl, and G. Yamada, her father, who discovered the charred corpse, and three roomers at the Yamada home were questioned. They were unable to supply any clue to the girl's death, police said. A fire was still smouldering when the discovery was made.

Police could not supply a possible murder motive. Neighbors said the girl was quiet and kindly and had few intimate friends. She had been out of school for about a year.

Fall Stuns Trapper, Hands, Feet Freeze

CHURCHILL, Man., Dec. 29. — (CP)—Victim of a northern blizzard, D. C. (Baldy) Turner, former member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, was brought here yesterday from an isolated trappers' cabin, 80 miles north of here, for medical treatment. Both his feet and hands were frozen.

Making his way to trap in the Northwest Territories, Turner was seeking shelter from the storm when he slipped on the ice and was stunned. When he regained consciousness his mitts had blown away.

He dug himself into a snow drift and stayed in the drift three days until the storm subsided. He then made his way over 18 miles of treacherous snow-filled trails to the cabin of Donald Lundy, a trapper.

By dog team Lundy and the storm-victim travelled to Churchill, reaching the Hudson's Bay Company post here yesterday. It took them nearly two weeks to cover 80 miles due to poor condition of trails.

764 Holiday Mishaps Kill 9 In Detroit

DETROIT, Dec. 29. — (CP). — Drunk and drinking drivers will get double penalty or more in Detroit's Traffic Court during the holiday period, the Court Judges, Geore T. Murphy and Thomas F. Maher, announced to-day in a joint statement.

"Nine deaths and 764 accidents on our streets over the Christmas weekend is appalling," Judge Murphy said. Drinking drivers involved in accidents will get heavy fines or jail sentences and lose the right to drive for 60 days. Drunk drivers will get straight prison terms.

Judge Murphy said the court believes the traffic at holiday time is so much heavier, the probable consequence of reckless driving is grater, and thus penalties should be boosted.

Japan's population is officially estimated at 72,222,700.

Crow Bay Company Re-elects Officers

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 29. — Patrons of Crow Bay Cheese and Butter Company may purchase a new separator and cheese scale. The matter was discussed at their annual meeting at which Hector Arnold, the president, stated the restricted "spending of the company's money was reflected in the price paid per pound butter fat which in turn attracted patrons as could be seen by the large increase in make of cheese this year."

J. D. Mills, manager of the Bank of Montreal at Campbellford, acted as chairman, and the financial statement was presented by Ray Thompson, the secretary. The total amount of milk delivered to the factory was 1,469,709. Total cheese, 127,634 pounds; total butter fat, 47,718; total returns $17,952.28; paid patrons, $15,589.58; average milk per pound cheese, 11.51; average price per pound cheese, 13.54 cents; average price per pound butter fat, 32.66 cents; average price per hundred pounds of milk, $1.06; average test, 3.07 per cent.; average cheese per pound butter fat, 2.67 pounds.

Thumbs Down On Nazi Proposals

Lawyer Held In Bogus Bill Raid

$10 Canadian Notes Totalling $4,620 Grabbed In Windsor

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 30—(CP).—Windsor police today seized $4,620 in counterfeit Canadian $10 bills and held a 31-year-old Chicago lawyer, Alphonsis Sopchuk, for investigation as they probed his possible connection with a large counterfeiting ring.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police said they expected to make arrests in other Canadian cities during the day.

The bills were described as counterfeits of the latest issue of the Bank of Canada. Police said the $10 bills could be detected readily except at night or in a dark place.

Ernest Edwards, taxi-driver, detected as counterfeit a bill he said was given him early today by the Chicago lawyer and immediately communicated with police. Police raided Sopchuk's room and found 24 similar bills and keys to three lockers.

In a bus depot police found the keys opened a locker containing a bag holding 433 of the notes.

Another bill was recovered when a girl brought it to police station and said a man had given it to her. She identified Sopchuk as the man who passed the bill.

Police said the counterfeits were by no means the best imitations they had seen. On the back, where the genuine bill bears the name "British American Note Company, Limited," the bogus bill has "copy British American Bank Note Company Limited."

New Seaway Pact For U.S. Senate?

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—(AP).—State department sources indicated today the Senate of the approaching 76th United States congress would be given a new Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway treaty for consideration if the tentative draft is approved by the Canadian government.

The department forwarded to Prime Minister Mackenzie King a draft of the proposed treaty last May. The prime minister acknowledged receipt, but has not moved to open discussions formally.

President Roosevelt told newsmen, after the Prime Minister's visit in November, that Canada favored speedy conclusion of a seaway pact. Some sources speculated on whether the United States' enlivened defence program would spur negotiations for the proposed route to the Atlantic for large cargo vessels and construction of electric generating plants involved.

Goebbels Recovering From Flu, Nazis State, "Horsewhipped" Says Foreign Reports

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—(CP-Havas).—Authorized Nazi sources to-day said that Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels is rapidly recovering from an attack of intestinal influenza and left his bed three days ago after spending Christmas at his home. These sources said it is hoped he will be able to make a New Year's broadcast scheduled for 7 p.m. to-morrow.

(The Nazi statements were taken as an indirect answer to reports published abroad, but not confirmed in any quarter, that Goebbels had been horsewhipped. The London Daily Mirror reported to-day that Goebbels was beaten by friends of the actor, Gustav Froelich when they found him in the apartment of Froelich's wife, the film actress, Lida Barova).

Board Of Review Advocated For Mental Cases;

Magone Report Ends 4 Months Of Hearings And Suggests Wide Changes

TORONTO, Dec. 30 (CP).—Advocating establishment of a board of review for mental cases and sterilization of certain types of mentally unfit persons, the report of the Magone commission on conditions in Ontario mental hospitals was expected to be brought before the Provincial Cabinet Council today.

The report, compiled by a three-man commission headed by Clifford R. Magone, solicitor in the Ontario Attorney-General's Department, was made public yesterday after four months of hearings at provincial mental institutions and at the Legislative buildings here. It commends hospital superintendents and staff members on their work "under very trying circumstances" and urges sweeping changes in the Ontario Medical Act.

While it says that "in no case does it appear that there has been a wrongful certification or that a patient has been detained longer than was necessary for his proper treatment," the report advises establishment of a four-man board to review the cases of patients whose certification or detention is protested.

The commission, urging set-up of the board to "create a better feeling in the public mind," would have it headed by a lay chairman and completed by two psychiatrists and a general practitioner. It would operate as a separate unit from the Provincial Health Department, though possibly under supervision of the Health Minister.

Question of Girls.

Evidence was submitted to the commission, the report says, to the effect that a "large number" of girls have been committed to the Ontario Hospital at Cobourg "because they have become pregnant, and had it not been for that they never would have found themselves in an institution for the mentally defective."

"If sterilization could be carried out, while these girls would still be sex problems in the community, they would not be the same problem that they are now," the report says.

"We therefore recommend for the consideration of the government an

Britain, France Bar Italy Voice In Suez

By Pierre Maillaud
(Copyright, 1938, The Havas News Agency.)

LONDON, Dec. 30 (CP-Havas)—Great Britain and France have decided after week-long conversations that Italian participation in control of the Suez Canal is out of the question, it was learned here today.

Neither France nor Great Britain would agree to such a concession even if there should be a lessening of the French-Italian tension caused by Italian agitation for French territory, it was said.

It was also learned that when Prime Minister Chamberlain goes to Rome next month he will not seek to mediate between Italy and France, although he may tell Premier Mussolini that further withdrawals of Italian troops from Spain would create a favorable atmosphere for French-Italian talks.

In an exchange of views with the British government, the Egyptian government has taken a stand strongly opposed to Italian participation in control of the Suez Canal.

With the views of the British, French and Egyptian governments thus in accord, it was said that only a complete change in the international situation, with real "moral disarmament," would make it possible to envisage a change in the canal's administration.

1938 Licenses Remain Good Till March 31

TORONTO, Dec. 30 (CP)—Ontario motorists can go out and enjoy themselves New Year's Eve with 1938 licence plates on their automobiles and without worrying as to whether they'll need 1939 plates for Jan. 1.

J. P. Bickell, issuer of motor licences for Ontario, said today present plates are good until March 31, 1939, end of the government's fiscal year. Under legislation passed as the last session of the legislature, the motor-licence year was changed, effective in 1939, to correspond with the government fiscal year. In previous years, licences were good from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31.

"All motor vehicle licences and driving permits are valid until March 31," Mr. Nickel said. "The term now coincides with the fiscal year."

Boxer Shoots Wife As 50 Dancers Duck

GREENFIELD, O., Dec. 30 (AP).—Fifty dining and dancing patrons scurried under tables, ducked behind counters and raced for exits early today when an amateur boxer sprayed a small cafe with bullets, wounding his estranged wife, two other women and himself.

Constable Wendell Crishman, in the cafe when the shooting occurred, identified the gunman as William Cross, 29, amateur boxer and baseball umpire.

Cross was under police guard in a hospital where his wife, Katherine, 20, shot in the abdomen and breast, was given an even chance to recover. Her companions, Miss Lois Curry and Miss Esther Smalley, suffered flesh wounds.

Mrs. Cross had filed suit for divorce and a hearing was scheduled for today. Cross had asked dismissal of the petition.

Lone Loyalist Destroyer Fails In Dash

Sinks Enemy Sloop Before Being Chased Onto Beach

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 30.—(AP).—A daring dash for freedom through blazing guns of Spanish insurgent warships and shore batteries ended in failure for a lone government destroyer to-day, amid the crashing of shells in startled Gibraltar itself.

The Jose Luis Diez, a virtual prisoner here since August, attempted to sneak through a gauntlet of lurking insurgent ships in the pitch darkness of early morning. But destructive fire of her enemy forced her aground only 100 yards from the Gibraltar shore with seven of her crew killed and 11 wounded.

Before grounding, the destroyer struck a heavy blow on her own account by ramming and sinking the 1,500-ton insurgent sloop Jupiter.

Shortly after the darkened 1,650-ton Jose Luis slipped from the protection of the Gibraltar harbor the short-lived, one-sided naval battle began.

Guns began to blaze from the 10,000 ton cruiser Canarias and other insurgent warships. Insurgent batteries at Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, some 15 miles acros sthe straits, also went into action.

Gibraltar Houses Wrecked.

Shells from the Canarias tore through and destroyed two houses on Gibraltar's Catalan bay. Several occupants were injured and taken to hospital.

The fact that the shells landed on British soil, injuring British subjects, may lead to vigorous British diplomatic or other action.

After the ramming, gunfire from the vessels and Ceuta forts compelled the Jose Luis to run aground on the eastern beach of Gibraltar. She immediately landed her dead and wounded.

A score of the crew of the Jose Luis were killed and many wounded in the battle with the Canarias and other insurgent ships in the straits last August, which forced her to limp into Gibraltar for refuge and repairs.

To-day's battle followed bombing of a British ship in the Mediterranean yesterday.

Barber Death Being Probed

Barber, who was in his 58th year, had been an employee of the Goodrich Company at Akron for over twenty years. He was buried in Little Lake cemetery here.

Shah Dislikes Slur Cuts French Dealings

PARIS, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Iranian Minister Sepah Bodi called today at the French foreign office to announce France and Iran (Persia) no longer are related diplomatically.

The breach was over the French word for cat, "chat," which is pronounced "shah" and which was used as a pun in three French newspaper articles.

Iran's ruler, the shah, protested through Bodi that he did not like being confused with cats. Despite French assurances that nothing derogatory had been intended, his government cut off relations.

French officials pondered how to correct what the shah evidently considered an indignity. Two of the puns were recent. The other had strained relations between France and Iran before.

5 Children Die With Mother In 'Peg Blaze

WINNIPEG, Dec. 30 — (CP).—Flames roaring in 25 below zero weather through the two-storey frame house of Leslie Lyle Robson in suburban St. James last night brought death to Mrs. Robson and five children.

Only the father and the oldest of six children, 12-year-old Stanley, escaped the fire which broke out about 11 p.m. shortly after they had retired. Robson, a coal dealer, is in serious condition in hospital suffering from burns, cuts and exposure. Stanley suffered only severe shock.

The dead are Mrs. Wretha Robson, 31; Shirley, 10; Dorothy, seven; Doreen and Donald, four-year-old twins; and George, 2½ months.

Thomos Baird, assistant fire commissioner, said it was the worst dwelling fire in Winnipeg's history. Not since eight died and 10 were injured in the Medway Court apartment house fire Sept. 1, 1929, has the city experienced such a death toll.

Other serious fires in Winnipeg were in St. Boniface College Nov. 25, 1922, 10 dead; Winnipeg theatre fire Dec. 24, 1926, four dead; and Casa Loma block fire April 14, 1928, five dead.

Baird was unable to state cause of last night's fire. The two survivors were unable to tell a coherent story. Neighbors aroused by Robson's cries turned in calls to police and fire departments but the flames had made such headway entry to the house was impossible.

Stories Differ.

Stanley, found standing bewildered and frightened outside the blazing house on Queen street clad only in his pajamas in the bitter cold, was taken to a neighbor's home.

"Dad yelled out 'run' and I got up and ran downstairs and out the door," he said. "Some man picked me up and carried me over here."

The father, however, said he threw Stanley out an upstairs window onto the verandah roof, then jumped through after him. They both jumped from the roof to the ground, he said.

"I tried to go back in," he sobbed. "The flames were too bad. The hall was like a furnace."

A neighbor, Frank Spickett, found Robson walking wildly around in the snow in his bare feet, clad only in underwear.

"For God's sake get my children, get my children," the father was crying. He was taken to Spickett's home until an ambulance arrived.

Mrs. Robson, clutching Donald, one of the twins, in her arms, was found on the floor of the bathroom where she apparently had fled seeking shelter from the flames. Shirley's body was found in a crouching position on the floor of the back bedroom of the six-room house. In the same room, beneath the bed clothes of the double bed, lay George, the baby, well swathed in blankets. He had smothered. Doreen and Dorothy lay dead in the front bedroom.

7 Ex-Convicts Hunted In Toronto

Believed To Blame For Holdup In West-End Area

TORONTO, Dec. 30 (CP)—Police said today they were investigating the activities in Toronto of a gang of former Kingston Penitentiary prisoners believed responsible for the hold-up and robbery of a west-end resident. One man already is in custody, charged with vagrancy, and seven others are sought.

The investigation got under way following a report seven men entered a west-end house Wednesday night demanding a share of $600 worth of loot obtained, it was understood, by a man living in the house in a robbery outside Toronto. The intruders left after taking $28 from the householder.

It was reported threats to torture the man were made as the gang sat in the house drinking the householder's whiskey. The robbery victim later left the house and, according to information reaching police, was assaulted on a downtown street by another man. Police said they had located the robbery victim but he refused to lay a complaint.

Croll Sidesteps Oshawa Rally

OSHAWA, Ont., Dec. 30—(CP).—Expected to address a public meeting here last night on behalf of municipal candidate sponsored by the United Automobile Workers of America, David A. Croll, newly-elected Mayor of Windsor and Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Windsor-Walkerville, failed to appear.

C. H. Millard, Oshawa, Canadian representative of the international board of the U.A.W.A., told a crowd of more than 1,000 that Mr. Croll would not make an appearance because "he was afraid it might inject the idea that outsiders were being brought into Oshawa to tell the people how to vote."

Mr. Millard said the eyes of Ontario and parts of the United States were focussed on Oshawa during the present municipal campaign which ends with elections Monday. Other speakers included Mayor A. S. McLeese and council candidates.

British Ship Seized 2nd Time By Japs

TOKYO, Dec. 30.—(CP-Havas) — The British freighter Hannah Moller again ran afoul of Japanese maritime authorities today when for the second time in less than a year its officers and crew were taken into custody for alleged violation of the Japanese military secrets protective law.

Maritime police at Muloran, on the southwestern coast of Hokkaido, said the captain of the freighter, two British mates and 44 Chinese seamen were in custody and being examined for entering an unnamed forbidden Japanese port.

The master of the freighter said he entered the banned area to seek refuge from a storm while en route from Miyagi to Muroran. The Hannah Moller is a 2,931-ton freighter owned by Moller and Company of Shanghai. It is operating under charter of the Dairen Steamship Company. Early this year the owners of the freighter were fined 1,000 yen ($290) because it entered a forbidden zone.

Last Minute News Flashes

TORONTO. — A "gentlemanly-looking" gunman entered the offices of a downtown wholesale grocery firm today, walked into a vault and held up two executives making up the weekly payroll. He escaped on foot with $1,635, of which $1,100 was in cheques. The bandit was pursued by police and citizens and was believed to have facilitated his escape by changing clothes in a building near where the holdup occurred.

2 Crushed Cars End Hopes Miners Alive

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont., Dec. 30 (CP).—Two steel tram cars, flattened by the terrific pressure of thousands of tons of rock, were mute evidence today that two miners entombed in the depths of the Lake Shore gold mine by an underground explosion could not have survived.

The cars, part of a mine train being used by 33-year-old John Holubec and Vito Vlaisevgevich, 40, when the stope on which they were working collapsed late Tuesday night, were uncovered by rescue crews early today. The cars were found to have been flattened.

Since the accident, rescue crews working in half-hourly shifts have been buoyed by the hope the entombed men had got within the protection of the steel train before the rock walls collapsed. It was thought barely possible the thick steel would support the weight of the rock. The hope vanished today.

Members of the drill crews coming off shift today were agreed Holubec and Vlaisgevich had been killed. The men at noon today had been buried for 84 hours. No sounds have been heard from the trapped men. Reports last night tappings on pipes and rock could be heard were discounted today by mine officials who said the noises were the rumblings of shifting rock.

Rescuers are working under disheartening conditions. As soon as tunnels are dug through the huge piles of rock fresh falls fill the holes. The rock formation in the section of the mine where the work is in progress, 2,400 feet underground, is said to be of porous formation and susceptible to faulting and blasts.

French Sell Shares In Skoda Works

BERLIN, Dec. 30 — (AP). — A D.N.B. (German news agency) despatch from Prague said to-day the French arms concern, Schneider-Creusot, had sold its interests in the Skoda Munitions Works to a Czech-Slovak group representing the government.

"Changed conditions" were given as the reason for the sale.

(Pilsen, where the works are situated, is now surrounded on three sides by German territory.)

Schneider-Creusot, through a holding company, had controlled 50 per cent. of the Skoda shares, said to have a total value of 220,000,000 Czecho-Slovak crowns (about $7,500,00).

The transaction placed a majority of the company's shares under Czecho-Slovak control.

Syria Calls France Step Out

Independence Move Threatens To Be Open Strife

PARIS, Dec. 30— (AP). — Conflict between Syrian agitation for immediate independence and French determination to retain her naval and military foothold in Syria added to-day to France's colonial difficulties.

Reports reaching Paris said the Syrian Independent Nationalist Party had sent an ultimatum to the Syrian Premier demanding immediate freedom from French rule.

Premier DeJemil Marvam, who had just returned from Paris, was reported to have declared in a speech "We shall have freedom by legal or extralegal means." Other reports told of widespread popular discontent in Syria threatening to break into the open.

France governs Syria under League mandate, but by a 1936 treaty, not yet ratified by the French Parliament, is to give Syria independence in 1939.

Meanwhile military authorities indicated the battalion of 1,000 Senegalese sharpshooters due to sail tomorrow for Djibouti will be followed by additional battalions shortly.

$150,000 Fraud Sends Broker Down 7 Years

DETROIT, Dec. 30—(AP).—Norman Berry, former president of the Detroit brokerage house which bore his name, was sentenced today to serve seven years in prison and ordered to pay a fine of $3,000 by federal judge Edward J. Moinet. The sentence was the maximum the court could impose.

Berry pleaded guilty to two counts of a 16-count indictment charging, in general, illegal brokerage house oprations through which the government said investors were defrauded of $150,000.

Eight other men were sentenced in connection with the operations of the Berry firm. They included Sol Blumberg, New York, salesman, sentenced to four years and fined $1,000.

France Stands Pat On Territory As Eventful Year Winds Up

(Copyright, 1938, The Havas News Agency.)

PARIS, Dec. 30.—(CP-Havas.)—An almost complete revision of the bases of French foreign policy and, in domestic affairs, the collapse of the popular front coalition of Left parties, marked the year 1938 for France.

As the year ended this country found itself embroiled with Italy over the Fascist nation's campaign for cession of French territory, with the Daladier government determined not to give an inch.

Events abroad, most important being the partition of Czecho-Slovakia, reduced to secondary importance the two traditional mainstays of French foreign policy — the League of Nations and collective security. On the other hand, France's other major support, the Anglo-French entente, was strengthened and coordinated.

The strength and importance of the Anglo-French understanding was reaffirmed by the three French foreign ministers of 1938, Yvon Delbos, Joseph Paul-Boncour and Georges Bonnet. It was consecrated by the popular welcome given to King George and Queen Elizabeth during their State visit here in July.

When 1938 opened the Spanish problem was the immediate one. Chancellor Hitler had not clearly expressed his intentions regarding Central Europe and France was uneasy over the presence of full Italian divisions and many "technicians" on the Pyrenees frontier.

France Warns Italy.

Mrs. Johnson Loses Plane Crash Suit

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 30.—(AP).—A Superior Court jury has denied Mrs. Osa Johnson the $706,539 damages she sought for the death of her husband, Martin Johnson, explorer, and her own injuries in an airplane crash here Jan. 12, 1937.

The jury found for the defendants, Western Air Express Corporation and United Airports Company, last night.

Mrs. Johnson charged negligence by the defendants in the operation of a transport plane which crashed in the San Gabriel mountains shortly before reaching Union Air Terminal at Burbank.

The defendants contended the accident was unavoidable.

PHILADEPHIA, Dec. 30 (AP)—A pistol cracked in Judge Francis Brown's court room yesterday.

The bullet ripped through an indictment on a desk in front of the bench. As astonished prosecutor held the smoking pistol, a part of the evidence, in his hand.

When the judge caught his breath, he quietly said: "We thought it was empty; proceed with the case."

ROME, Dec. 30 (CP-Havas). — Regime Fascista, extremist Fascist organ, today reported a resounding victory of Italian troops over "cowardly" French and Czechoslovak forces in Spain.

The newspaper's correspondent, Julio Talamazzi, pictured the battle as one between Italians on the one side and Frenchmen and Czechoslovaks on the other.

The "resounding victory for the Italians" was very easy in view of the "shameful cowardice" of their enemies, the correspondent wrote. As soon as the "irresistible (Italian) Legionnaires" opened the breach in the government lines, he added, "the front collapsed because of the cowardice of its defenders and especially of the Frenchmen and Czechoslovaks."

"The French, who utter crude and vulgar ironies regarding the goose-step and the Roman step, showed us the hare-step and the rabbit-step."

New Syrian Deal French Aim In Colony Crisis

PARIS, Dec. 30 — (AP).—Parliamentary deputies said today France would ask military concessions from Syria in a new French-Syrian agreement, because of uncertainty created by Italian colonial agitation.

The new agreement would be a substitute for the 1936 treaty granting Syria independence and release from the French mandate. Syria ratified the treaty but the French parliament has not.

France cannot risk launching an independent Syria,' a government spokesman declared, at the very moment the French heed a firm grip on all Mediterranean military and naval bases.

The deputies said Premier Edouard Daladier decided to send a senatorial committee to suggest to the Syrians a new agreement under which they would have a large measure of independence but with French in control of police and military functions.

Djibouti, the French gulf of Aden port, was quiet, with two French warships enroute to protect it. Senegalese troops were leaving Marseille today to strengthen the Djibouti garrison.

$60,000 In Machinery Burns At Buffalo

BUFFALO, N.Y., Dec. 30 — (A.P.).—One fireman was injured early to-day during a three-hour fight to subdue a fire in a five-storey machinery store and warehouse in downtown Buffalo.

Flying glass lacerated the right eye of Fireman Emmett O'Connor so seriously he was taken to a hospital.

Fire Commissioner William R. Castimore estimated damage at $60,000 to $70,000 after flames had destroyed the interior of the structure occupied by the Buffalo Mill Supply Company.

Heavy machinery valued at thousands of dollars was stored in the building. For a time the flames threatened adjacent buildings occupied by the Buffalo Evening News, and alarmed guests in the 12-storey Hotel Worth on the other side.

Loyalists Rush To Save Artesa

HENDAYE, France, December 30.—(AP)—The Spanish government rushed all available men and guns on the Northern Catalan battlefront today to the defence of the strategic Artesa triangle, slowly vanishing under General Franco's insurgent offensive.

The vital road centre, called a "key to Catalonia," lay under the pounding of insurgent guns from the north and west.

Pushing slowly across the bloody Balaguer Bridgehead sector, the insurgent command sent another column pointing toward Artesa from the southwest.

Both high commands appeared convinced possession of the industrial town meant a long stride toward victory or defeat for the insurgents' great drive in Northern Lerida province.

After a day of some of the bitterest fighting in the war, in which General Franco finally captured the southern key town of Grandaella, both forces concentrated their efforts of Artesa.

Throughout the night, the government launched successive counter-attacks at Balaguer bridgehead forts wrested from them in the last two days of fighting.

The two main insurgent threats against Artesa were positions taken yesterday, Montero Peak, dominating the town of Cameresa, and the Riverside hills across the Segre river from Artesa.

Franco's troops last night started up the Balaguer road, but found the going hard when government forces drove into the angle between them and their comrades on the left bank of the Segre.

Life Is Found Worth Living Kiwanians Told

An address peculiarly appropriate to the day was delivered to the Kiwanians to-day by Alexander Mowat, retired Peterborough school inspector, who spoke on happiness, in the course of which he outlined requisites for a happy life in 1939 or any new year.

Despite want, misery, destruction, and death stalking the earth to-day, Mr. Mowat found life to be worth living. "Yes, I still believe that life is worth living. When we take a long view of history we see that civilization has had its ebbs and flows. We are in the ebb-tide today, but the current will turn, and with its turn better days will come back to us. Right must ultimately prevail. Perhaps the painful discipline of to-day is being sent to fit us for a higher form of civilization where 'Man to man the world o'er, Will brothers be, for a' that.'"

To be happy one must known his own mental and physical strength and not tax himself to too great an extent. Classifying humans as belonging to one of four classes—brilliant, normal, dull normal, and sub-normal — the speaker thought that a person "dull normal" had the greatest chance foh appiness in this world unless he taxed himself beyond his capacities. He quoted Socrates' famed "Know Thyself" as excellent advice to follow in the pursuit of happiness.

To have and to promote happiness it is essential that a person have self-confidence, even some egotism. "Very little would be accomplished in this world were it not for egotism," he said.

Other Essentials.

Worthy ideals and a task to accomplish were other essentials he cited. A life-long process of education is also necessary. "In Canada we have had the idea that when we get through secondary school or college we are through with education." Such is not the case and in England adult education is far ahead of this country, he said.

He claimed an attractive personality more important than brilliance in reaching success. He defined personality as "the acquiring of habits and skills that give pleasure to other people."

Other requirements he named included a life of action for most people, many interests such as civic, national, social, religious, and athletic; satisfying social relationships; moderate excitement; a sense of humour; a hobby.

"I think the chief difference between men lies in their background," he said. To some that background is given, and all others may win it by self-education.

Most important in his view of a happy life was that "you must share your happiness with others in order to have lasting happiness for yourself."

"Happiness may be found in the taste of wholesome food; the riotous gaiety of flowers and the lilting song of birds; the splendour of sunset and the mystery of starlight; the joys of human comradeship and love; and, best of all, in the rapturous sense of God's pervading presence."

Miss Lecna Comstock was guest artist at the luncheon, and treated Kiwanians to an exhibition of unusual grace in a ballet dance. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Eveline Foster.

Goldfield's Tents Now Town Of 800

GOLDFIELDS, Sask., Dec. 30.—(CP)—From a tent city to a good-sized mining community in three years is the story of this booming town 550 miles north of Prince Albert.

Three years ago mining men set up a camp, consisting of half a dozen tents, close to the Hudson's Bay Company Trading post. Since that time the population has increased to almost 800, the trading post has been enlarged, two hotels have been built, a number of restaurants and two motion picture theatres adorn the main thoroughfare.

The originals of Goldfields were fortunate if they received mail twice a month. Now mail and periodicals are delivered six times a week. The Mackenzie air service operates out of Edmonton three times a week and another company flies mail out of Price Albert to the miners and their families on a similar schedule.

Men in the community worked together to build an ice rink. There is a four-team hockey league consisting of Athona gold mines, two teams from Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, and a team representing Goldfields. Athona won the title last year and are leading the league in the present schedule.

Recently a curling rink sprang up and the miners are proving masters with the besom and stane.

drawal of foreign volunteers from Spain, meanwhile adhering to the non-intervention policy. In June Spanish insurgent planes bombed French border towns. France announced any subsequent attacking planes would be shot down.

The year ended without the withdrawal scheme having been fully applied. The Spanish government sent home its foreign combatants, but on the insurgent side, despite repatriation of about 10,000 Italians, there were still large numbers of Italian fighters. Italian participation in the Spanish war was one of the factors contributing to erect a barrier between Rome and Paris.

At the beginning of 1938 the Italian embassy here and the French embassy in Rome were headed by Charges D'Affaires. France would not accredit a new ambassador to Victor Emmanuel as King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia, and Italy had recalled its ambassador in retaliation.

On May 12, the League of Nations gave each member state freedom to decide for itself on recognition of the Italian conquest of Ethiopia. France thereupon planned to name an ambassador to Rome. Two days later Premier Benito Mussolini, speaking at Genoa, torpedoed a scheme for Franco-Italian talks by asserting that no rapprochement between them was possible as long as France and Italy were "on different sides of the barricades" in Spain.

A New Peace Move.

Not until October, after the upset in Central Europe and the Munich four-power meeting, were attempts at a Paris-Rome understanding renewed. Andre Francois-Poncet, French envoy in Berlin, was named ambassador to Rome and on November 7 took up his new post. France had recognized the Italian conquest of Ethiopia.

Three weeks later, on Nov. 30, Francois-Poncet was present at a demonstration in the Italian Chamber of Deputies. When Foreign Minister Ciano referred to tIaly's "natural aspirations," members of the Chamber stood up shouting "Tunisia! Nice! Savoy! Corsica! Djibouti!" This was the opening gun in a Fascist campaign for French territory to which Italy laid claim for one reason or another.

This campaign was never given an "official" character. However, Italy in December denounced the 1935 Laval-Mussolini accords which had regulated the status of Italians in Tunisia and had settled other questions in Africa.

Franco-German relations as the year ended seemed improved. In December Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop came to Paris to sign an agreement which pledged respect of the present frontiers of the two countries and settlement of disputes by consultation.

$50,000 Deb Binge Held First Class Example For Share-the-Wealth "Beefers"

NEW YORK, Dec. 30 (CP) — Brenda Diana Duff Frazier was commended indirectly by the tabloid New York Daily News today for helping dispose of some of the United States' surplus produce among 2,000 socialite consumers.

The newspaper made its compliment in taking an editorial whack at those whom it called "share-the-wealthers" for complaining about the $50,000 coming out party staged at the Ritz Carlton Hotel for the No. 1 New York glamor girl whose grandfather is Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the Canadian banker.

The News said most of the money went into active circulation among people who in turn would spend it soon. It also said the $10,000 spent for food and drink for Diana's guests would do something toward reducing the surplus of the country's wild rice, black beans, rye and Scotch.

"We're not, god wot, social butterflies," the News said. "But if this blowout didn't share the wealth with quite a few people who could use it, what would?

"These share - the - wealthers, most of them, are the people who are always complaining that wealthy people can't, don't or won't spend enough of their incomes on consumers' goods. But then, when some wealthy family gets expansive and actually circulates 50,000 smackers or so many share-the-wealthers turn around and emit loud beefs about the iniquity of it all. We don't think this is reasoning."

Urge Reforesting To Pay Off Debt

TORONTO, Dec. 30 (CP).—A gigantic reforestation scheme is proposed by E. Burnham Wyllie, candidate for the reeveship of suburban Scarborough, as a means of paying off the township's $5,000,000 debenture debt and provide a "beneficial substitute for the present relief racket."

Speaking at an election campaign meeting last night, Wyllie said that if elected he would urge the planting of from 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 trees on 6,000 acres of waste land, most of which is owned by the township. The project, undertaken as an unemployment relief scheme with co-operation of the Dominion and Provincial governments, would "automatically abolish relief," the candidate claimed.

He said that within a few years the plantation would begin to provide revenue to pay for the original outlay, maintenance costs and interests on the township debentures. At the end of 40 years, the trees would be worth between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000 estimated on current timber prices "which by that time will have trebled."

Wyllie added: "The trees would mature at the same time as the refunded bonds mature."

Peterborough's New Traffic Bylaw Places Control Of Traffic Entirely In Hands Of Police

The traffic bylaw recently passed by the city council is a consolidation of fourteen other bylaws that have been in effect and are now repealed to make way for the new regulations applying to all traffic on the streets of Peterborough. It does not come into effect until it has received the approval of the Ontario Department of Highways.

The new bylaw places control of street traffic entirely in the hands of the police, and necessary signs will be set up when the sanction of the Department reaches the council.

A compendium of the important clauses is published herewith for the information of the public.

No vehicle shall be allowed to stand in front of the entrance to a theatre, hotel, auditorium, office building or any building where large assemblages are being held, or where goods or merchandise is taken in or out; nor shall the entrance to any lane or driveway into private garages or into any building be permitted.

Special Parking Area.

A special parking area is bounded by Brock, Aylmer and King Streets, and on the east by Water Street, and on Hunter Street from Water to Sheridan Street. In this area parking shall be parallel with the curb with a clearance of at least four feet from any other parked car, including its bumpers. Parking is permitted on both sides of the streets in this area. Thirty minutes are allowed for parking on George Street in this area and on its other streets between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m. the time limit is one hour on days other than Saturdays, and on Saturdays no vehicles shall be parked on such other streets longer than one hour at any time of the day or night, provided however that no vehicle shall be parked on Aylmer Street between Simcoe and Charlotte Streets and on Louis and Chambers Street, and, provided also that no vehicle that is longer than eighteen feet including its load shall be parked in the special area.

Restricted Parking Areas.

No vehicle is allowed to stand or be parked on the south side of McDonnel, Murray and Brock Streets between George and Aylmer Streets; on the east side of Park Street from Patterson Street to Albert Street; on either side of George Street from Prince Street to Lansdowne Street; on the north side of Charlotte Street from Downie to Park Street.

On other streets no vehicle shall stand or be parked for longer than five consecutive hours.

No vehicle shall stand on the sections of streets designated as bus stops; nor within ten feet of a fire hydrant; nor on any bridge in the city.

On Narrow Streets.

Here's another clause:— "No vehicle shall stand or park directly opposite another vehicle which is already standing on the other side of the street, where the width of the vehicular travelled part of the street, or the width between the curbs, is less than 36 feet, or where such standing would prevent the free passage of two lines of traffic."

And this is a new one:— "No vehicle shall stand on the corners of street intersections within a distance of twenty feet back from the corner of each intersecting street, "corner" being defined as the intersecting right angle point of the curbs."

Vehicles of all kinds must park within six inches of the curb, or, in winter, as near to that limit as the conditions permit.

Fire department apparatus shall have the right of way in responding to a fire alarm.

Loading and Unloading.

Whenever possible vehicles shall be loaded or unloaded from the side and be parked within six inches of the curb. No vehicle shall remain backed up to the curb except during the actual loading or unloading required. The horse or horses attached to a vehicle backed up to the curb shall be turned at right angles to the vehicle and in the direction in which traffic on the street is moving; and such vehicles shall not stand on any part of the sidewalk.

Through Highways.

Aylmer Street from Lansdowne to Charlotte, from Charlotte to McDonnel, and from McDonnel to Dublin. Rubidge from Rink to Charlotte. Reid Street from Wolfe to Sherbrooke, from Charlotte to Hunter, and from Hunter to the northern limit of the city.

Hunter Street from Aylmer to Rubidge and from Reid to Park. Park Street from Lansdowne to Wolfe, from Sherbrooke to McDonnel.

McDonnel from George to Reid; Queen Street from Hunter to Simcoe; Hunter Street west and east from the east side of Water Street to Armour Road.

Park Hill Road from Armour Road to Water Street and from George Street to Reid Street.

Louis and Chambers Streets are for one way traffic from north to south, and parking is forbidden in those streets.

Delivery vehicles shall have the owner's name and address painted plainly shown on them. Safety zones that are marked as such must not be entered by any vehicle "while a person is thereon or about to enter thereon".

There are many other clauses to the new bylaw, and it is understood that persons are presumed to inform themselves as to the content of the bylaw.

Roses In Full Bloom Out In Victoria, While East Shivers

Victoria, Dec. 30 (CP)

WHILE most of Canada shivered in the grip of a below-zero cold spell yesterday, many Victorians tended the flowers in their gardens and didn't even bother with overcoats.

Scores of rose bushes were in bloom and dinner tables were decorated with freshly-picked flowers.

The lowest thermometer reading of the past week was 36 degrees above zero, with the mercury in the high 40's during the day.

Dog Salmon Alarms Indians And Eskimos

EDMONTON, Dec. 30 — (CP). — Caught by a trapper in Great Bear Lake, 1,100 miles north of here, a vicious-looking fish is believed by natives to be a sign of sickness and death, famine and poor fur catch.

Pilot North Sawle of Canadian Airways told about the fish, two feet long, after return from the north.

Sawle sai dtrader F. W. Hall, told him the Indians and Eskimos in the area were concerned over the appearance of the fish. Pilot Sawle brought the fish to Edmonton.

Identifying the fish as a dog salmon, officials of the provincial fisheries department said it was not common to northern lakes but was found chiefly in the North Pacific off the west coast. However, it was not unusual, they said, that such a fish should be found in the lake as it probably came up the Mackenzie River from the Arctic Ocean.

Venezuela has a housing shortage.

"Just What I Wanted"

A rather good story of a reed organ which was not being used in Peterborough finding its way to the cabin of a settler in the burned-out area near Fort Frances was told when R. N. Vinton of the Red Cross Society was in this city. Mr. Vinton found a settler of 65 years who had lost the one thing he desired most of all to save when his shack burned—an old organ. The loser of the organ is described as a well-educated man, an Oxford graduate and a thorough musician. The case appealed to Mr. Vinton and when he came to Peterborough several months ago he mentioned the incident to an audience here, a report of which was published in the Examiner.

The result was that two organs found their way to the fire-swept area and on Christmas day the musician of the north found himself in possession of an instrument and he was certain he had received a gift almost beyond his expectation.

There is something worth thinking about in this. The organ from Peterborough had probably not been used for some time, as few such instruments are now played. So it would be useless here, but highly useful elsewhere. It might well have been in the road here, but the centre of attraction in that little cabin 20 miles out in the country from Fort Frances. The thoughtful people of Peterborough who attended to sending two organs to the expectant musician performed a greater kindness than they knew.

Able To Deny It

Our good citizen, E. H. D. Hall, has in his 87th year joined the group of people whose membership fortunately is quite limited, but which depends for admission on having been reported as dead. That report was actually carried in Toronto evening papers at a time when he had been receiving congratulations and honor as a Past Master of a Masonic lodge in this city for sixty years and a membership in the fraternity of 63 years. No doubt Mr. Hall will receive word of explanation and apology for the appearance of the report, but the circulation of such news is nothing except distressing no matter what explanations are made.

That is one of the advantages a local paper has when publishing news about its own people. The home paper lives rather close to them; its reporters see them frequently, they talk with them and they are very apt to hear quickly enough if they are sick.

The regrettable feature of such a report is that it is apt to prove embarrassing to a man with a wide circle of acquaintances in the city and outside. Those who see the first report may possibly not come across a corrected story in a later issue. It has often happened that way. It is also distressing to members of the family or immediate relatives. Residents of Peterborough city and district are delighted to know that Mr. Hall has been able to state definitely and in person that the published report was not accurate.

His Advice Was Good

When trying to settle a family trouble case in an Ontario court hearing the magistrate remarked that if man and wife knew more of each other's affairs there would be no trouble, and he explained that he included in that the financial standing of the husband and wife. He believed a wife would be more satisfied if she knew exactly what her husband was receiving, and what he was doing with his money. Above all else she should not be placed in a position where she had to go and ask for money to run the house and pay her accounts.

And after having delivered himself of that advice the magistrate could go home knowing he had done a good day's work. For he had. We believe a man many a time would be stopped from making a foolish move if he talked it over with his wife instead of with some travelling salesman who had turned more pressure on him than he was able to resist. The wife might be able to put her foot on the brakes before the husband signed his name on the dotted line.

If a wife knows her husband's income and receives a just portion of it for household expenses then friction has been removed. She can go ahead intelligently and keep out of debt and also be saved the embarrassing uncertainty of wondering whether she is spending too much.

The fact that the husband gets out and earns the money does not for a moment justify him in believing that it belongs to him. Nor does it. This business of being married is a joint affair, and while the husband may be out at work his wife is also working equally hard in the home. Get the financial arrangement of a home on a fair basis with nothing concealed and a good deal of trouble is eliminated.

A Man Can Be Very Silly

There is at least one man in Toronto who must have produced a good-sized headache for a number of people in recent days even if he does bear so substantial a name as Patrick Kelly. During a period when banditry was frequent and the hold-up business was annoying large Mr. Kelly added to the score by relating a tale which appeared to be evidence of the extent to which bad men would dare go to secure money.

Patrick Kelly related he had been at the bank to cash a pay cheque and when going home on his bicycle thugs had overtaken him in a car and forced him to dismount and ride off with them. He had been held prisoner for a day or so and finally was driven back to the city and released—minus his cash.

It was a great story and few things were missed which would make it realistic. More recently Mr. Kelly has told a revised version of his narrative, probably under a little pressure from the police. He was not robbed; he was not molested; he was not taken out of the city. He had been on a spree for a couple of days and was either afraid or ashamed to go home and tell his wife.

Strange how a man with the name of Patrick Kelly would tell such a string of lies to the police of all people. He might have reserved his story for home consumption or peddled it among the neighbors, but when he tackled the police with it he was up the wrong alley. Probably it never occurred to him that police make it their business to sift all reports they receive and in short order they can verify or deny statements made to them. That's their business. Probably Toronto police were busy enough with real cases when they had to take time out to deal with Patrick Kelly's nonsense. When a full-grown man has a fairly story to relate to account for his absence from home while engaging in a drinking bout he should never entrust it to the police. They are too apt to take it apart.

Small Boys Did It

United States government owns a new mint at San Francisco, and architects, engineers and police have called it impregnable. It is protected by great walls, by steel which cannot be penetrated, tear gas equipment, heavy bars on all doors, secret locks, burglar alarms and also by a staff of guards. Of course a writer of good fiction could figure out—in print—how a bad man would worm his way in there, but otherwise one might conclude safely enough that it could not be done.

But it was done, and by two boys of 15 years. They had no equipment such as a skilled burglar might employ; they had no weapons, and yet they entered the premises and set the whole place in an uproar when their presence was discovered.

When they were handed over to police they had nothing much to tell and certainly nothing to disguise about their methods. They just went around to a side of the building where they saw a pipe, and shinnied up that to the second storey, where they came upon a partly open window. They shoved it farther open and dropped down inside. Certainly there was nothing complicated about that, and yet specialists had spent months preparing plans for the building and had agreed that the possibility of a person entering the place was so remote that it could be called non-existant. But they hadn't reckoned with two boys of 15 years who understood how to shinny up a drain pipe. The police are holding the two lads for the juvenile authorities to deal with, and at the same time they might well consider paying them a small reward for having demonstrated just how this great and much-fortified mint could be entered.

Grace Stirs Up Trouble

Grace Moore, the singer, has been giving several concerts in France, and by the time she was prepared to take a liner for United States she had managed to stir up quite a controversy. The Duchess of Windsor was in a box at one of her concerts and Miss Moore stopped before it and curtsied to the lady occupant.

Then the winter residents of the fashionable Cannes had something about which to talk, to gossip and to argue. The authorities on etiquette were taken down and dusted off to see what new light could be shed on this delicate situation. Once more it was proclaimed that the American singer had done an unpardonable thing, and that the Duchess of Windsor did not possess the rights of royalty. The range was extended to include the names of a number of English women who always courtsey to the Duchess, and those who "viewed with alarm" the dreadful thing which had been done rushed in with names of many others who would do no such thing.

And the cable editors are busy taking in that kind of thin stuff under the guise of important news, whereas the average man or woman does not care a hoot whether Grace Moore stood in front of the box where sat the Duchess and curtsied, shook a hand or turned a handspring.

Many Have Offended

A decision made in magistrate's court at Peterborough had to do with failure to attach a certificate of gift to venison which was found in possession of a district resident out of season. According to the evidence such certificates had been made out giving the names of the donors as well as the number of the licenses under which they had gone hunting, and had been handed to the recipient but were not attached to the meat as required by law.

The deer season in this district was from the 5th to the 20th of November, but the 20th was on a Sunday so the season was shortened to the extent of one day. It is the custom of a good many hunters to send cuts of venison they have taken to their friends, nor is there provision made that it can be sold. Many prefer to let the carcase hang for as much as two weeks before cutting, and that of course causes the distribution to be made at a time which is legally regarded as being "out of season."

We doubt whether the regulations are generally observed, and we have heard several hunters say they did not know it was necessary to place a card of donation on venison which they sent to a friend after the shooting season was over. And yet the rule is plain enough in the Game and Fishery Laws, where it is provided that any one who is in legal possession of venison in a closed season may use it himself or send it to others, provided—

> "...there is attached to such donated portion a statement signed by such donor setting forth the full name and address of such donor, and the number of the license under which such animal was taken."

How many times that regulation has been ignored we do not know, but the count would probably run high. In court here there was a fine of $20 because such notice of donation had not been affixed to sections of venison, and if all who have done the same thing were similarly fined the receipts at the seat of revenue in police circles would run high. The one thing which stands in the way of success at the moment is that recipients in the meantime have eaten the evidence.

NOTE AND COMMENT

There have been fewer demands in the last few days for a return to the good old-fashioned winters.

An Italian bank was held up and robbed of $250,000. Now we shall watch with interest to see what the Mussolini system does with a case like that.

Neutral observers admit that Japanese bombers are becoming more efficient. Due to the grizzly fact that they have been practising on the Chinese for 18 months.

Grand Duke Vladimir was proclaimed "Czar Presumptive of all Russians" in a courtly ceremony. It all took place in Paris, which seems to be about the safest way of carrying on such ceremonies.

The experts in such matters tell us that the issues of peace or war will be settled in 1939, and after that some friendly chap comes in and wishes us a Happy New Year.

And now they say James Weddell never discovered the far southern sea named after him. As the discovery was reported to have been made in 1823 there does not seem to be much that can be done about the thing now.

Forty travellers were stranded during a storm in the little village with the impressive name of Shakespeare on the western end of No. 7 Highway. It is a wonder that some progressive resident did not think of that as being the proper time to take a census.

Toronto Academy of Medicine passed a recommendation that ambulances should not travel over the legal 30 miles per hour. All of which seems sensible, but it will take away from the reporter his favorite phrase about the victim being "rushed to the hospital."

STUCK

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I would not care to be the man, who had to put in force a plan, to be dictator here; there are so many men I know, if I commanded them to go, they'd biff me in the ear.

¶ I'd have to think the whole night through, to find the next day's things to do I'd need a tidy heap; and then when come the next bright day, I'd long to find a stack of hay, where I could go to sleep.

¶ I'd have to look around the stores, and notice how they do their chores, and then I'd think and sit; if I found one not quite too good, nor running like I thought it should, I'd say 'twould have to quit.

¶ I'd tell the preachers what to say, how long they'd be allowed to pray, I'd measure with a string; the organ grinder must obey, I'm name the pieces he could play, the tunes the folk could sing.

¶ I'd tell the farmer in the field, that he must cut or raise his yield, how he should feed his cow; how many curls pigs' tails should bear, what clothes the hired man ought to wear, to 'tend the fatted sow.

¶ I'd order children how to walk, how they'd salute at every block, I'd regulate their health; I fear some day a man might come, to ask how such a thing be done—I wouldn't know myself.

Believes China Will Beat Japan

THAT JAPAN not only can never hope to conquer China but that the invaders will be driven out in from six months to a year is the opinion of one London, Ont., Chinese who returned this week from a 14-month visit to his native country. Lee Fai said that China's unconquerable spirit and her enormous reserves of man-power provide a bulwark of strength that can repel forever the battering ram of the Nipponese forces.

Lee Fai made it clear that this was not just his belief but that of the whole indominitable and still-unvanquished nation of which he is 1-400,000,000th. He has a wife and three children in Hoy Sun, a town about 100 miles west of Canton, and it was to assure himself of their safety that he left here a year ago last August. In all the months he was in China he never saw one Japanese at close range. More than a score of times, though, he saw their bombing planes roar down from the sky over his town on their mission of death and destruction. A locomotive factory was blown to bits before his eyes, and within a few weeks every factory in Hoy Sun which might be of any military importance was similarly destroyed from the air.

Lee Fai's observations seem to corroborate the widely held military opinion that the Japanese are notoriously poor marksmen. After every bombing attack their planes sweep low over his town and sprayed the streets with machine gun fire but only five Chinese met death in this fashion. This machine gunning, Lee Fai said, was all a part of the enemy's plan to terrorize the civilian populace and make them think Japanese victory is inevitable. After one or two such raids the Chinese flee from their homes into underground shelters at the sound of an airplane, there to hide until all danger has passed.

THE CHINESE long-range plan for eventual victory was outlined. Under their leader Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek the whole nation is undertaking a tremendous exodus to the western provinces more than a thousand miles from the conquered territories. Whole cities and towns have been uprooted, taking with them their universities, schools and all public property that can be moved. Following the trail over which Marco Polo went some seven centuries ago, the Chinese people are settling thmselves in "New China," prepared to "dig in" and begin life all over again. They reason that the farther they go, the more widespread will the Japanese army have to be. The patient Chinese "watch and wait" policy will eventually wear the enemy out from sheer physical and financial exhaustion. Already, they say, Japan's budget is strained to the breaking point, and since the defenders are on home ground they can afford to wait for years and years over the length and breadth of their vast empire until such time as war is no longer possible.

Not that Chiang Kai-Shek's plan is entirely one of passive waiting, Lee Fai added. More than 100,000 sharpshooters under Chu Teh, China's dreaded guerilla warrior, are roaming the land picking off invaders in places where the unfamiliar topography makes them easy prey. Every village and town, however, remote now from hostilities, has a small, highly trained standing army ready for the day when the Japanese are within fighting range. Meanwhile, Russia is pouring supplies in from the north and Great Britain has just granted another war loan. "So," says Lee Fai, "sure we win. Maybe six months, maybe year. But we win."

TALENTED ALGOMAN.

THERE is a man in town who can pick a pencil off the floor with his teeth and he'll be 70 years old come next August. His name is William W. Evans. In addition, says the Sault Ste. Marie Star, Bill has come back from the west with $7.50 left out of an original trip budget of $135. Which of these two feats is the most outstanding is for subscribers to judge. Of course, Mr. Evans called on a relative here and there in British Columbia and got chicken dinner and what not free. Besides that nobody tried to hold him up, which was probably fortunate for the said nobody.

It's a grand feeling to be limber at 69 and to be able to bring back $7.50 from anywhere these days. Remarkable chaps we raise in Algoma about which Mr. Evans was sedulous in spreading information. Likes the west but he isn't going back there. If you are 69 and can pick anything off the floor of this office come around and let's see you do it.

SIX MAIN GROUPS.

ACCORDING to Aristotle the 158 types of government could be roughly classified into six main groups. These were:

A—1. Where one man rules, subject to some extent to law and custom, and the common good his main aim: Kingship.
2. Where one rules, with his own will the only law, and his own interests his main aim: Tyranny.

B—1. Where a few rule, with some regard for the law, and chiefly for the common good: Aristocracy.
2. Where a few rule, chiefly for their own good: Oligarchy.

C—1. Where the whole body of citizens takes part in government, with the chief aim the good of all, under the law: Constitutional Democracy.
2. Where the whole body of citizens takes part, with personal or party gain the chief aim, and law a weapon to be used to forward it: Mob-Democracy.

Letters To The Editor

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics

EAST AND WEST

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—In the Examiner of December 27th there are three items of deep interest to this rural reader:

(1)—"What good crops and new money for wheat means to Eastern Canada is exemplified in a press dispatch which tells of Southern Alberta automobile shopping parties to Ontario. Parties of from eight to twenty are being made up, bound for eastern automotive centres, take delivery of new cars.—(Moose Jaw Times-Herald)."

(2)—"It is suicidal for exporting countries to compete one against the other in the desperate attempt to dominate any market." (Farmers must 'Think' it out.)

(3)—"We cannot—when we have not even balanced our national budget—keep on handling a wheat crop which may any year run up to 400,000,000 bushels, on the basis of paying a bonus in order to sell it." (Editorial—"It Cannot Be Done".)

All of which reminds me that, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Eastern Canada shipped into the Prairie Provinces in the depression year of 1933 $19,358,000 worth of "Automobiles, auto trucks, agricultural implements and vehicles other than automobiles" as against $201,000,000 worth of the same commodities in 1928—when times were good with the western farmer.

So far as (2) is concerned, I notice that W. S. Morrison, Minister of Agriculture in the United Kingdom, speaking of depressed conditions in the sheep industry, considered "recovery would be accelerated by closer control of import supplies." That looks like the key to the world-wheat farmer's problem in reverse ratio?

Re. (3): Unless all signs fail, the 1939 U.S. wheat crop will be 250,000,000 bushels below the 1938 levels—with a simiar shrinkage across Europe from the current year's record levels. This should help, Mr. Editor?

WHEATGROWER.

LATE HOURS

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—There is one question I would like to discuss in your paper and it may be others have thought of the same thing and might like to tell me whether I am right or wrong. But I warn them all in advance that it would take a great deal of good argument or persuasion to make me own up I am wrong.

At this time of year we always have quite a gay festive season in Peterborough when so many of the young people are home from school. I dare say there are more social events during the week than in any other similar space in the year. Some of the young people tell me they have been on the go every night until they are dead on their feet and weary from want of sleep.

My belief is that all these functions are too late in starting. The girls laugh when I say they should be off earlier and always tell me the same thing, that no person thinks of going to such affairs now until 9.30 or so. I am almost afraid to drop back on the old saying about "when I was a girl" we did so and so and had to be home at midnight, and then I am told that things are all changed and they are doing differently today.

They would have just as good a time by going at eight in the evening and coming home at midnight as they do by starting out at 9.30 and not getting through until two or three in the morning, but the thing has got to be such a fad that it is impossible to talk any person out of it. I know that adults are doing much the same at many of their social events and I know when it comes 12 o'clock I always feel that it is time to get home and be off to bed because I have to get up in the morning and attend to my day's work in the home.

I have heard from a few of the parents in conversation and they tell me they see little enough of their children when they do come home this time of year because they are not able to get up until about noon—then they are off again for the night. I am not hoping that I can change the whole thing by writing a letter to the paper but I do feel it is something which ought to be mentioned. If I am right I wish some person would have the courage to tell me so and if I am wrong that they would point out where my error is.

• When A Farmer Pays His Taxes

WHY ARE FARM TAXES payable in one lump sum in the late fall? Is it because this was the most convenient time to pay 50 years ago? If so, we can only conclude that the present generation of farmers is being very seriously inconvenienced by the continuance of a mode of tax collection that has outlived its usefulness.

Half a century ago the farmer got the major portion of his cash income in the fall of the year. It was then that the cash crops were sold. Then, too, the steers and hogs found their way to market. Even the dairy farmers—largely cheese factory patrons at that time—settled with the factory only after the last of the season's make had been sold. They would scrimp and save all summer long in order that the cheese money would be theirs in one lump sum in November. This gave the dairyman a very substantial sum with which to pay taxes, implement notes and a slice off the mortgage.

The situation, according to The Herald and Weekly Star, is now entirely different in all mixed farming communities. Some grain is still sold in the fall, notably wheat, but the most of it is manufactured at home into milk, meat, and eggs. The marketing of these products is spread throughout the year and in no one month is there apt to be a sufficiently concentrated income to meet a large annual expenditure, such as the tax bill has become. Spending habits have been changed along with the incidence of income and payments that are spread throughout the year are most easily met.

If taxes were to be collected in quarterly rather than annual instalments, it would be more in keeping with modern developments in the farming business. The fact that, in most townships, the tax on a hundred acre farm is four to eight times what it was 50 years ago is an additional argument for spreading its payment over the year. Nothing can be done about it this year, but township and county councils might profitably discuss the desirability of such a change for future collections.

• Letter Writer Was Aroused

A READER of The Journal, whose name indicates Italian extraction, writes us to say his temper was roused by an editorial on Canada's recognition of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia which appeared in these columns a few days ago. He thinks we were "attempting to place all Italians in a bad light," that we have "insulted Italy," have helped to develop "more prejudice and hate," and he concludes with a lament for the "lost" democracy of the world.

Our reader commenta the Ottawa Journal, thinks his letter will transform the editor of this paper into a "ferocious, roaring lion." He exaggerates, may we say, his power to stir up our wrath. Rather we feel pity for him—pity that, living in Canada, the example of British democracy leaves him cold; pity that from this vantage point he can find it in him to admire the ruthless suppression of liberty under the Fascist dictatorship; pity that he finds in a plain satement of fact an "insult" to Italy which he, presumbaly a Canadian, feels he must attempt to refute.

We should like to suggest to our correspondent that when impelled by the cause of truth to take his trusty pen in hand he address himself to some of the Italian editors. He could tell them that in Canada he can write in perfect safety letters which, if reversed and written in Italy, in criticism of Italy, would bring him swift and severe punishment. He could remind them that in Canada, as in all the British Empire, there is nothing but good will towards Italy, no desire but for harmony and understanding. And he should be able to say that as an Italian living in a free country he has nothing but the utmost detestation for the spirit of malice and hate that is behind the deliberate campaign to cause trouble between Italy and France, as there was behind other and similar campaigns aimed at Britain.

It is to Italy his letters should go, if he wants to find fault with the state of the world. There they might leave in their path a trail of ferocious, roaring lions.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

VANITY OF VANITIES, saith the preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity. What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun?....The wind goeth toward the south, and turneth about unto the north; it whirleth about continually, and the wind returneth again according to his circuits. All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full; unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again. All things are full of labour; man cannot utter it: the eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing.....

I made me great works; I builded me houses; I planted me vineyards ....I got me servants and maidens, and had servants born in my house; also I had great possessions of great and small cattle above all that were in Jerusalem before me....Then I saw that wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness.—Eccl. 1: 2, 3, 6-8; 11: 4, 18.

HE'S DISAPPOINTED.

DR. LEE DE FOREST, one of the fathers of modern radio, on his sixty-fifth birthday recently was asked what he thought about the progress made by his brain child. He replied, "Isn't it positively sickening?"

"Not only are the programs poor, too much swing and crooning," Dr. De Forest went on, "but the commercial interruptions are maddening. It isn't at all as I imagined it would be. The way I envisioned it, stations would be specialized—one would play symphonic music and opera; another, education; and another, dramatics, and so on. In that way you'd know exactly what you'd hear at any point on the dial."

AGE OF MIRACLES.

WHY BELIEVE in miracles like the airship, the telegraph, the telephone, the locomotive, the radio, the skyscraper, and disbelieve in the other miracles like faith, hope, friendship, the Christmas spirit? If the answer is that the material miracles of today have been proven and established by their very existence, then the reply to that is the miracles of sentiment and of the spirit have been even more firmly woven into the existence of many by their very life and vitality and force of truth.—Timmins Advance.

Hockey Depends On Agreements Says President

MONTREAL, Dec. 30 -(CP)- The whole future of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association depends on the agreements it has with other bodies controlling Hockey in North America, President Dr. W. G. Hardy told a meeting of eastern executive members today. The hockey craze is sweeping the United States and will continue to do so, he said, and "unless we keep control of our players through agreements with other bodies, we are going to be wrecked by aiding."

Discussion of relations between the C. A. H. A. and the National Hockey League, The Amateur Athletic Union of the United States and the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States took up most of the first session in the two-day conference called by the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association. All decisions made will be submitted to the full meeting of the C. A. H. A. for approval in the spring.

N. H. L. Point.

Cecil Duncan of Ottawa touched off discussion of relations with the N. H. L. when he brought up the case of Eddie Finnigan of Ottawa, whose reinstatement into the C. A. H. A. was cancelled a year ago at request of the N. H. L. on the grounds Finnigan was still under N. H. L. suspension for failure to keep a contract with Providence Reds of the International-American League.

Duncan claimed no agreement had been consummated with the N.H.L. at the time Finnigan was suspended, and that the N.H.L. was attempting to dictate policy to the C.A.H.A. For a year Finnigan had been attempting to make peace with the N.H.L. so he would be eligible for amateur hockey again, but without success, he added.

George Dudley of Midland, Ont., took the stand Finnigan had defaulted in an agreement, signed originally with Ottawa Senators, or St. Louis Eagles as they were at the time, and that when he was sold to Providence he had no right to refuse to report to the International-American club.

President to Meet Calder.

Dr. Hardy believed the case had nothing to do with the C.A.H.A. until Finnigan had made peace with the N.H.L., because until that was done he was still a professional and could not regain his amateur standing. It was agreed Dr. Hardy should meet President Frank Calder of the N.H.L. in the hope an arrangement could be made.

Dr. Hardy said he had just returned from New York and predicted difficulties between the C.A.H.A. and A.A.U. of U.S. and A.H.A. of U.S. would be settled satisfactorily within a month.

Approval was given to action of Dr. Hardy in meeting the over-age junior situation in Manitoba, where few senior clubs are available to take care of promising juniors. To meet the threat of "an outfit from Miami" that tried to get Manitoba players from the province, but refused to work through the A.A.U. of U.S., Dr. Hardy explained import rules of Western clubs were waived and they had been allowed to take Manitoba players, keeping them in Canada.

Week-End Racing To Close Season

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—The Dufferin Club opened the fall and winter race session at "Little Saratoga," and this weekend will have the honor of bringing to a close the most successful seven weeks of racing for some years at the West End oval. Pearce Awarded Coveted Marsh Trophy

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—(CP)—Bobby Pearce of Hamilton, Ont., world professional sculling champion, was announced today as winner of the Lou E. Marsh Memorial Trophy, awarded annually to the year's outstanding athlete named by a committee of five.

The committe, headed by P. J. Mulqueen, chairman of the Canadian Olympic Committee, considered a large number of candidates, professional and amateur, men and women. It was announced the vote on Pearce was unanimous.

The Lou E. Marsh trophy, put up in memory of the late sports editor of the Toronto Daily Star, was first awarded in 1936 to Dr. Phil Edwards, Montreal's great middle-distance runner.

A year ago it went to Marshal Cleland of Troy, Ont., noted horseman. The committee took into consideration, as it must under the deed of gift, "handicaps overcome" by athletes on their way to the top. The mighty Pearce, unbeaten in all his career, retained his world title last summer just a few days after the death of his wife.

The Autralian-born champ trained under the shadow of his wife's illness for his contest in Toronto with Evans Paddon, Australian champion. But he conquered the challenger with ease in their three-mile engagement at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Ruled Scullers 1928-33

Before turning professional, Pearce ruled the world's amateur scullers from 1928 to 1933. He won Olympic championships at Amsterdam in 1928 and at Los Angeles in 1932. He settled in Hamilton after capturing the British Empire games title there in 1930. Later he knocked off the Diamond Sculls and numerous Canadian and United States events.

The Marsh Trophy committee did not announce the ranking of athletes under Pearce but made public the following who were given serious consideration: Jack Purcell, Toronto, world professional badminton champion; Bob Pirie, Toronto, the country's outstanding swimmer; Mrs. Dorothy McKenzie Walton, Toronto, Canadian women's badminton singles champion.

Jack Flavelle, Toronto, Canadian and United States 150-pound sculling champion; Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen, Toronto, Canadian women's open golf champion; Robina Higgins, Winnipeg, javelin thrower; Noel MacDonald, Edmonton, basketball star; Bill Fritz, Toronto, sprinter; Eric Coy, Winnipeg, weight-thrower; Terry Evans, Toronto, amateur wrestler; Mrs. Edward Gooderham, Toronto, Ontario women's golf champion.

Judges were Mr. Mulqueen, Elwood Hughes, general manager of the Canadian National Exhibition; T. H. C. Alison, president of the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen; Oscar Pearson, Y.M.C.A. executive, and Charles Ring, donor of the Marsh Trophy.

Pearce will be presented with the trophy here January 14.

Year Going Out Supplied Fans With Many Thrilling Moments

Another year has almost run its allotted span and it seems fitting to glance back and conjure up again the thrilling moments and outstanding personalities that flashed on the scene during the past 12 months. And so we present a composite picture of the international sport scene for the past year. Let's see what we have to look back over...

1. Three months of campaigning on Canadian gridirons reached a peak when Winnipeg Blue Bombers, champions of Western Canada, and Toronto Argonauts, eastern monarchs, met in Toronto for the Dominion crown and the Grey Cup. The stirring game was climaxed by a sensational fourth quarter drive by Argos that gave them the game, 30-7. One of the greatest one-man exhibitions ever seen on a Canadian field was staged by Red Storey, who galloped over the Winnipeg line for three touchdowns.

2. Among the many horse races that will be recalled by turf followers in years to come will be the match race held at Pimlico between War Admiral and Seabiscuit, a race that stirred up a tremendous amount of interest when run in November, after having been originally scheduled in May. Seabiscuit finished the winner by four lengths after a hard battle, witnessed by 40,000 spectators.

3. Don Budge was the year's one-man tennis show. The tennis world was completely dominated by the young Californian, who turned pro at the close of the amateur season. In addition to helping United States retain the Davis Cup, Don performed the unprecedented feat of capturing the four major singles titles, Australian, French, British and American, in the same year.

4. Chicago Black Hawks, after finishing third in the American division of the National Hockey League, came roaring through the playoffs in smashing style and topped off a season of surprises by snatching three of four games and the Stanley Cup from Toronto Maple Leafs in the finals. Bill Stewart, American-born manager of the team, became the "miracle man" of 1938.

5. The most dramatic moment on the year's tennis calendar took place when Helen Wills Moody staged a grand comeback in the game she once dominated and captured the all-England singles crown at Wimbledon when she downed her arch-rival, Helen Jacobs, in the final, 6-4, 6-0. Miss Jacobs injured her right ankle during the match, but Mrs. Moody kept up a merciless game and coldly accepted congratulations afterwards, arousing a storm of controversy among fans and writers.

6. Gabby Hartnett led Chicago Cubs to a baseball pennant in the National League, after taking over in mid-season from Charlie Grimm, while in the American, Joe McCarthy, boss of New York Yankees, led his sluggers to another easy win. McCarthy's men steamrolled over the Cubs in four straight games in the world series for their third consecutive world championship, a new record.

7. The Thunderbolt, with Capt. George T. Eyston, of England, in the cockpit, roared over the salt flats at Bonneville, Utah, to establish a new land speed record of 357.5 m.p.h. Eyston sped to a new record on September 16, the day after John Cobb, a fellow-countryman, had broken Eyston's previous mark.

8. In his second year in the National Hockey League, Gordon Drillon, a product of the Maritimes, scored 26 goals and was credited with the same number of assists to lead the major league scorers with a point total of 52. He had a two-point lead over his teammate Syl Apps.

9. Ralph Guldahl, No. 1 golfer of the year, triumphed in the western United States open golf championship for the third year in a row, and in addition took the U.S. open for the second successive year. He was generally rated the links' best despite the larger earnings of Sam Snead.

10. The fighter of the year, and in some quarters named the athlete of the year, was Henry Armstrong, perpetual motion Negro fighter, who captured the world's welter and light weight titles to add to the featherweight crown he had won in 1937. He thus became the first man in ring history to hold three world's titles at the same time.

11. Hank Greenberg, slugging first baseman with Detroit Tigers in the American League, provided the best individual thrill of the ball season when he made a great effort to break Babe Ruth's record of 60 home runs in one season. Through August and September, most of the attention of American League fans was focussed on Hank, but he couldn't quite make it and wound up the season with a total of 58, tying Jimmy Foxx for the second best four-bagger total in a season.

12. Two minutes and four seconds after Max Schmeling sat in his corner of the ring in Yankee Stadium, N.Y., confident of regaining the world's heavyweight boxing championship, his hopes were blasted by the dynamite-laden fists of Champion Joe Louis, acclaimed one of the greatest of the long line of titleholders, who lept from his corner with as devastating an attack as the ring has ever seen, to score a first round knockout and avenge his loss to Schmeling two years before.

13. Staying at the wickets for 13 1-2 hours, Leonard Hutton, 22-year-old English cricketer, gave the followers of the ancient game their greatest thrill in 1938, when he hammered Australian bowling for a total of 364 runs, more than any one else had ever scored in the 64-year history of the test matches.

LOOKING BACK AT SPORT'S BIG MOMENTS

1. Red Storey (64) runs wild against Winnipeg Blue Bombers as Toronto Argonauts defeat western champions, 30-7. 2. Seabiscuit defeats War Admiral in match race at Pimlico. 3. Don Budge, monopolist of tennis titles. 4. Chicago Black Hawks happy after winning Stanley Cup. 5. Helen Wills Moody receives congratulations from Helen Jacobs after beating her at Wimbledon. 6. Gabby Hartnett, LEFT, shakes hands with Joe McCarthy before world series. 7. Capt. George Eyston breaks world's land speed record as he travels 357.5 m.p.h. 8. Gordon Drillon, leading scorer in National Hockey League. 9. Ralph Guldahl, winner of two successive U.S. open golf titles, and three straight western opens. 10. Henry Armstrong, sensation of the year in boxing circles. 11. Hank Greenberg, whose 58 home runs left him just two short of Babe Ruth's major league record. 12. Joe Louis knocks out Max Schmeling in two minutes and four seconds of their fight for the world's heavyweight championship. 13. Leonard Hutton, who scored 364 runs during one stay at the wickets in the test matches.

Church Boys' League Closes With Banquet

HAVELOCK, Dec. 30—The Church Boys' League of St. John's Anglican Church concluded their meetings for the year with a banquet and social evening, under the supervision of their new instructor, Mr. H. W. Roche. The organization, composed of boys between the ages of 12 to 15, and drawn from United, Presbyterian, Anglican and Mission churches; are planning to sponsor a hockey team this year, with Mr. N. C. Lade of town as manager. To become eligible to join the league, the boys must be regular attendants at Sunday school and church.

Following a sumptuous supper, the toast to the King was proposed, as well as a toats to the visitors, proposed by the president, Jack Evans, and replied to by Howard Lemon, of Norwood; and a toast to the Boys' League, proposed by Meryl Clarke and replied to by Jack Evans.

The program included a talk on the meaning of Christmas by Mr. Roche, and the singing of Christmas carols.

Bible study will be taken up after the new year, along the lines suggested by Mr. Lemon, at the end of which examinations will be tried and prizes awarded for proficiency.

42 Pounds At 2

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Dec. 30 — (A.P.). — Franklin Fleck has his bid in for the world heavyweight championship—for two-year-olds. Franklin weighed 42 pounds on his second birthday yesterday. His doctor, who said this was 14½ pounds above normal, explained it would have been more, only a skin disease three months ago held down Franklin's weight. Franklin weighed 17¼ pounds at birth.

Piano Wizard 7, Dies

DETROIT, Dec. 30 — (C.P.). — Detroit musicians mourned to-day the death of a seven-year-old girl, Judy Lundquest, whose amazing career as a pianist ended this week after a two-week attack of spinal meningitis.

She played the piano when two and composed marches when three. Her teachers listened with amazement when she played Chopin, Mozart, and Beethoven on the kindergarten piano while other little children struggled with simple scales.

10 Inches On Blue Line Cut Offsides In Half–Smythe The Pioneer

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—(CP).—National Hockey League fans may not realize it but the continuous peep of the referee's whistle which used to pierce their ear drums and rouse their ire has been reduced to what amounts to an occasional toot this year. All because 10 inches were added to the blue line.

And the fans can thank Manager Conny Smythe of Toronto Maple Leafs who pioneered in the movement for a wider blue line.

Since the line was widened from two to 12 inches and a minor revision made in the rule about crossing it the number of offsides has been cut in half and play speeded up 50 per cent., estimates Smythe.

"Why, I've seen our three forward lines changed without a let-up in play," continued the Leaf official. "Sometimes it has been necessary to create a deliberate offside to stop the play."

With fewer stoppages the periods are played in less elapsed time. Smythe said some sessions during the current season have occupied just 23 minutes. In other years the periods have extended beyond the half hour.

Keep Fans Around.

Thus the club management, rather than send the fans home too early, have been making the interval longer between periods.

Smythe said he got the idea for a wider blue line from a letter written by a fan to a newspaper in Chicago. The fan was fed up with frequent offsides and thought something should be done about it.

While on his pet topic, the Maple Leafs' mentor mentioned the matter of numerous facial cuts suffered by players this season. He thought the wearing of helmets was responsible to a certain extent for these injuries.

"Some players, because they're protected by helmets, develop the tendency of carrying their sticks high and also get careless about how they wield them," he said.

Smythe, however, did not suggest helmets be banned.

C.A.H.A. DELEGATES AGREE ON PLAYOFF SERIES AND CUTS

To String Along With N.H.L. And The States

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—(CP)—Eastern executive of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association swung into the second day of its two-day meeting today with a long list of decisions behind and temporary setting of Allan and Memorial Cup finals and discussions of possible injury-insurance for playoff contenders still to come.

Delegates wasted no time plunging into action yesterday and by the end of the day a new system of playoffs between Maritime and Quebec representatives had been approved, a policy of close cooperation with the National Hockey League and United States hockey bodies upheld, and a system of playoff cuts for competing clubs suggested.

The new playoff system, designed to give the Maritimes at least part of an inter-regional competition each year, calls for a three-of-five series to replace the present best-of-three, with the first two games in the Maritimes and the others in Montreal.

Eastern Final

While the Maritime-Quebec series is on, starting March 18, Ottawa district winners will meet the Ontario Hockey Association champions in a best-of-three series, winners of the two groups to meet for the eastern final.

For the Memorial Cup, Ottawa district winners will travel to the Maritimes, winners to meet Quebec finalists with O.H.A. champions drawing a bye into the eastern finals.

In additio nto setting temporary venue of senior and junior Dominion finals, it was expected delegates today would discuss a system of group-insurance to cover all players taking part in Allan and Memorial Cup playdowns. The matter was mentioned yesterday and left until today for further consideration.

Delegates endorsed a policy of cooperation with the N.H.L. as expressed in the interim agreement between the two bodies effective since last summer, mentioning specifically the case of Eddie Finnigan of Ottawa who has been barred from the C.A.H.A. until he straightens out a tangle with the N.H.L. over a broken contract with Providence Reds. President Dr. W. G. Hardy plans to meet Frank Calder, N.H.L. president in an attempt to smooth over the three-year-old dispute.

To Cooperate

Cooperation with hockey bodies in the United States and Britain was also stressed as the best means of controlling the sport in Canada and to prevent wholesale raiding. President Hardy intimated differences between the C.A.H.A. and the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States would be settled within a month.

A plan whereby clubs taking part in Allan and Memorial Cup playdowns would divide 10 per cent of the net profits from playoff games on a pro rata basis according to the number of games played and the distance travelled, was approved for submission to the general meeting of the C.A.H.A. in the spring.

The playoff cuts would be in addition to playoff grants already given which delegates felt had not always reimbursed clubs for travelling expenses in the past.

Dog Goes To Church

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 30 — (AP).—For years Chu Chu, a Chow dog, accompanied his master on a walk each night and to Mass each Sunday. Nine months ago the master, Thomas Bowles, died. Now the dog, each night at 7 o'clock, follows the route of his master's walk in lonesome dignity. And each Sunday he varies the routine by walking to church and back—by himself.

HOCKEY PRACTICE

The Canuck juveniles of the southend Hockey League have an open workout tomorrow afternoon at three in the Sacred Heart rink, and prospective players are invited.

RAILWAY RECEIPTS UP.

Receipts of government railways in Netherlands Indies increased in 1938, while those of private lines decreased.

Calls Up Aid

Few Sidelights Are Given On Old Curling

The popular pastime of curling indigenous to Scotland has been practised for some 40 years. The earliest stones were natural boulders called "loofies" with holes cut in them for fingers and thumb to get a grip. Next an iron handle, run in with lead, was used often bringing up the weight to 100 lbs. Not until the beginning of the nineteenth century did circular stones come into use and after the institution of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club in 1838, still the governing body, the stones now in use were, in course of time, evolved.

Originally Scottish, the game has spread widely; it became popular in Canada, and Peterborough was not behind in practising the sport.

It was first organized here at a meeting held on November 9, 1859, at a local hotel, and the elected officers were A. S. Frazer, president, T. Sutherland, vice-president, Rev. James Douglas, chaplain, A. Munro, secretary, Thomas White, financial secretary, with a committee consisting of Messrs. William Johnston, James Meyers, H. Calcutt, J. Palmer, and Duncan McGregor.

On Open Ice.

No building was available as a covered rink, and they used the open ice; the locality of the ice varied, and was selected by the committee, who were considered to be experts in the matter. At one time the Goose Pond was favored. At another, Spaulding's Bay, and also Ashburnham. Notice would be given in the local weekly paper, if time permitted; otherwise information was sent round by word of mouth and a written notice posted at the Post Office.

The first rink building was erected by John Ludgate and was rented to the club and opened on January 4, 1871. It was used for both skating and curling, and stood on ground now part of Riverside Park. Ice masquerade carnivals were also held in the rink, which was eventually burned down.

Its successor was erected on land now part of the Quaker Oats Company. Built by a joint stock company it was a timbered frame building with shingled room and was opened for use on Christmas Day, 1878, sixty years ago. It, too, was also used as a hockey rink.

After being in use for many years, the club's quarters were removed to the Charlotte Street site. A new holding company was formed known as the Peterborough Curling Company, Limited, which bought up all the interests of the old company. This was also used as a hockey rink on which local hockey teams won championship distinction. Known disparagingly to opponents as the "Soup Plate," it was used for hockey until the erection of the Brock Street Rink in 1893.

Destroyed by Fire.

Under the new management the club developed rapidly and was a great success, but on January 2, 1908, fire again destroyed the rink and contents. There was an insurance of $4,500, but total loss, including 125 pairs of stones, was estimated at $12,000. Nothing daunted, the local curlers prepared plans for a new rink, and by the opening of the next season the new and present rink was opened, furnished with all the necessary facilities for the carrying on of the club.

Highlights in the early history of the club include the winning on February 25, 1885, of the Governor-General's Trophy. The final match was played on the Rideau Hall ice at Ottawa against Truro, N.S.; two rinks of the Peterborough Curling Club, skipped by W. G. Ferguson and Sam Ray, won by 23 shots—Peterborough 48, Truro 25.

On January 21, 1903, the local club was honored with a visit from the first curling team from Scotland to come to the Dominion—representatives of the Royal Caledonian Society. Five visiting rinks were met at the station by a big procession of local curlers, and a reception was held.

Nine whaling expeditions are operating in the Antarctic this season.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

Much ado about hockey tonight at the palais d'ice on the Rue Brock, seein' as how it's the first puck fray in Peterborough this winter. A junior O.H.A. scrap betwixt Lindsay Midgets and our Monarchs. At 8.30 of the clock at popular prices, and it should be a swell opening number. We expect a right noble crowd on deck to see the lid pried off in a blaze of junior action. You know how these kids throw it into high smack at the start and never coast once throughout the session. Both clubs will be striving mightily to cop a nod the first time out, and it's gonna hustle the Monarchs to start the home season with a win. The bolstered Lindsayites may prove tougher to take than an innuendo. Or do ya like them with whipped cream?

* * * * * *

On the other mitt, Pete Vitarelli believes he has lined up a fighting band of puckists for the Monarchs and that they'll swish through the Scugog skaters like an eel in your fingers. No one can say Pete didn't do his share of hard bumping hockey in the Blood and Thunder Loop last year, and we imagine the scrappy coach will inject a battling spirit into this new junior club. Some beefy players, lots of speed and experience mixed up in the local lineup, so we look for a good showing by the homesters tonight. Two good clubs will be fighting it out.

* * * * * *

The Oldtime Yen

It's gonna seem nice again to stroll about the corridors at the hockey arena, listen to the bologna being sliced freely on all sides and hurry to our seat as the players stream out on the frozen surface. The clash of sticks, sound of the gong, roars of approval and echoing boos—it sorta gets a grip on you again about this time of year. So we'll be on hand again watching the lads tearing madly about the rink, slapping fast passes across or ahead, getting bumped hard at defence or sweeping around the rearguard to drill the disc at a heavily-padded chap between the pipes. After all, hockey is a Canadian game and the speediest sport of 'em all. So it is but natural for a speed-loving Canuck to get a yen for a squint at them in action again.

* * * * * *

Plans have been completed to have St. Mike's Buzzers here next Wednesday e'en to tangle with our Colts in a charity exhibition tilt. At 8.30 in the Brock, prices being two bits, 35 cents and a half a slug. There will be 10 or 12 valuable door prizes, drawn for between periods, and the wampum raised will go to the German Refugee Fund. Everyone knows how the Jews in Germany are being persecuted, but lots of Christians there are in the same boat—and this Refugee Fund is for both Christians and Jews. A mighty good cause—and no doubt the rink will be packed to the rafters that night. Tickets are being sold for the game now.

* * * * * *

Yet Another Team

Manager Ken Fleming is calling a general practice of St. Peter's juvenile puck outfit for tonight at six o'clock at the Sacred Heart rink. We wouldn't ordinarily devote a whole paragraph to a practice except that this team may again affiliate with the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association and seek a bye into provincial playdowns. They entered the O.J.H.A. setup last year but lost out soon to Belleville. With an earlier start this season, the Saints should round up a fine squad of lads under 18 years by Jan. 1st. All positions on the team are wide open, Fleming states, and he wants a big turnout of interested players at the southend ice sheet this gloaming. Hop to it, lads—and don't say there aren't lots of puck opportunities in this town, what with two junior O.H.A. clubs and now a juvenile team.

* * * * * *

The Tely team of Toronto, which plays the senior "B" Petes an exhibition fray here next Tuesday twilight, leads the senior T.H.L. with nine wins and two losses, a lead of four fixtures. Starting lineup is: Goal, Eric Coleman; defence, Bob Porter and Art Upper; centre, Coach George (Shirt) Ewens; wings, Shorty Miller and Art Lamport; subs, Goose Gostlin, Len Simpson, Johnny McPherson, Gord Shill, Jack Cranstoun and Jack Jarrott. Sub goalie, Reg. Corbett. Porter is the pro ballster of Maple Leafs and was here in hockey before with Royal Canadians who won an intermediate "A" title some few seasons ago. Upper is a pro ball player too and a fine hockeyist. Shirt Ewens was with Consols in their titular days and with Atlantic City. And so it goes, all classy gees on a good team—and it'll be a real drill for the Petes and a real game for the fans to witness.

* * * * * *

A Lakefield Game

Lakefield Legionnaires O.H.A. intermediate "B" club goes on view to the home public tonight (Friday) with an exhibition joust against the Bridgenorth battlers — or so we've been informed anonymously. Team has Tom Junkin and Stew Loyst for goal, with Louie Sabatino, Buster Whitton, Reg. Pearson, H. Stabler and Irwin Charlton for defence. First line of Bob Chittick, Harry Jewell and Joe Blewett; and second one of Geo. Chappel, Reg. Delth and Les Burton. With Bernie Johnson and Woody Morin, too. Many of these guys performed often on local ice, so there should be considerable Peterborough interest in loop games of the Legionnaires this winter. Jack Sabatino will probably referee the contest in the Lakefield colosseum this evening.

* * * * * *

There will be a puck practice tonight after the junior game at the Brock, and all Colts' prospects are urged to attend. Bert McLeod will attend and look the defence boys over and four will be picked from Ward, Berwick, Stabler, King, Hoffman, Howden and Brennan—the latter a former Lindsay lad. Colts will carry three front lines for a time, Parnall, Al King and McDonald on one; Craig, Stewart and Foster on another; and Williams, Dorris and Lumsden for a third. Cournyea and a Norwood lad are goalies, and Wade and Pammett will likely be carried later when they recover from injuries received in workouts. Stewart played for Omemee Hawks last winter. It'll be a good junior O.H.A. squad.

* * * * * *

Picking 'em of fthe Grapevine: Dutch Harwood of Port Hope was named by the O.H.A. to referee tonight's tussle here....And Mayor Hamilton may face off the puck to open the season....Morrison will be in goal for the Monarchs tonight with Beggs, McDonald and Giardino on defence; one line has Rochetti, Stewart and Parnall; and the other Nichols, Connelly and Cauley....'Tis thought that Legris, Lecompte and Eric McNeeley of Trenton Fliers may join their departed puck brethren in Ottawa in a week or so....Some discontent in St. Kitts over the new rink which won't hold those big lacrosse crowds at their gutted-stick games in the summer....There is a franchise here for harness-hoss race meets, so why not bid for the annual Futurity which is looking for a new place to race since the C.N.E. is out? Strathroy, London and Stratford are after it....Southend Loop meets at eight tonight in the club house and bantam, midget and juvenile teams should be represented....Local curlers enjoyed a fine one-day 'spiel in Oshawa on Wednesday....Church Hockey Circuit opens on Tuesday with two contests....And our Colts open in Port Hope on Tuesday e'en....One more column to grind out and then we'll knock off till next year!

Help In The Morning

CHICAGO, Dec. 30 — (AP). — Edward Hankel is hard of hearing and since he and his wife have separated, he had to hire a boy to wake him up in the morning. The cost for the human alarm clock was $5.00 a week, Hankel told Judge Robert O'Connell in asking for a reduction in his temporary alimony payments of $10 a week. The court cut $1.50 from the alimony payments to lighten Hankel's awakening expense.

Six-Man Teams To Be Used In Lacrosse

VANCOUVER, Dec. 30.—(CP)—A score of British Columbia lacrosse players will leave here next Tuesday, bound for Los Angeles and Hollywood where they will join a half dozen or so fellows from Ontario to form a professional circuit—still further streamlined from the seven-man Canadian game which succeeded the old 12-a-side lineup.

In the face of a two-year suspension at home under a Canadian Lacrosse Association ruling, the players will introduce six-man teams and eliminate centring after goals, both changes designed to speed up play. In addition they will play four 12-minute quarters instead of the usual 15-minute periods.

And, explained Jimmy Gunn of Vancouver who will handle the whistle in the new league ,they aren't worrying about suspensions or the future.

While the projected three-month California schedule is under way, a professional league will be formed here. When the southern loop winds up for the season the players will return to Vancouver to open their northern schedule.

Play Doubleheaders.

Doubleheaders will be played each night, said Gunn. Hence the shorter quarters.

"We will be playing on slightly small floor space (Olympic Stadium, Los Angeles) so we contemplate doing away with the Rover position," continued Gunn, until this season referee in the British Columbia intercity league.

"Then we plan to eliminate centring the ball after a goal has been scored. The goalkeeper of the team scored on will be given a limited time to throw the ball back into play.

"This should not only speed up play but go far to equalizing the game for a team shorthanded. I've seen six consecutive goals scored on a team a man short without that team having had possession of the ball."

The league, four teams with two representing Los Angeles and two Hollywood, is scheduled to open its schedule January 10.

"We aren't ready to announce the names of the players who will go south," said Gunn, "but one team will be composed entirely of Indian players."

Plenty of Experience.

There'll be a wealth of experience at the head of the new circuit which owns to the name of Pacific Coast Lacrosse Association. Its president is Frank Sweeny who starred with the Foundations of Victoria, B.C., when they won the Mann Cup in 1919.

Attorney of the Association, Virger Tinglof played on the Harvard University Lacrosse squad a few years back.

Managers for three teams have been selected. Their names rate tops in Canadian Lacrosse—past and present. They are:

Chris (Doughy) Spring, centre of New Westminster Salmonbellies when they beat Cornwall, Ont., for the Minto Cup in the 1913 professional days, and acclaimed one of the greatest players ever produced in the Dominion.

Bill Curran of Orillia, Ont., Terriers who won three consecutive Mann Cup finals, a feat no other eastern team has been able to do in amateur competition.

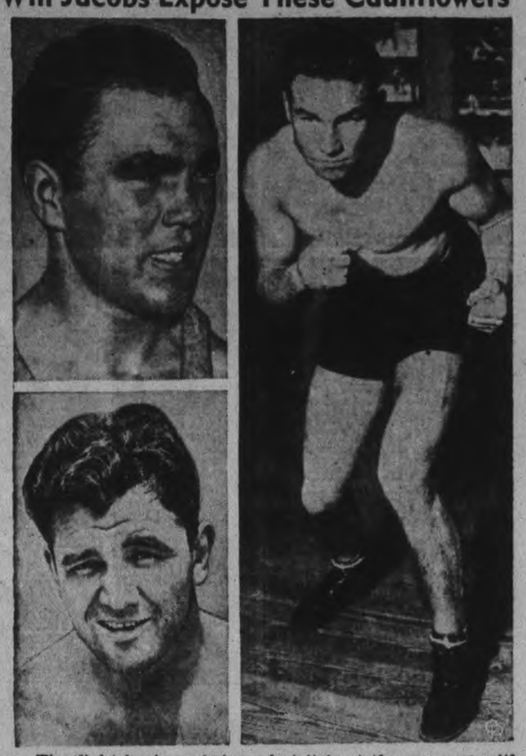
Andy Paull, poker-faced chieftain of British Columbia's Capilano tribe who led his North Shore Braves into the Dominion finals against Orillia in 1936. He will lead the all-Indian squad.

The fourth manager is yet to be named.

BRITISH TEAM TOURS

JOHANNESBURG—(CP).—R. A. Shayes, D. W. Butler, E. J. Filby, Valerie Scott, Jean Saunders and Rosemary Thomas are announced as the British lawn tennis team to tour South Africa in the new year.

Will Jacobs Expose These Cauliflowers



The fight business being what it is at the moment with few contenders or pretenders to the heavyweight throne of Joe Louis, and Henry Armstrong, not exactly out of opposition, but still a dominant figure in the light and welterweight ranks, Mike Jacobs, the man who pulls the strings on the important fights, is said to be considering bouts for the ancient warrfors shown ABOVE. At the LEFT, two former heavyweight champs, whom you probably recognize, TOP, Max Schmeling, and BOTTOM, Jim Braddock. The latter, never much of a fighter, despite the fact that he held the title, has not been inside the ropes since he earned a close decision over the consistent loser, Tommy Farr, while Der Mox made his last appearance against Joe Louis, the details of which are probably well-remembered. At the RIGHT is Jimmy McLarnin, Canada's greatest fighter, who has been inactive even longer than the other two, but who is now being mooted as the man to stop the all-conquering march of Hammering Henry Armstrong. Vancouver Jimmy has denied more than once any intentions of returning to the ring wars, but the publicity grinds on.

Monarchs Play Lindsay Here

Lindsay Midgets meet the Peterborough Monarchs here tonight (Friday) at 8.30 o'clock in the Brock St. arena. It is a scheduled junior O. H. A. opener, the first hockey here this winter and should draw out a big crowd of city and district fans. A junior opening game is likely to start off the hockey season with a bang, as the younger players turn on the heat harder than older players — dishing up slam-bang hockey every minute they are on the ice. And these teams are likely to be well-matched outfits, with neither having much advantage in length of practise before the schedule begins. Both clubs will be battling for a win to open the season properly and no quarter will be asked or given when the puck is faced off tonight.

Coach Pete Vitarelli had a big squad of promising prospects to pick for his Monarchs' starting lineup. He mixed up a club of players who were big, fast and fairly experienced for juniors. District and local lads, some O. J. H. A. graduates and others from the Junior City Loop of last year. He feels satisfied his team will make a real showing here this evening. The Midgets were strong last year—beating our Colts once and going far in the playdowns—but they have added several imports to be a real 1939 threat. It looks like a grand game for fans here to pry off the lid.

Remember When—

Vines At Top Of Game To Beat Budge

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—(AP).—Bruce Barnes and Dick Skeen, the two professionals who will accompany Don Budge and Ellsworth Vines on their tennis tour opening here Tuesday night, think little of the amateur competition through which Budge waded to his four major titles this year. But they think so much of Budge's game they're completely at a loss when it comes to picking a winner in the inaugural match.

They're decided on only one point—that if Vines is at the absolute peak of his game there is no one in the world who can beat him. Beyond that point they get lost.

Barnes, who has played with Vines, and will be his doubles partner, but has seen Budge only from the sidelines, admits that "Don hasn't seen anything like Vines' service and the way he follows it in for a volley." On the brink of a prediction, he draws back by saying: "Even that doesn't help me decide which way to bet my two bucks on Tuesday."

All Is Confusion.

Skeen, high-ranking California pro, who has played against both on the West Coast, and will be Budge's doubles mate, credits Don with the better, more consistent all-around game; gives Vines the better serve and volley, but thinks Budge's backhand passing shots are almost as good as Vines' off his forehand, with Budge's forehand passing shots superior to Vines' off his backhand.

This indecision is reflected in the customers' curiosity. From the Garden box office to-day came the report that the advance sale, at a $7.70 top, has reached $20,131.

Budge has contributed to the pros' and the public's speculation with the ease of his adjustment to indoor conditions. In workouts with Sidney Wood on a canvas-covered court in Brooklyn—a court similar to the one to be used at the Garden—he has shown all the brilliance that carried him to the 1938 championships of the United States, Great Britain, France and Australia. Actually he likes canvas better than turf, because it provides a truer surface.

TORONTO ARGOS ARE VOTED ACE CANADIAN TEAM OF 1938

Edmonton Grads Are Second, Trail Is Third

By Sydney Gruson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Dec. 30 — (C.P.). — Winners and still champions, Toronto Argonauts have been voted the outstanding team in Canadian sport for the second straight year.

Capturing the fancy of sports editors from coast to coast, Argos rolled up 79 points of a possible 93 in the annual Canadian press poll. Thirty-one editors voted, with three points for their first choice, two for second, and one fo rthird. It was Argos from the first return.

Edmonton Grads had supporters for winning another women's basketball championship and Trail Smoke Eaters received praise for their capture of the Allan Cup and the senior amateur hockey championship. But the Argo drive to a second successive national football title was as unbeatable in the voting as the team on the field.

Grads, who produced the outstanding girl athlete of the year in Noel MacDonald, their centre, wound up in second place with 38 points, and Smoke Eaters were third with 28.

Thrills Every Tangle.

All but one editor placed Argos among their three choices and 21 of the 33 had them as the No. 1 team. Argos earned the honors by providing the country's football fans with some of the most thrilling action seen on a Canadian gridiron.

They flashed a brilliant offensive and a steady defence in marching first to the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union championship, then to the Eastern title, and finally past Winnipeg Blue Bombers to the Canadian championship. Their 30-7 victory over Bombers was the ultimate in football thrills.

Grads have been winning basketball championships so long now most people have given up counting. Since January 1, 1922, they have won more than 300 games and lost only 17. They have held the North American championship 10 times since 1923, always under direction of Percy Page.

Smoke Eaters, at present on a tour of Europe, won the Allan Cup in a bitter four-game series at Saskatoon and Calgary against Cornwall Flyers, Eastern champions. They have not lost a game against Europe's finest teams.

St. Boniface Seals, who won the junior hockey championship in Toronto against Oshawa in a five-game series, and St. Catharines Athletics, senior lacrosse champions, were the only other teams to draw more than four points. Seals had 13 and Athletics 10.

Miss Macdonald, 23-year-old stenographer and centre for Grads since 1933, was announced last night as the best girl athlete of the year. She received 30 points in the Canadian Press poll to 24 for Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen of Toronto, Canadian women's golf champion. Robina Higgins of Winnipeg, champion javelin thrower, was third with 16 points.

Don Budge Gives You a Pointer or Two On His Favorite Game

Actions speak louder than words we've heard it said, so we won't say much about these pictures of J. Donald Budge, the world's outstanding amateur racquet-wielder for the past two years, who makes his debut as a pro in New York's Madison Square Garden on January 3. Don posed for these how-to-do-it-properly pictures the other day, and ambitious tennis players may get a tip or two from them for next summer. Or if your memory's bad, maybe you should clip them out and paste them on your tennis racquet. About all we can add is that time-worn adage that saves a player many an unexpected bump on the noggin...and does help his game..."keep your eye on the ball!"

Marmora, Madoc Organize Team For T.V.L.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Dec. 30.— At a meeting held in Madoc on Wednesday evening a hockey club was organized to represent Marmora, Madoc and district in the Trent Valley League.

The officers of the club are as follows: Hon. president, R. A. Elliott; president, Percy Nayler; secretary, Cameron Wallbridge; coach, H. R. Pearce; assistant Marmora coach, C. E. Jones; assistant Madoc coach, D. Whytock; board of management, Messrs. M. Caverly, C. Wallbridge, and D. Whytock of Madoc and C. E. Jones, J. C. Taylor, and J. Thomson of Marmora.

Madoc and Marmora will each provide six players for each game, but as many players may be signed up as desire to play. In this way, two full teams should be available for practice games and a very strong team should be ready for each league game.

The Madoc-Marmora aggregation will be named the Micmacs. Their first game will be with Tweed on the Madoc rink next Monday evening.

Some Of The Boys See Trouble Ahead With Changes In Pitching And Fielding

By PAT ROBINSON
Central Press Canadian
Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Now that two changes have been made in the baseball rules, some profess to see difficulties next season when the umpires from sandlots to majors try to enforce them.

Two little points may cause many a squabble. Let's look at the changes. The first one is a substitute for the first two sections of Rule 27. It reads:

"Preliminary to pitching, the pitcher shall take his position facing the batsman with both feet squarely on the ground but with his first foot on or in front and in contact with the pitcher's plate; his other foot may be directly behind, on, or in front of (but not on the side of) the pitcher's plate. In the act of delivering the ball to the batsman, he must keep one foot in contact with the pitcher's plate defined in Rule 9. The pitcher shall not raise either foot until in the act of delivering the ball to the batsman, or in throwing to base; nor shall he take more than one step in such delivery."

Clear—Like Einstein

The rule makers could hardly have made their wordage more involved if they had spent a month trying. Let's try to illustrate it in a simpler way.

You are a right hand pitcher getting ready to pitch. Okay. Put your right or pivot foot flat on some part of the rubber. Now put your left foot flat on the ground as far back as you like. Now go ahead and make your wind-up and pitch. That's all there is to it.

Some old timers believe this is equivalent to giving the pitcher the right to take three steps. Clark Griffith, who suggested the change, believe it will help the pitcher. It should; for if he can't put everything he has on the ball with that extra impetus, he doesn't belong on the mound.

Here is one little point that the umpires will have to watch. The pitcher is not allowed to put one foot on the rubber, step back with the other foot and then pitch. He must have both feet resting securely on the ground before pitching. In other words, he must come to a pause after putting his foot back. Just like the shift in football. I have a hunch the umpires are going to ignore that nice distinction.

No Trick Twin Killings

The second change was made to prevent the outfielders from forcing a trick double play. It is an addition to Section 2 of Rule 49. It reads:

"If before two are out while first and second or first, second and third bases are occupied, an outfielder in the judgment of the umpire, intentionally drops a fly ball or a line drive, the umpire shall immediately rule that the ball has been caught."

This means that an outfielder will not be able to take a fly ball chesthigh, carry it down almost to the ground and then drop it. If he tries that ,the umpire will rule that it is an out just as if he caught the ball.

That's all there is to it. But, understand that an outfielder still will be able to trap a fly if he has sufficient skill and daring. The first case cited is not a trapped fly. A trapped fly is permitting the ball to hit the ground and then taking it on a quick pick-up. There is all the difference in the world between the two cases.

The rule makers were almost as involved in making this change as they were in making the first one. For instance, the rule reads "A fly ball or a line drive."

"Honest Ump—I Didn't Try To—"

That's a neat sample of redundancy, for a line drive is a fly ball. That word "intentionally" could conceivably cause some arguments. An outfielder might claim he had no intention of dropping the ball. But the rule is saved by the words "in the judgment of the umpire." In other words, if the umpire thinks the fielder intended to drop the ball (and it should be fairly obvious) then the umpire can rule he made a fair catch.

The major league players won't worry about this rule but some of the better hitters won't be too keen about facing young Bob Feller in a night game under the new rule. I can see them ducking even now.

Grids Quagmires For New Year Soccer Battles

LONDON, Dec 30.—(CP Cable)—Soccer interest shifts at the week-end to Scotland where the game plays a big part in New Year's celebrations. First division teams play three matches in four days, one more than members of the second division.

But the big holiday program will be carried out under conditions totally unlike those which prevailed for England's big doings at Christmas. A thaw has made gridirons like quagmires.

The annual battle between Glasgow Rangers and Celtic—probably the most gruelling struggle of the season—will be played before a capacity crowd at Ibrox Park on Monday. Last year the light blues won the corresponding match 3-1 and on their recent showing they should chalk up another victory.

Saturday, Rangers are likely to retain their five-point margin over the Celts and Hearts at the expense of Ayr United, but two days later they are away to the neighboring Partick outfit which is performing in high gear this season.

The tussle between Celtic and Hearts Saturday is second only in importance to that between "the old firm." The Glasgow Irishmen and Edinburgh's top-ranking team are joint holders of second place in the championship race with 29 points. The result may go either way. Celtic rounds out its holiday schedule with a match against Queen's Park at Parkhead.

Heavy Weekend

Following the match with Celtic, Hearts return to the Scottish capital for a match with their cross-town rivals, Hibernians, January 2, and the following day go to Arbroath.

Tired English League teams will also play on muddy grounds and a number of upsets may be recorded. Feature match of the day is that between Newcastle United and Sheffield United, candidate for promotion in the second division. The teams, tied for second place two points behind Blackburn Rovers, will play at Newcastle.

Derby County, leader in the championship race, opposes Aston Villa at Derby and Everton, runner-up, three points behind the pacemaking Midlanders, is away to Brentford. The Toffeemakers will be strengthened by the inclusion of Stevenson, Irish International inside-left, who missed the Christmas matches through injury.

Out Temporarily

Alex Motter, ABOVE, smooth-skating centre ice star with Detroit Red Wings, turned in his best game of the season in a scoring way the last time his team played Canadiens, and won 4-1. Alex got two goals, but at the same time suffered a gash on one of his insteps and will be out of the lineup for 10 days or two weeks.

Amerks Trounce Boston Bruins 4-2 To Grab Off Third Place; Red Wings Fan Hawks By 4-1

By Jack Calder
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Hockey's most astute dealer in old gold, Mervyn (Red) Dutton, has brought his hock-shop accumulation of jewellry under every national league test and proved its value.

In the two years since the league took over New York Americans' franchise and told Dutton to rebuild the club's ailing fortunes, he has made them a greater power than some teams built by costly farm systems. Through clever dealing, under liberal polishing with the banner that reads "keep punching," the Dutton collection has come up with N.H.L. leaders.

The Americans rose last night into undisputed possession of third place when they defeated the first-place Boston Bruins 4-2 at New York. They became the first team to beat the Bruins twice this season and the first to score four times on a single night against young Frank Brimsek since he replaced Tiny Thompson in Boston's goal.

Chicago Black Hawks, tied with Americans before the night's program, dropped into fourth position by losing to Detroit. The Red Wings, who haven't been beaten by the Hawks all season, gave one of their best performances despite a crippled lineup in their 4-1 victory at Detroit.

Jackson, Anderson Heroes

Art Jackson, bought by Dutton this fall from Boston, and Tommy Anderson, who used to play with Detroit, scored twice each for Americans. A crowd of 15,000 in Madison Square Garden watched the home team go ahead early and pull to the front again after Bruins had tied the score in the second period.

Minus three of their young stars, Alex Motter, Mud Bruneteau and Eddie Wares, the Red Wings got first-class service from such veterans as Marty Barry, Chuck Conacher, Hec Kilrea and Tiny Thompson and from Gus Giesebrecht, up from the International-American league farm at Pittsburgh.

Barry sent the Wings to the front after 19 seconds and Conacher made the lead 2-0 with a blazing shot in the second period. Kilrea increased it in the third and Thompson defied every Hawk attack until Earl Robinson beat him with half the period gone. Then Giesebrecht completed the scoring with five minutes to play.

amendment to the Medical Act providing that no action shall be brought against a doctor who performs such operation with the consent of a parent or guardian of a mentally ill or defective person, or against a parent or guardian for giving such consent."

The commission, whose members other than Mr. Magone were Lionel Conacher, Liberal M.L.A. for Toronto-Bracondale, and Dr. William H. Avery, was set up by Premier Hepburn after charges were made by John R. Green, St. Thomas lawyer, that he was "illegally detained" in the Ontario hospital at London for nearly two years.

The commissioners were told to inquire into management and administration of mental hospitals, operation of the mental hospitals act and various charges and complaints arising from admission, committal, treatment and detention of certain patients.

Stevenson Cleared

Dr. George H. Stevenson, superintendent of the Ontario hospital at London, is cleared by the commission at of Green's allegation with a summary reference that ends: "We understand that Mr. Green has started certain civil proceedings and we have no doubt that if any of his rights have been improperly interferred with he will be vindicated there, in the civil courts."

The report recommends segregation of purely alcoholic cases from mental cases, a survey of paretics (partially paralyzed patients) with a view to their segregation for treatment with "artificial fever," and the re-naming of the hospital at Cobourg so that girls trained for domestic service there will be accepted more readily on release.

It urges that coroners themselves be responsible for investigations of deaths in mental institutions.

Under its recommendations, general hospitals would be assigned the mental examination units which now are included in mental hospitals. Before a magistrate might commit a person for observation to the examination unit of a general hospital, he would have to have before him the certificate of a medical practitioner; before he could commit a person to a mental institution, he would have to have certificates from two medical practitioners.

"We feel that no one should have the stigma of having been placed in a mental ward upon him without some evidence having been taken by the magistrate to indicate that the case is a fit one for examination," the report says.

German Newspapermen Absent As Chamberlain Castigates Nazi Press

A few striking poses of Premier Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain as he delivered his famous speech at the annual dinner of the Foreign Press Association in London, during which he castigated the German government-controlled press for its abuse of British statesmen. The Premier also warned the Reich that Britain had the arms and the money to give a good account of herself if necessary. The dinner was shunned by German press correspondents, believed to have received their orders direct from Berlin.

Mother Is Freed After For Mercy Murder Of I Serving Only 9 Monthsmbecile Baby Son

LEEDS, Eng., Dec. 30.—(AP)—A mother who was sentenced to death only nine months ago for the "mercy murder" of her imbecile son returned to her home and husband today—a free woman.

Mrs. Kathleen Mumford, 40, walked four miles to the police station last March with the body of her son Derek, five. She told officers she put him into a gas oven after the doctor pronounced the child an incurableimbecile.

"In the eyes of the law I am guilty but not in the eyes of God," she testified. She was convicted of murder. Her death sentence was commuted. The Home Secretary ordered her release after neighbors testified recently that she gave the helpless Derek loving and careful attention before the doctor's pronouncement.

Hitler's Talks Border On Hysteria Record Of Voice Waves Reveal

CLEVELAND, Dec. 30—(AP). — A cold, calculating scientific experiment shows that the words of Adolf Hitler reduce his listeners to a submissive state bordering closely on hypnotism, Professor M. D. Steer of Purdue University told the conventions of American Speech Teachers today.

Describing the German fuehrer as one of the men who has done most in recent times to cause "choral thinking," Dr. Steer disclosed results of a partial analysis of recorded Hitler speeches.

The frequency of the Nazi leader's voice in a typical sentence, he explained, is 228 vibrations per second as compared with the 220 vibrations cited by one authority as the "usual frequency" for anger.

Dr. Steer displayed pictures of "Hitler sound waves," the graph lines zig-zagging sharply and remaining almost constantly in the higher voice level. The pictures were taken from records of Hitler speeches.

"It is this high pitch and its accompanying emotion that puts the German people in a passive state," the scientist said. "He stuns them with his words in much the same fashion as we are stunned by an auto horn.

"When persons talk like this it becomes obvious that emotion rather than the mind directs what they are saying, from these voice studies I have come to the conclusion Hitler frequently reaches a condition bordering on hysteria during the course of his talks."

Coal Dealer Wants No Russian Coal Can't Understand Mentality Of People

FRANK Kelcey, George street tobacconist, provided this main street item, a conversation between his coal dealer and the sales representative of some Toronto company handling Russian coal.

"Not for me. I haven't changed my opinion about it at all, except that, if possible, I am more determined not to buy one pound of Russian coal. It is your business to be selling it if you feel that way, or your boss does this is a free country, and believe me I get a great kick out of saying right out loud that I'm not buying Russian coal. In fact if you offered me it for nothing I still don't want it."

There was nothing sharp or unfriendly in the conversation.

The sales agent enquired, "Why don't you want it?" and the dealer's answer was "Just because it's Russian. If you'll just go back and tell you boss that I don't want any of his Russian coal, neither a shovelful or a shipfull, that is all I ask, and I hope every dealer in the country sends the same word back to him."

"But," said the sales agent, "suppose some of your customers ask for Russian coal?"

And the dealer's reply: "I did have one customer—one—ask for Russian coal, and I told him just the same as I'm telling you. I can't understand the mentality of any Canadian who would even think of buying Russian coal, but this is a strange world."

NO ROTARY MEETING

Because Monday next is being observed as New Year's Day there will be no meeting of the Peterborough Rotary Club next week.

TO INSTALL OFFICERS

Installation of officers in the Kiwanis Club, for the year 1939, will be made at an evening meeting at the Empress Hotel next Friday night. W. A. Richardson will take over the post of president from Retiring President L. J. Pettit.

FIREMEN IN TRAINING.

There are several bad dents in the board wall around the Quaker Oats rink following the practise held there this morning by the off shift of the Fire Department. The smoke eaters are getting in shape to challenge Curve Lake and Lakefield, then will probably resume their feud with the bus drivers and perhaps the police.

MAY BE ABSENT SUNDAY.

Rev. Dr. A. T. Young of St. Andrew's Church is very nearly sure that one prominent member of his congregation will not be present at Sunday services on New Year's Day. At the Kiwanis Club luncheon today John Troke extended to him the compliments of the season, "just in case I happen not to get out to church on Sunday." Dr. Young said that in view of the hint, he would be a very surprised man should his parishioner be in attendance Sunday.

One month in jail was the sentence imposed by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. this morning upon Howard Croan of Port Hope who pleaded guilty on Wednesday on a vagrancy charge.

"I thought he was wanted elsewhere," remarked the Magistrate when Croan's case was called this morning.

"The Toronto police have been unable to connect him with the theft of the motor car near here the other day," explained Chief Constable Newhall, "and they are not bringing him back."

Acting Crown Attorney F. D. Kerr, K.C., produced Croan's record which showed a number of previous convictions dating back for ten years.

Georgina Brock, 21-year-old Toronto girl who was arrested with Croan and who had also pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy was sentenced to four days in jail, dating from December 28 which means she will be released tomorrow. The court was informed that the girl had no previous record.

Two Peterborough Couples Mark 52nd Wedding Anniversaries

Mr. and Mrs. George Curtis and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Deck, who live directly opposite each other on Park Hill Road, exchanged good wishes this week as both celebrated their 52nd wedding anniversaries. Both families have been close friends for more than a quarter of a century, Mr. Deck having been employed for many years at the Curtis Brick Company, owned by his neighbor, George Curtis.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis, both of whom came from pioneer stock, were married in St. Luke's Anglican Church on December 28, 1886. They spent their entire wedded life in the house which they still occupy and seven of their nine children are still living. Georgina, Reg. N., at home, Muriel of Chatham, Alma, Reg. N., New York City, Mildred, Reg.N., Clifton Springs, N.Y., Mrs. George Cole of Leamington, is the fifth girl. Stanley and Floyd both live in this city, and the other son Howard was killed in action on the Somme in France. There are five grandchildren.

Mrs. Curtis is 71 and her husband is 76, and both are active and in fair health.

Mr. and Mrs. Deck have lived directly across from the Curtis home for 48 years. Both are enjoying fairly good health. Mrs. Deck is 74 and Mr. Deck is 78. He joined the Orange Order 56 years ago and has only missed six celebrations in this district over the long period of years. They were married at Trent River, and before her marriage Mrs. Deck's name was Jean Davidson. They have two children, Herbert Deck, Rogers Street, Ashburnham, and Mrs. J. Tedford of Hamilton. Four grandchildren and one great-grandchild sent felicitations to the happy couple to mark the anniversary.

Two Brothers Born In Peterborough Die Within Few Minutes Of Each Other In Different Towns

Death reached out twice within a few minutes yesterday to take two brothers, one in Whitby and the other in Toronto. The two men were A. E. Brundrett, who died in Whitby at four o'clock in the afternoon, and W. A. Brundrett, who died in Wellesley hospital a few minutes after.

Sometimes death occurs as a shock when one person learns of the death of someone near him, but not so in this case. Neither brother knew the other was even ill.

A. E. Brundrett was born in Peterborough in 1884, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Brundrett. He was educated in Peterborough public schools and the collegiate institute and began his career in this city as an employee of the Ontario Bank. He was later transferred to the Crown Bank, and then the Royal Bank. He has been attached to the head office staff in Montreal and has been manager at various branches, including Montreal, Kitchener, Walkerville, and three in Toronto.

In his youth in Peterborough he was active in sports, belonging to the old Colts Hockey club. He was a member of championship O.R.F.U. teams in this city.

Surviving are his wife, formerly Ellen Alberta Hall of this city, and four sisters, Mrs. T. Barrie, Mrs. Edythe Elliott and Mrs. R. E. Layfield, all of Peterborough and Mrs. W. W. Armstrong, of Regina, Sask., and one brother, Walter Brundrett of Alberta.

Production Manager at C.G.E.

W. A. Brundrett was born in this city in 1876 and educated in Peterborough public schools and Collegiate institute. He started work on the construction of the Canadian General Electric Company buildings in 1890. He was manager of the Production department of the Peterborough works of the C.G.E. and also in their head office.

He married Effie Jackson of Peterborough and Mrs. Jean Costigane of Toronto is a daughter. He leaves besides his widow and daughter his sisters, Mrs. T. Barrie, Mrs. Edythe Elliott, Mrs. R. E. Layfield, Mrs. W. W. Armstrong, and his brother, Walter Brundrett.

A double funeral for the two brothers will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Comstock Funeral Home, 305 Water street, Rev. Canon J. D. Paterson officiating. Interment will be at Little Lake cemetery.

Reeve Gifford Only Fought Two Elections

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ENNISMORE, Dec. 30. — Something of perhaps a rather unique record is that of the Municipal Council of Ennismore, the members of which were returned to office by acclamation yesterday.

Reeve James A. Gifford enters upon his sixth term as reeve and his eighth in municipal office, having served as a member of the council for two years prior to his election as reeve. During those years he contested but two elections—one for the office of councillor and one for the reeveship — otherwise his terms have been by acclamation. "Jimmie," as he is known to his friends, is the youngest reeve on the township records, and also one of the most youthful members to sit in the County Council. He was the first Ennismore reeve to hold the position of Warden of the County of Peterborough, having brought that honor to his municipality in 1936.

Councillor Thomas Cavanagh is a former reeve of the township and has served as a member of the council at different intervals. Last year he was elected by acclamation to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Vincent Murphy, and now enters upon his second term without opposition. Incidentally he was reeve at the time that the three other members of the present council were first elected to office.

Councillors Maurice O'Connor, Edward O'Donoghue and Frank Young are beginning their tenth year in that capacity, and during that time have each contested two elections. They have taken the oath of office under three British sovereigners, have served under three reeves, and have been associated with five others as the fourth member of the council, one of those five being Reeve Gifford. Four others were Joseph Doran, David Scollard, Vincent Murphy and the present fourth member, Thomas Cavanagh.

When Recovering Plank In No-Man's Land Soldier Found Pal Holding Other End

Odd incidents occurred in No Man's Land during the World War and many have never been recounted.

Morley Plunkett, local insurance agent, related this morning a coincidence that happened on the Somme front. He recalled living with two fellows, one named Jupp from Orillia and the other Booth from Ingersol, at the Fort William Y.M. C.A. in 1913. All three went overseas and for a long time were separated.

Jupp was in the front line trenches at Somme during the war, and out in No Man's Land he spied a large plank which he needed to strengthen the dugout wall. He determined to clamber over the parapet after dark and get the plank. Accordingly about midnight he started out on his quest. He reached the plank without mishap, but to his utter consternation as he picked up one end of the plank somebody else picked up the other end. For a second he thought some person was hiding beneath the board and had decided to get out in a hurry.

Jupp blurted out some of the colorful language characteristic of the fighting man, and to his further surprise was answered in kind by the dim figure holding the other end of the plank. The voice being English, the two lay down on the ground to establish each other's identity, and so as not to attract a barrage from the Heinie lines a short distance away.

The other soldier turned out to be Booth, Jupp's room-mate from Ingersol, who had also spotted the large plank and needed it in his own dugout. Booth was with a supporting unit on the flank and only a short distance from his former buddy. Plunkett met Jupp last summer and heard the story for the first time.

Acclaimed

Reeve James Gifford of Ennismore township who has only fought two elections in eight years. This year he was returned by acclamation. He is the youngest reeve in the history of the township and the first Ennismore reeve to ever occupy the warden's chair.

Witty Irishman Fined In Court

A witty Irishman from Kinmount was convicted on a charge of drunkenness before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning but not before he had put up a notable battle for acquittal and produced more laughs than have been heard in court in months.

Constable John Stevenson who arrested the man in the Elite Cafe the other night after a phone call had been received from the establishment and Constable Leo Murphy who was on duty in the police station when the Kinmount visitor was brought in swore he was intoxicated.

However, the accused went into the witness box and denied that he had been drunk. He admitted that after he had arrived in town on the Lindsay bus he had some beer.

"How much beer?" asked Acting Crown Attorney F. D. Kerr, K.C.

The accused was not quite sure. "My memory is not so good on things that have just happened," he explained. "I can remember 40 years ago better."

He finally managed to recall that he had three drinks of beer in one hotel and one in each of two others.

"That makes five," he said, doing a little mental arithmetic, "and I can stand a lot more than that and never feel it."

"I can drink beer all day long," he explained for the benefit of the court, "and if I stagger I'll give Your Worship a dollar."

The accused declared that he had been on his way home to spend New Year's and he wanted his money "to buy the kids some gifts."

"We'll let you down easy on the costs," said Magistrate Langley, and fined him $10. "The costs will be only 75 cents and that will leave you something to buy the toys."

The visitor left the court room after a somewhat ironic "Thank you" wafted in the direction of the magistrate.

A local man who pleaded guilty to being drunk was also given a little seasonal leniency in the matter of costs, escaping with a fine of $10 and 75 cents with the alternative of seven days in jail. He is taking the imprisonment.

Another man charged with drunkenness as a third offender was remanded until to-morrow at the request of Chief Newhall. "That will give him a chance to pull himself together," the Chief said.

Ontario Paid Largest Part Relief Costs

The total cost of relief in Ontario for 1935 was $36,565,056 of which the Dominion paid $7,650,000 or 20.92%; the provincial government contributed $20,772,005 or 56.81%, and the municipalities paid $8,143,053 or 22.27%.

In 1936 Ontario's gross relief bill was $30,900,486, of which the Dominion paid $10,647,000 or 34.46%; the province $12,638,820 or 40.9%, and the municipalities $7,614,666 or 24.64%.

In 1937 the gross cost was $22,330,186. Of that amount the Dominion government paid $7,044,750 or 31.55%; the province $10,076,158 or 45.12% and the municipalities $5,209,278 or 23.33%.

For the present year Ontario's total relief bill may reach $22,000,000 of which the municipalities have paid 30%, the province approximately 50% and the Dominion the remainder.

For three years from 1935 to 1937 inclusive, relief distributed in Ontario reached the total of $89,795,730 of which the province paid $43,486,983, the municipalities $20,966,907, and the Dominion $25,344,750.

With the approximate amount of $22,000,000 for the total this year, the gross for the last four years amounts to $111,795,730; and the same information points out that the government of Ontario has paid almost 50% of that sum.

Small Boy Is Hurt When Car Skids

Five-year-old James Johnson, son of George W. Johnson, 553 Albert street, had a lucky escape from serious injury Thursday morning when he was hit by the bumperette of a car driven by Miss Willa Aherne, 400 Downie street.

The accident happened on Park street in front of the Canadian General Electric Company plant. Miss Aherne, who is a nurse, was driving south when the little fellow ran out from the sidewalk in front of her car. The driver applied her brakes to prevent crashing into the child but the car slewed round on the slippery road and the rear end struck the lad on the left thigh, causing two abrasions. He was driven to his home by Miss Aherne after he had received medical attention.

Team And Sleigh Break Through Ice On Chemong

Breaking through the ice of Chemong Lake with his sleigh and team this morning about 9.35 o'clock, Fred Twomey of Ennismore, caretaker of the floating bridge, dragged himself back to safety and succeeded in rescuing one horse. The other was also pulled on to the ice with the help of farmers living along the north shore of the lake, but it succumbed to the effects of being almost drowned combined with the shock of immersion in the ice cold water.

Recent snow and ice accumulation on the floating bridge have weighted it almost beyond its buoyancy this week. At one place near the north end, the float has sunk considerably below the water line, creating a trap for automobiles, and finally forcing traffic to take the over-the-ice route. Farmers have had quite a few calls to pull cars out of the "water-hole" on the bridge.

The Examiner was informed that Mr. Twomey turned out off the bridge following the temporary traffic lane, and the ice cracked and sank beneath his sleigh, causing the death of one of his horses, a bitter touch of realism with all the summer charm of the lake stripped from the floating structure.

CHAPTER 38

THE NUMBER of young men asking to take Sara Sue Davis to the International ball, up to a sort of unofficial closing time Saturday noon, totaled nine. Since September the news had gotten around in Houston as well as on the Rice campus that the widow Davis was back in society and was, if anything, more charming than ever before. Five of the requests came from Rice students, one from the faculty (a rather likeable Dr Swartz, in chemistry), and three from outside. One of the outside three was first, and he was lucky.

He was Mr. T. J. Sanders, head salesman for Columbia Sporting Goods corporation. Like any good salesman, he had planted his sale weeks before, cultivated it right and won the harvest. He was ahead of Bob Towne just by 24 hours. Worthington Gurley had even asked to take Sara Sue—but young Worthington had encountered a magnificent adventure in the intervening weeks, and so now would take his charming new wife, Marcia.

Sara Sue had given much thought to the age-old question of what to wear to this ball. Many of the girls would be in Spanish costume. She investigated that, found that she could rent one for $15 and make one for a little more.

"But I am a poor widder woman, T. J.," she told him, "and $15 looks as big as the football stadium."

"I will take up a collection," he jibed. "But I don't care what you wear. Come in your slacks and I'll still bet $50 you are the belle of the ball."

He would have won his bet.

Some girl, it seems, has to dominate every dance in North America. Some one girl whose personality and beauty stands out. It is the American way.

Sara Sue had the looks and personality, and the prominence. Nature had seen to the former, and the newspapers recently had seen to the latter. She and her cottage for Counsel in Romance had been publicized in every paper from the New York Times to the Houston Press, inclusive, the syndicated feature services having shown only a little less enthusiasm than the home-town editors. Sara Sue's beauty was nationally known. She had, in fact, been contacted by at least two movie talent scouts, and had received them rather coldly, having her own ideas about where happiness lay.

Inevitably, therefore, people at the dance centered their attention largely on her. People who knew her pointed her out to people who didn't, and introduced her. At least a dozen men tried to introduce her to the Mexican football captain, Don Romero Celledor; it got to be a joke between them.

In the final decision, Sara Sue had worn one of the three evening dresses she already owned. It was a relatively simple—hence exceptionally becoming — creation in "Rice blue". Only contrasting color was gray. The blue and gray, Rice colors. Who would have thought they could make such a beautiful gown?

Other girls asked each other that, and answered that it was Sara Sue herself who made it beautiful. It had been chosen for taste, not for cost nor flash. It made her look 16 at a distance, 18 up close; she who was actually 23.

She and T. J. saw Thornton Holgate during the first intermission, chanced to stop dancing only a few feet away. In the gay rush of roy took no part) Thornton showed greetings (in which Peaches Pomegenuine pleasure.

"I am proud of you, Sara Sue!" he declared, untactfully. "You look charming! Does she not, Mr. Sanders?"

Mr. Sanders was nodding and declaring he would tell the cock-eyed world she did, and several more couples crowded up to talk. Peaches led Thornton away.

Big Bob Towne came to claim Sara Sue for the next dance—he had wheedled three dances off T. J.'s program. Laughter and conversation filled the great ballroom now. That intangible atmosphere of relaxation and gaiety which can be created only by a college crowd was taking hold. The music was more than excellent. The hall itself—the big University club—had been elaborately decorated to resemble a hacienda, rich in the figurative and literal color of Mexico and Spain. A few people could and did speak Spanish to each other, and practically everybody else was laughingly trying it.

T. J. Sanders would catch some man talking attentively to Sara Sue, sidle up to him ominously, twist his own imaginary mustache and speak fiercely, "You lak thees senorita, my fran? You make thee fight wiz me, HAH?" Then he would draw a pretend dagger and strike a pose.

After a while he acquired a letter opener (snitched from the club secretary's desk) which really gleamed like a dagger, and that added zest to his act. Sara Sue told him he was childish. But he was not; he was a happy swain showing off, which is a masculine privilege.

During the intermission between dances four and five—when almost everybody knew almost everybody else—Bob Towne and Don Romero staged an impromptu act in the middle of the floor.

A cute little girl with the orchestra had come out to sing and tap dance, and she wore a bull's head of papier mache. Don Romero, full of mischief, siezed the false head, slipped it over his own head and shouted VIVA EL TORO! VIVA MEXICO!"

Bob Towne instantly snatched a bright red shawl from some girl's costume and challenged the "bull" to a fight. The orchestra drummer, joining the spirit of play, furnished sundry roarings on his drums, and everybody shrieked and laughed hilariously. Especially in the end, when the "bull" caught the brave matador and tossed him out of the ring.

The applause was so great that the amateur actors had to come back for a burlesque encore. And to oblige still further, Don Romero sang a song in English:

"Tonight I'M the gay caballero
Out for much laughter—ha ha!
The maidens may all go a-running,
But I shall run after, ha ha-a-a-a!
I'll catch me a girlo
And give her a whirlo
Of whoopee a la Espanol.
For love is my song at Fiesta;
My heart, she sings mucho—ha ha!
I'm bound to be gay,
Ha-ha ha-ha HEY!
Viva La Fiesta del Sol!"

That went over doubly well. For not only did the rather handsome young Mexican have a fair voice, he also had a sense of humor and a stage presence. He sang his song with just the appropriate gestures, he used the simple tricks of showmanship which make any impromptu performance good.

Peaches Pomeroy had edged into the center of the big circle who watched him, and she took pains to applaud loudly, even when he sang his comic chorus directly at Sara Sue. The crowd was already whispering — correctly — that Sara Sue Davis would be his choice for the grand march. There was nothing Peaches could do about it, except burn inwardly. A year ago, when Bob Towne and she were supplying the campus romance, when she was tops in campus society, when she was regarded as the acme of collegiate beauty—but there is no good in mulling over the past.

Peaches knew now that Bob would start immediately to woo Sara Sue Davis as ardently as he could. With this afternoon's game, football training was over. He could now sit up nights. He could go places, do as he pleased, eat what he wanted, when he wanted to. In short, he was now free. And he had already been telling the school that he was "sold" on the Davis person.

Peaches left the gathering presently. Went off to the women's lounge to be alone and think, pretending, when necessary, to be rearranging her dress.

When she heard an outburst of applause, she went back long enough to verify what she had feared—that Don Romero had chosen Sara Sue. It had seemed entirely appropriated to everyone. Sara Sue, in Rice colors, Rice's most popular girl. Sara Sue, in American — not Mexican — costume. It had seemed ideal. Nobody appeared to remember that Sara Sue was not actually a part of Rice at all, officially. Peaches came on back to the lounge.

It occurred to Peaches that she wanted a drink badly. But she was stuck with Thornton Holgate, who was too damned correct. As soon as possible, she would ditch him and look up some of the old gang. Meanwhile, she'd give anything to kick the Davis woman out of town. To—to—well, to get even. Davis was an intruder anyway. She had come to Rice and butted in on everybody's business, and made them pay for it. She had stuck her nose—oh, damn!

It always had in old man Pomeroy, who squeezed other people in Texas out of their oil well rights. It had frequently meant danger in his daughter. And it was breeding danger in her now.

She sat for a long while, sulking, staring at nothing, thinking, twisting the exquisite diamond bracelet she wore. The more she thought, the more she hated Sara Sue Davis. She hated everybody. She hated—oh, damn! She needed a drink. She would—

All at once, then, an idea struck her.

She looked at the bracelet. Not admiringly, but, inspired. Her features hardened perceptibly, and she seemed to be looking at nothing at all. She knew, in a moment, that she had a plan. A perfectly wonderful plan!

Write Better Letters—Charm Your Friends

Clever Sally! She's learned the simple rules that make friend-winning letters easy.

She's cheery. She could have said: "I've been too busy to write sooner . . . It's rained all week . . . All of us have bad colds . . ."

Instead she writes merrily: "Dear Dick, What luck to have an hour off to gossip after the past week's whirl . . . Wish you could see how cozy I am, curled up with a comforter over my toes while the wind howls outside . . ."

She's prompt. A bread-and-butter letter: "My head's still buzzing with the gay tunes we danced to last week-end. You planned such good times for me . . ." A note of sympathy: "My heart's sad for you these days. You'll let me know, I'm sure, if I can help . . ."

She's correct. She never omits her address and the date—but in friendly letters she often puts them on the last page, in the lower left-hand corner.

Write letters that show you at your best. Our 32-page booklet gives sample letters for all occasions. Easy-to-follow tips on good usage, style, charm.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of GOOD LETTER-WRITING MADE EASY to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

DOROTHY DIX

No One Knows When Or Where Cupid Will Shoot His Darts, So, While Psychologists' Ideas Of "Look Before You Leap" Are Good, They Don't Always Work

A DISTINGUISHED psychologist warns boys and girls against the danger of falling in love with the wrong person. To prevent this catastrophe he advises them to investigate very carefully the heredity, health, character, habits and dispositions of any members of the opposite sex to whom they may be attracted BEFORE they fall in love with them.

Fine idea. Only how is this admirable theory to be put into execution? Falling in love is not something one does deliberately, with set purpose and malice aforethought. It is something that happens to one suddenly when one is least expecting it, like being struck by lightning or run over by an automobile. It is something for which one can't be prepared.

A young man may be going along his way, heart whole and fancy free, at peace with himself and the world, and with no suspicion of danger. He makes enough money to indulge himself in all the little comforts and luxuries he craves, but it would butter the bread very thinly if he had to spread it over a wife and kids. He has his personal liberty and can come and go as he pleases. He is the darling of hostesses and enjoys all the perquisites that pertain to the single man.

Moreover, his observation of his married friends has led him to the belief that there are more thorns than roses in the holy estate. Consequently nothing could be farther from his thoughts and desires than to fall in love. He would as soon contemplate committing kara-kiri.

Then, without warning, like a bolt from the blue, the thing happens that he has tried to avoid. Boy meets girl, and before he knows it he has fallen head over heels in love with her. He had no premonition of danger so that he could turn and flee to safety. He had no time to look up her pedigree, or ask for her I. Q., or to inquire of the people who had known her all her life whether she was industrious and domestic and kind to her mother. She just somehow hit his taste and he feels that life would be cinders, ashes and dust without her, and that's all there is to it.

Of course, it would save a lot of grief if men and women could control their affections and set them upon those who would make them suitable mates. Then, indeed, would marriage be an earthly Paradise in which the heart would do the head's bidding and we should be able to thrill to order.

Then Charles would be able to fall madly in love with the fat, dull, commonplace, rich girl his mother has picked out for him for a wife, instead of the poor little flibbertigibbet that sets his pulses racing. Adeline would see her Fairy Prince in a bald-headed, bay-windowed widower who could give her matched pearls and sables, instead of the poor boy who can't provide her with bread and meat. And the middle-aged husband would stay in love with his wife and save a scandal, instead of going off the deep end over some pretty little flapper.

Another of the difficulties of loving to order is that none of us know why we love, or what particular thing it is in a man or woman that made us pick him or her out as the object of our adoration. Certainly we do not fall in love with people for their virtues. No man falls in love with a woman because she is thrifty and industrious and cut out to be a good wife. Nor does any girl fall in love with a man because he is moral and sober and upright and a model citizen. The world is full of saintly old maids and bachelors who never raised a flutter in any one's heart.

Nor do we fall in love with people because of their looks, or their intelligence. On every side we see men and women who have passed all the Miss Americas and Robert Taylors to fall in love with youths and maidens who hadn't a single charm to bless themselves with, and whose conversation had about as much sparkle to it as dish water. It is a matter of common knowledge that the most beloved husbands and wives are not the best ones, but those who have fired the fancies of their mates.

All of which goes to show the difficulty of finding out BEFORE you fall in love the sort of a person you should fall in love with. It can't be done, for the heart is a self-starter and before you can put on the brakes it has run away with you.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

Knarf and Hanid, the shadow-children with the turned-about names, thought they ought to go and pay Mrs. Cuckoo a visit. They had very good reason to do so, as you shall soon see.

So they waited until she opened the door of her little cottage atop the cuckoo clock which hung on the wall in the playroom. It was then exactly nine o'clock. While she stood on her front steps calling out the hour, they hurried inside. They waited for her in her pretty parlor.

"So you've come to pay me a visit?" she said with a smile after she had closed the door and come in again. "I suppose you've got something very important to tell me."

"No, Mrs. Cuckoo," Hanid replied. "We've got something important to ask you," said Knarf.

"Well," she asked, "what is this important thing that you want to ask me?"

They waited until the door opened.

"We wan to ask you," said Hanid, "if you're going to do anything different after Sunday?"

"After Sunday? What's Sunday?"

"Sunday is New Year's Day!" Knarf exclaimed. "It's the first day of the New Year. It's January first."

Mrs. Cuckoo stopped knitting, pushed her spectacles over her forehead, and chuckled. "My, my! I quite forgot. To be sure, Sunday is New Year's Day. I'm very glad you reminded me." Then she chuckled again, pushed her spectacles down and went in with her knitting.

"But aren't you going to do anything about it?" the two shadows asked in surprise. "New Year's Day only comes once a year."

"Yes, I know."

"And it has a lot to do with hours and days and months. It has a lot to do with the clock. Because on New Year's Eve everyone in the house will be waiting for you to come out on your front steps and call out twelve o'clock. The second after you stop they'll all know that the New Year has really started."

Then Mrs. Cuckoo really chuckled. She put her knitting down altogether as she said: "But, darling! Of course, I'm going to let everyone in the house know when the New Year comes in. Instead of calling out twelve o'clock as I always do, I'm going to say as loudly as I can: 'Happy New Year! Happy New Year!' But the moment after I do that, I'll keep everything just exactly as it's always been. A second will still be a second, a minute will still be a minute, an hour will still be an hour. Old years and new years—they're always the same as far as I and my clock are concerned. But I do wish you and everyone else a Happy New Year, and happier seconds, minutes, and hours than you've ever had before. And now I must go on with my knitting."

Looking Back
On This Date

Although Sir John A. Macdonald won a sweeping victory for the Liberal-Conservative party and the National policy in September, 1878, he met personal defeat in his old constituency of Kingston, largely because he was "on the stump" and could not attend to his home defences. At that time elections in British Columbia were held later than in the east and the prime minister was given the seat for Victoria, B. C., a fitting tribute to his work of cementing the Dominion from sea to sea.

But there were a number of people "back east" who thought that the first minister should represent a central Canada riding. Among these was Professor Goldwin Smith, who, on this date (Dec. 30) in 1879, wrote to Sir John suggesting that he should be a candidate for Toronto West when Mr. John Beverley Robinson resigned to become lieutenant-governor of Ontario. The "Sage of the Grange," a close personal friend of Sir John and one who had aided him materially during his poverty and exile from office, 1873-78, wrote that although there was some doubt as to whether "anyone" could carry the seat there was no doubt that Sir John could; and he added: "We should not allow the election to put you to any expense."

Sir John declined the offer. He sat for Victoria until the elections of 1882, when he was elected for both Carleton (in which Ottawa is situated) and Lennox. But in 1887 he won back Kingston and represented it to his death in 1891. The relations between the prime minister and the philosopher were varied. Sometimes they were the closest of friends; at other times Dr. Goldwin Smith poured out the vials of his wrath upon John A. in "The Week," differing principally upon trade and other relations with the United States.

The professor was convinced that Canada's ultimate destiny was to be annexed by the United States. Sir John, on the other hand, believed in, and fought for, steady adhesion to the imperial tie. He the old man would rejoice if he could but come back next year and see the sovereign receive the homage of the people of Canada as the King of Canada, for that was how he wanted it to be in the B. N. A. Act, and it might have been if Lord Derby had not been "afraid that it might antagonize the Americans."

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, December 31.

The celebration of the passing of the old year may be found a bit subdued or may lack the customary riotous hilarity and over-indulgence according to the astral influence. While there is some stimulus to festivity and boistrous good fellowship, generally there may be modification with a leaning to sober and serious reflection rather than dramatic and ungoverned thrills. There are fine benefits, promotion, and sound friendships to be contemplated.

Those whose birthday it is may turn from the old year with much thought and look to the new with justified hopes of substantial progress, with the co-operation and friendly offices of those in high place and power. These should be cultivated and sound objectives developed, but there is a note of caution in dealing with the young.

A child born on this day may be talented, have much versatility, be progressive and ambitious, attaining substantial position, not only through its own merit but by the endorsement of high powers attracted by its real worth and dependability.

We Noticed

....Since fur hats and muffs are great favorites with the smartly groomed women this season, this would be a good winter to spend your Christmas cash on a muff or fur hat to match your fur coat or the collar of a cloth one.

....Either is sure to add fresh interest to a wardrobe of which you may be getting mildly weary, and of course they are right in tune with the current renaissance of Victorian and Edwardian modes.

....If you haven't looked at muffs this year and mention of them conjures up visions for the enormous but slightly shapeless ones grandmother carried for no other reason than to keep her hands warm, you're due for a pleasant surprise. The modern models come in every imaginable shape and size. And their separate compartments, closed with slide fasteners, put them in the substitutes-for-pocketbooks category. You don't carry a muff and a bag. You carry one or the other.

FURRED SMARTNESS

By ALICE ALDEN

When it comes to furs, nothing is overlooked. Every fur-bearing animal has to chip in for the cause of fashion. Now it is raccoon that is sheared within an inch of its skin to make a fur that is tops when it comes to smartness. It is inexpensive, but it has the suppleness and richness of the much more costly beaver. It is nice for sports and informal town wear. The model, left, is collarless, and the skins are worked like mink. The coat is lined in bright plaid wool, and the fur is sturdy and water-repellent. The leopard ensemble, coat, muff and hat, is an indication of the popularity of this marked fur which finds itself trimming smart evening and dinner things, and hostess gowns.

IN MEMORIAM

CAMERON.—In loving memory of our mother, Elizabeth Miller, wife of Donald K. Cameron, who passed away December 30, 1918.

And the hills were hard to climb.
So he closed her weary eyelids
And whispered, "Peace be thine."
The golden gates were open,
A gentle voice said "Come."
And with the redeemed in Heaven
Our mother entered home.

—Ever remembered by her daughter, Mrs. Cummiskey, and Family.

MILLBROOK

The family Christmas party at the home of Mrs. A. T. Armstrong this week included as guests Mr. Norman Armstrong, home from Kincardine; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Armstrong, Messrs. A. T. and Roderick Armstrong, of Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Allie Payne, who were here for the Christmas weekend, left on Thursday at noon for their home in Toronto.

A pleasant surprise was prepared for Mr. and Mrs. W. Charles Thorndyke on Wednesday evening, when the immediate members of their faimly had them as guests of honor for a party in recognition of the fortieth anniversary of their wedding day.

Euchre and other games, with music, were enjoyed, and just previous to all sitting down to a beautifully laid table at 12 p.m., the children and grandchildren presented Mr. and Mrs. Thorndyke with a tri-lite floor lamp, and with a large silver service tray, bearing a cream and sugar in matching design, the whole being in Sheffield reproduction pattern.

The guests of honor were taken completely by surprise, but expressed their gratitude in suitable terms, after which the well-planned supper was served, and a most enjoyable time spent about the table.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Thorndyke took place forty years ago at the home of the bride's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. David S. Armstrong, and all their married life has been spent in Millbrook; Mr. Thorndyke is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thorndyke, and has for some time capably filled the office of clerk of the municipality, as well as carrying on other business.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Hill and two boys, and Mr. J. W. Thorndyke, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wolff, and two boys, of Peterborough, and Miss Ruth, at home.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

A PAINFUL SQUEEZE

HAVE YOU ever been squeezed on the very first trick, by your partner's opening lead? It doesn't happen often, and it is a painful experience not to be desired. But if you cannot follow suit, and have to discard something, your chief aim should be to hold on to cards which look as if they may eventually be important and toss away one which may possibly not count. Having done that, all that you can do is hope for the best.

	♠ 7 5 ♥ Q J 9 8 4 ♦ 8 5 4 3 2 ♣ K
♠ 8 6 4 3 2 ♥ None ♦ K Q 10 9 7 6 ♣ Q 9	N W E S	♠ Q J 10 ♥ 10 7 6 3 2 ♦ None ♣ 8 6 5 4 3
	♠ A K 9 ♥ A K 5 ♦ A J ♣ A J 10 7 2

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

On this crazy patchwork, two passes were followed by East's psychic 1-Club, which South showed up with his vulnerable 2-No trump. West, getting the interference and sacrifice idea, bid 3-Diamonds, then South 4-Clubs. When North showed a vestige of strength with 4-Hearts, South became emotional about his opponents' butting-in and leaped to 6-No Trump, favoring it over 6-Hearts because of his 100 aces.

West's lead of the diamond K put East on the spot. As it turned out, any card he shed would build declarer a trick. He chose a club. Followed then the club K, the heart A, showing West out, the club A, dropping the Q, then the club J, on which West discarded. This gave South a complete count of both hands. He led another club, and yet another, which squeezed East for a second time. Had he tossed a heart, it would have set up the fifth one there. Instead he picked the spade 10, so declarer then cashed three more hearts and three spades, making a grand slam.

As it turned out, the diamond lead was not necessary to squeeze East. South could have squeezed him, after any other lead, by merely laying down his diamond A.

It will be noted that the grand slam can be made at only No trump. At either hearts or clubs, East could take one trick surely.

Tomorrow's Problem

When West leads the heart J against South's 3-No trump, and the dummy goes down, how much can East tell about the composition of the suit?

No Sign Of Peace For Orient In Coming Year

(Copyright, 1938, the Havas News Agency.)

SHANGHAI, Dec. 30—(CP-Havas)—There has been no peace in the far east in 1938 and there is likely to be none in 1939, observers here say in comment on events of the past 12 months.

After slow and costly campaigns stretching over 18 months, Japan today counts as conquered China's coasts, its railways, its chief ports and cities and its major river valleys. Driven into a shrinking hinterland, China is still fighting for its existence, while in the occupied territories roving armies of guerillas challenge the invader's rule.

Determined to realize on its conquests, Japan proclaimed a "new order" in East Asia and announced it planned to create a Japan-China-Manchoukuo bloc to make this new order real. Japanese spokesmen made it plain that the nine-power treaty, drafted at Washington in 1922 to govern the relationship of forces in the Orient, was to be regarded as obsolete.

Russia Still A Mystery.

Across the Japan sea, Soviet Russia remained a puzzle to observers. Ir the far east, as in Europe, it stood as the unknown quantity in international relations. The latent Japanese-Russian conflict broke into actual hostilities for three weeks in July and August in a dispute over a strip of hills where the borders of Korea, Manchoukuo and Siberia meet in a region still unmapped. The "battle of Changkufeng" ended indecisively in a truce.

A year ago, after six months of back from Shankhai and Nanking. war, the Chinese had just fallen The invaders pursued them inland from the conquered coastline but it took nearly five months to complete the drive on the eastern half of the Lunghai railway, China's sole west-east line, extended from Sian beyond the mountain passes in the west to Haichow on the sea. Suchow, the strategic junction of the Lunghai and Tientsin-Pukon fell on May 19.

Costly Campaign

It was for the Japanese the costliest campaign of the war. Ill-armed liest campaign of the war. Ill-airmd doggedly in their path all along the way. At least on one occasion, at Taierhchwang in southern Shantung in April, the Chinese trapped five invading divisions and inflicted upon them a defeat that revitalized sagging Chinese morale. Japanese officers in Shanghai admitted to correspondents that the Japanese suffered a severe setback at Taierhchwang.

Met by floods pouring through dynamited dykes, the invaders were checked on the western end of the Lunghai railway in Honan, but moved in on Hankow along both banks of the Yangtse and through southern Honan. It took another five months of slow and costly campaigning to bring them within reach of Hankow early in October.

At that point the Japanese landed an expeditionary force of 50,000 men at Bias Bay, 90 miles from Canton, and, reportedly bribing local Chinese commanders, marched overland with no resistance, occupying the southern metropolis on Oct. 21, 10 days after the first landing had been made. Scarcely firing a shot, they cut off China's lifeline to the south and its remaining sea outlet via the Pearl river and Hong Kong, and placed themselves astride the trade route which made Hong Kong the richest port on the Chinese coast.

In Hankow there was little stomach left for a last stand in the city. Evacuation was ordered and the Japanese marched in Oct. 25. With this, the phase of large-scale positional warfare apparently came to an end.

Heads Called 76 p.c. In Coin Flipping

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 30—(AP).—The human mind is not nearly so accurate as the simple laws of chance at making correct guesses. The reason is that men, women, boys and girls all misuse the laws of chance, without realizing it, when they try to predict.

These findings were explained to the American association for the advancement of science here today. If a coin is flipped mechanically the probability of heads or tails is 50-50.

But, said Dr. Louis D. Goodfellow of Northwestern University, when humans guess the flip of a coin the chances are from 76 to 79 per cent they will call heads. On the second call they will still call heads oftener than the laws of chance allow, in an excess of seven per cent. Then on the third call humans will average too low, 44 per cent in favor of heads.

The reasons, Dr. Goodfellow said, are probably sub-conscious. They may be due merely to the construction of the phrase "heads-tails" used to describe this little game. Heads is always spoken first. Therefore, without knowing it, people call heads too often.

Harold B. Neal, A. D. Bennett, Harvey Donald, and Miss Dorothy Henson and made their first stop at the Canada Packers. They were shown through the building from top to bottom, and ended their tour with samples of the company's tomato juice and "Tendersweet" ham. They also visited the Quaker Oats Company and the Canadian General Electric Company. The trip was arranged by Rev. Mr. Neal. (Examiner Staff Photo.)

Stick To Us Or Lose Golden Market Berlin Warns South America

BERLIN, Dec. 30 — (AP). — Rudolf Brinkmann, Secretary of State in the German Economics Ministry, to-day warned South American countries to stick close to Germany economically or they might find themselves without a lucrative market.

He gave the implied threat of switching German business to southeastern Europe should Latin American states "succumb to the machinations" directed against Germany. Writing in the Berlin economic magazine Wirtschaftsblatt, he declared:

"We are not surprised that efforts are being made to cloud our relations, good until now, with South America with the open aim of damaging us economically by crippling our raw material imports from there.

"We are convinced that the South American states will think enough not to succumb to such suggestions Should, however ,the machinations directed against us receive attention, then we do not hesitate to declare that the time fortunately is past when it was thought possible to strike effectively at us economically by such methods.

"For to-day the economic axis from the North Sea to the Black Sea is a reality and one may be assured that we will know how to strengthen this axis further to benefit Greater Germany and the southeast that is bound to it (Germany) in friendship."

Expelled By Exchange

NEW YORK, Dec. 30 — (AP). — The New York Stock Exchange today expelled from membership J. A. Sisto, general partner in J. A. Sisto & Co., for improper business conduct.

Sisto in 1932 was prominently involved by Samuel Seabury in the removal charges against former Mayor James J. Walker in connection with an alleged gift to Walker by Sisto of bonds worth more than $26,000.

To-day's expulsion was the first since that of Richard Whitney, former president of the exchange, now serving a sentence in Sing Sing prison. Whitney was expelled last spring.

"Bouncing" Bertha

Bertha Sybert, 9, appeared as her own sweet self, unbothered by 'spirits,' when this photograph was taken in her home at St. Charles, Va. No sooner does her head touch a pillow, however, than do the reputed "spirits" get to work, and for some unknwn reason keep Bertha "bouncing" around in her bed the long night through. Her father believes his daughter bewitched as do the townsfolk, and especially two 190-pound farmers, who claim that the "spirit" bounced them right off Bertha's bed.

The gargoyles, weighing three tons each, have weathered so much Property Commissioner Graham Blant considers them unsafe in their present shape. HITLER TO BOOST ARMY IN '39

Will Greet 1939 On Her First Birthday

Dorothy Irma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Watkins, 586 Water Street, will receive birthday greetings on New Year's Day. Dorothy was Peterborough's first 1938 baby, being born early on New Year's morning.

EDITORIAL

WHEN NEXT we take up the day's work it will be in the year 1939. New Year we call it and there will be plenty of reminders. The little pad on the desk will be fattened by 365 new days; the calendars on the walls of our homes will tell us the same thing. Likely we will blunder a few times until we become accustomed to writing it 1939.

And because it is a New Year we will want to do something with it. When we get a new car or a new suit of clothes we treat them better than the old ones—for a while at least. We like to feel at the start of a New Year we are headed in the right direction. If we have stumbled individually or collectively in 1938 we want to quit stumbling in 1939.

For the moment we are not considering or discussing the resolutions which indivduals may make at the start of this New Year. There is a national outlook which will be waiting for us when we have the new book of 1939 placed before us. This paper believes the year 1938 was given over too much to listening to dictators, and it frankly confesses it has played its own part in bringing before the people many times all that Mussolini and Hitler and Stalin were saying and threatening.

We are not presuming too much when we say that many of our people have been brought to the point where they have concluded that everything is being done by Hitler and Mussolini and Stalin, and that the democratic countries of the world have been standing still and doing nothing at all.

Perhaps we have come to regard these men as great and look upon them as finger-posts to the way out of difficulty. They have made us shiver at times and we may have come to the conclusion that they are so great that the rotten policy of might is right has been so thoroughly planted that it can never be uprooted.

* * * * * *

WE MIGHT as well face out in 1939 and look that situation right square in the eye. And we can star on the safe ground that while they may goose-step in Germany because they have to; salute, cheer and obey in Italy because they are forced to, and become and remain subservient in Russia because the power to protest has been taken away—democracy and its ways have not perished from the earth—nor will they.

If it is a fair question—and we think it is—what have you done during the 1938 in the interests of democracy? What has been your own contribution to the cause of peace? How much have these priceless possessions cost you? Or has your contribution consisted only of a pious expression of opinion or the utterance of a devout wish?

Let us get our national head firmly set. Realize that the British Empire and the British people have a mission and a reason for existing. Recognize, too, that on the North American continent there is a great nation to the south of us which has not bowed the knee to the dictator and whose people cherish the same traditions and love of freedom which is essentially our own.

* * * * * *

BUT THAT is not sufficient. If democracy is not doing what we think it should then our plain duty is to make it give us the results we most desire. We must make our provincial and federal governments understand that they must trim their financial sails.

The Examiner believes the financing of the city of Peterborough is done on a better system and a firmer basis than that of the Province of Ontario or the Dominion of Canada. Smile if you wish because that is admittedly a large claim. But put it to the test. Our city is getting rid of its debenture debt, and lowering the rate and amount of taxation. The larger governments are not doing any such thing.

It may be claimed that provincial and federal governments have been handicapped by the amount they have had to spend on relief, but the city of Peterborough has had to meet its share of these same relief costs, and year after year it has been paying them in cash out of the receipts for the current year. We have had a load to carry

U-Boat Fleet To Stir Naval Race

Parity With Britain In Submarines Latest German Aim

By Witt Hancock
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Dec. 31.—(AP).—Germany's surprise plans for a bigger navy to complement her powerful air force and army threatened today to intensify Europe's gigantic rearmament race.

As a parting shot to the year which brought him so many triumphs, Chancellor Hitler notified London that Germany intended to more than double her submarine strength, bringing it to parity with Great Britain's.

Germany was understood to be laying plans to begin mass production of a revolutionary type of "minnow" submarine. She also will build two new 10,000 ton cruisers.

This unexpected turn in the European picture may have an important effect upon Prime Minister Chamberlain's talks Jan. 11-14 with Premier Mussolini in Rome.

Under the Anglo-German naval treaty, Germany agreed to restrict herself to 35 per cent of British tonnage in every category but submarines. She agreed to limit her U-boat strength to 45 per cent of Britain's. But it was further agreed that Germany had the right, if she deemed it necessary, to build up to the full British submarine tonnage after "friendly discussions" between the two countries.

Fears Russia?

Britain has been trying, apparently in vain, to persuade Germany there is no imperative need for her to build a vast submarine fleet, while Berlin has held out "the Soviet threat" as justification.

Germany was expected to go ahead with the submarine building, but at the same time she was understood to be anxious not to shatter her naval treaty with Britain.

She would be in a hopeless position in an attempt to overtake Britain in capital ships because of her lack of foreign currency and raw materials.

Since Great Britain is dependent upon imports for food, the Admiralty is concerned about the effect of a big German U-boat fleet upon her merchant shipping in case of war. Since the Great War Britain has made several unsuccessful attempts to abolish the use of submarines by international agreement.

Speedboat Ace Tries Water Landing On Airport Field

Tulsa, Okla., Dec. 31 (AP)

THEY WERE JOSHING Gar Wood, the noted speedboat racer, at the airport today for trying to make a water landing on the landlocked municipal field. Gar said well, anyway, he got away with it. The plane wasn't hurt a bit.

Late yesterday Wood and his son, Gar, Jr., a student at the University of Tulsa, were flying around in the expensive amphibian Wood had flown here from Detroit. When they started to land neither remembered to lower the wheels.

The ship came in smoothly, skidded on the runway and stopped with only damage a scratched hull.

"Dad, I thought that was a kind of a peculiar landing," said young Wood as they clambered out.

Rome Gags Press Campaign Against France

ROME, Dec. 31—(AP).—A bitter anti-French campaign waged by the Fascist press for the past month halted abruptly today.

Morning papers limited themselves chiefly to asserting that the French request that Prime Minister Chamberlain on his Rome visit refrain from attempting mediation of Italian claims against France was received badly in London.

Diplomatic quarters regard the moderated tone in Rome as indicative of a desire to win greater British sympathy for Italy's "natural aspirations" as the time of Mr. Chamberlain's visit Jan. 11 draws near.

There were reports in these quarters that Italy feels Mr. Chamberlain already is favorably disposed toward some concession to her.

Some diplomats expressed the belief Premier Mussolini might agree to withdrawal of the remainder of his troops from Spain if France, in return, agrees to some of his demands in North Africa.

The newspaper Il Piccolo, however, denied reports of bargaining on the question of Italian troops in Spain and described them as "a left handed blow" attempting to sabotage Mr. Chamberlain's visit.

Squirrels Silence Radio

STRATFORD, Ont., Dec. 31.—(CP).—George Ferguson turned on his radio the other day, but nary a sound issued from it. He looked in the back, and found 29 dog biscuits. Some squirrels living in the house, put them there.

Shaving Service

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 31. — (AP). — A new use for Christmas trees has been found here. At the Grand Central Station's electrically lighted Yule tree, a man about 35 stopped, unscrewed a red bulb, plugged in an electric razor and nonchalantly shaved himself.

Obligations And Friendship Solid For Italy Nazi Chieftain States

Press Calls On United States To Shake Off Stranglehold Of The Jews; Hint Desire For 4 Million Bales U.S. Cotton

BERLIN, Dec. 31 (AP).—German newspapers lashed at the United States government today as Chancellor Hitler set Nazidom on its "road of destiny" for 1939 with the admonition that the army must be strengthened.

World Jewry is the American farmers' "throat cutter" and the United States Secretary of the Interior, Harold Ickes, their "general agent," newspapers declared, assailing the "Roosevelt regime."

The story of Germany's protest against Mr. Ickes' Cleveland speech of December 18 and the State Department's rejection December 21 was splashed on almost all front pages under such headlines as "sharpest German protest against ile campaign of United States Minister Ickes."

A communique issued yesterday by the official news agency, warning there was no hope of improving German-American relations as long as the State Department defended Mr. Ickes, gave the German public its first knowledge of the Ickes incident.

Hitler's hopes for 1939 were expressed in a New Year's message bearing the wish "that we may succeed in contributing to general appeasement of the world." Hitler reaffirmed continuance of the Rome-Berlin axis and referred to 1938, when Austria and Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland were added to the Reich, as "the year of the richest harvest in our history."

"Germany's course has been destined and fixed," he said of foreign affairs, "the obligations which arise out of our friendship for Fascist Italy are clear and unbreakable."

A Stronger Army.

Tasks he set for Germany in the coming year included strengthening of the army, continued Nazi education of the people, and execution of the four-year plan for economic self-sufficiency.

The Nazi press asserted the United States' political setback at the Lima Conference and "the Jewish stranglehold" were responsible for anti-German feeling in the United States.

Newspapers appealed to the American people to "rid their government of destructive Jewish influence."

The Lokalanzeiger said straining of diplomatic relations to a high pitch naturally has resulted in severe repercussions in trade relations. It emphasized the Reich's capacity to absorb 4,000,000 bales of cotton annually from the United States.

In his New Year's message Hitler added that "my special thanks go to the hundreds of thousands who have surrounded the west front of the Reich wit hthat wall of armor and concrete which we know no Power in the world will ever break through."

China shipped more than 2,000,000 pounds of bristles to America in 1938.

Nine Contests In County New Year's Day

Municipal elections for 1939 coincide for urban and rural voters throughout the province on Monday, an occurrence which befalls in civic affairs when the Yuletide holidays swing to the end of the week.

In Peterborough county the ratepayers of six townships will keep the incidental cost of an election, printing and clerical expenses, in their community pockets, and in the three villages and six townships the taxpayers are confronted with the responsibility of selecting more or less new administrations.

Chief interest in the western section of the county probably centres on Smith township and the village of Lakefield; in the east public interest is fixed on Belmont-Methuen and the village of Norwood; and in the north Burleigh-Anstruther is getting considerable attention with only council issues in Otonabee, Galway-Cavendish and Harvey where part of the annual electoral job has already been done by acclamation.

Lakefield and Smith.

In Smith the names of Allen B. Mann and George Mullen, a former reeve, are bracketed together again on the baloits for the presiding position in the township council; Deputy-reeve Harry Fowler, Sr., and Wilbert A. Rosborough are the contestants for the Deputy-reeveship; and three councillors are to be elected from the following five candidates: W. J. Telford, Milton Clark, Gilbert McIlmoyle, Gordon Hancock and E. A. Scott.

Reeve C. S. Tanner is being opposed in Lakefield by Gordon Scriver, and six of the citizens of the village have offered their services as councillors, four to be elected. They are: W. J. Hendren, D. B. Millar, C. R. Armstrong, G. A. Charlton, George Graham and Earl Edwards.

Burleigh-Anstruther.

The retirement of Reeve Roy Brown in Burleigh-Anstruther has brought three aspirants into the field of the reeveship, Norman Lean, a former reeve about twelve or thirteen years ago, Herbert Tucker, a veteran member of the township council, and Norman Bolton. The candidates for the four council seats are Vernal Windsor who was reeve some years ago, Archie Wilson, Joseph Church, Louis Blackwell and William Staples.

In Harvey Reeve Wallace Shearer was re-elected by acclamation, but there is a contest for the four other places in the council, with the following men seeking service: Arthur Haines, Gale Elliott, C. Ire-

Weather Moderating Across The West

WINNIPEG, Dec. 31 — (C.P.). — Good news for Western New Year's celebrants—the weather may be milder after a week of stormy blasts from the Arctic.

Sharp moderation in record sub-zero temperatures was felt by the bundled populace across the Prairies last night and the forecast promised milder conditions for the start of 1939.

More snow was forecast, but with the prediction came the glad tidings of moderating temperatures in Manitoba and "milder" for Saskatchewan and Alberta.

From the sub-zero 30's and 40's of earlier in the week, the mercury climbed to near zero in Saskatchewan and Alberta yesterday.

It wasn't so mild in Manitoba, but a switch in the wind from the frigid north to the south promised early relief. It was 12 below in Winnipeg last night compared with a minus 28 earlier in the day.

Greece expects to produce 6,975,000 gallons of olives in the 1938-39 season.

Miners Entombed

John Holubec, ABOVE, and Vit Vlaisagavitch were trapped 2,700 feet below the surface of the Lake Shore Gold mine by a rock fall. Rescuers have toiled three days and nights to reach the entombed men without success. Little hope is held that they are still living.

Durham's Turn For Warden Of Counties

The five outstanding prospective candidates for the wardenship of the council of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham next year have all been re-elected by acclamation in their respective municipalities, and are ready to line up to the wire when the January sessions of the council get under way at their inaugural meeting.

The 1939 Warden will be one of the representatives from Durham county, the honors alternating yearly with Northumberland. From this outlook over the neighboring county's municipal scene it seems that the candidate will be Reeve J. C. Cummiskey of Manvers; Reeve T. A. Reid of Clarke; Reeve Creighton Devitt of Cartwright; Reeve Chas. M. Carruthers of Darlington and Reeve G. A. Edmonstone of Bowmanville.

Of those five Mr. Edmonstone carries handicap of representing the town of Bowmanville whose reeve in 1937, now Mayor Reg. O. Jones, was elected Warden, and if his successor can click two years later it will be an accomplishment probably deserving place in the records of the united counties. Reeve Edmonstone is one of the most active members of the counties council, has all the necessary qualifications in experience, assumes a big share of the work, but for all that he looks like a long shot.

Three of Strongest

Reeves Devitt, Reid and Cummiskey are going to be up in the front of the race until the last jump to the wire when the decision has to be made.

Reeve Chris Cummiskey of Manvers is the nearest neighbor to Peterborough and has quite a number of friends here. He was one of the ablest members of this year's council, has accepted all the responsibility that came his way with a high level of efficiency as was shown by the county council's compliments to him as chairman of the

Steal Commandments

Bulb Kills a Cow

COTATI, Calif., Dec. 31—(AP). —Unused to the marvels of the modern day, one of Peter Proskoriakoff's Jersey cows tried to swallow the attractive looking electric light bulb which dangled from an extension cord. The barn floor was wet. Bossy was electrocuted. But it was not "lights out." The bulb was still alight in her mouth when Proskoriakoff found her.

States Defies Jap Bar Closing China

Demands 'Open Door' Principle Stay, In Strong Language

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 — (AP). —The United States told Japan firmly to-day that it could not recognize any "new order" abrogating the principle of the "open door" in China.

The United States' position was set forth, State Department officials said, in a note Ambassador Joseph Grew delivered to the Tokyo government this morning.

While the text of the note was not made public immediately, correspondents were given to understand it carried a tone of finality, and was couched in strong terms.

It replied to a note from the Japanese Government on November 18 maintaining the principles of the past did not apply to the present situation in China and that a "new order" had arisen in Eastern Asia.

State Secretary Cordell Hull had protested earlier that Japan was violating American rights in China by instituting monopolies, trade restrictions, currency changes, and tariff alterations.

After delivery of Japan's November 18 note, Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita gave the British and American Ambassadors a further oral exposition of Japan's attitude toward foreign economic rights in China.

"You Will Be Permitted."

He was reported to have told them frankly that the principle of the open door in China had vanished and to have used the language, "Hereafter, you will be permitted.. ..You will not be permitted, etc." in discusing what trade other countries would be allowed to carry on with China.

The United States' new note was understood to have recalled Japan's obligations under the Nine-Power Treaty of 1922 which guaranteed the open door, or equal economic rights for all, in China. It also contended that obligations of the treaty could not be renounced unilaterally, that is by one nation signing it; that if it was to be changed, it must be done by international agreement.

The United States thus followed a position which paralleled that it took throughout Japan's 1932 conquest of Manchoukuo and establishment of the present regime there which has never been recognized by the United States.

Quebec Plans To Colonize

QUEBEC, Dec. 31.—(CP)—After more than a year's careful preparation, the Quebec government is ready to give colonization an important role in the province's economic setup.

The new enterprise may mean the end of colorful days when settlers fought the wilderness almost barehanded to establish homes, but if successful it will introduce a new factor in Quebec's progress. Firmly convinced the province will not prosper if agriculture, its basic industry, does not, the government since 1936 when it came to power has boosted farming. The transformed colonization scheme is intended to carry out that policy.

Through colonization farming will be extended to rich but undeveloped Quebec districts and as a result take on greater strength, according to officials in charge of the revised plan. Unsuccessful farmers in Quebec's old parishes will have an opportunity to make a fresh start and city folk, discouraged by their struggle to make a living in thickly-populated centres, will be taught to plough.

Since the start of the project, no settlers' families have been "dropped into the wilds alone to scrape a living as best they can," the directors assert. Already, more than 20,000

New Year Party Costs Ease

(By the Canadian Press.)

Canada, with the rest of the world, rings out the old today and rings in the new. With customary enthusiasm Canadians from coast to coast will bid farewell to 1938 and welcome to 1939.

With a year of toil behind them, celebrants welcoming the New Year will be able to do it at a cost slightly more reasonable than a year ago. Prices have been reduced a little but the variety still is as great.

Toronto has an innovation in New Year's parties with a roller-skating festivity that costs but 25 cents a person. And the top price in Canada for dancing has been set at $7.50 per person, lower than a year ago when prices were $1 or $2 higher.

With New Year's Day falling on a Sunday, Saturday night closing restrictions in many parts of the country have been lifted, and celebrations in hotels and night clubs will continue into the dawn. But in Ontario, where closing regulations are being enforced strictly, dancing in public places will have to be halted at midnight. Dinner and a floor show, however, is permitted afterward in Toronto.

In Quebec Province the 2 a.m. closing for liquor sales is under unofficial suspension, according to night club operators.

Winnipeg and other Western Canadian centres are lifting restrictions slightly and celebrants on the Prairies and Pacific coast are expected to outnumber those of a year ago. Winnipeg hotels are charging $7 a couple for dancing and night clubs $4.

There will be special watchnight services in many churches across the country with the customary New Year's Day masses in Catholic churches.

Sleeps On $1,609,840

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 31.—(AP)—Here's something to dream about. City Solicitor Paul Smith received, too late to deposit in the bank, a cheque covering money provided by a city water improvement bond issue. Smith took it home and cached it under his pillow for the night. The amoul, $1,609,840.

Better Business For Canada In 1939 Says Optimistic Dunning

OTTAWA, Dec. 31.—(CP)—Optimistic forecasts of better Canadian business conditions in 1939 was made here by Finance Minister Dunning in a New Year's message.

Mr. Dunning said in his message made public last night, that barring foreign political aggravations an improvement in business activity, trade and employment may be expected in 1939 which will make it the best year since the depression began.

Mr. Dunning said that in the year just ending the Canadian economy suffered from the sharp recession in the United States, the continuing influence on trade and traffic of the 1937 crop failure and the political friction and wars in Europe and the Far East.

"Fortunately, the closing months of 1938 witnessed a substantial improvement in business conditions in the United States and the continuance and possible acceleration of this improvement appears to be assured for the immediate future at least," he stated.

This year's wheat crop in Western Canada was double the previous year but prices were low. The larger crop has increased the purchasing power of Western Canada and "will continue to exert a stimulating influence on several features of our economic life."

The finance minister noted with satisfaction that at December 22 Dominion Revenues were only $2,500,000 below the figure for the corresponding period a year ago. The Canadian National Railways deficit, however, would be larger and a further loss would arise from the government's wheat board operations.

Lewis Only 'Just Fair' Say Critics In Pro Actor Debut

Columbus, O., Dec. 31 (AP)

THE THEATRE CLAN agreed today that Sinclair Lewis might become in time a good actor, but none would say he was more than fair in his professional debut last night.

Winner of Nobel and Pulitzer awards in literature, the author appeared in his own play, "Angela is Twenty-two."

The audience called the cast back 10 times after the final curtain.

Lewis stepped forward and spoke of a "grand renaissance" in the American theatre.

"A novelist works in loneliness," he said. "An actor works with such charming people as these, I have contributed my small bit, as well as ability will allow."

Wanted The Doctor

ENOLA, Pa., Dec. 31.—(AP). — Volunteer firemen rushed from their jobs to hop aboard a fire truck. Two miles out in the country, the truck skidded to a halt at a rural dwelling. A housewife met the volunteers as they lugged hose and fire extinguishers toward the building. "Oh, I'm so sorry," she said. "I meant to call the doctor."
